THE MONASTRIES of Cynabam, or Cynabam Abbey

IN THE COUNTY OF

OXFORDSHIRE

Anglican Monasticon

The history of the Monasticon is a subject of great interest to the student of English history. It is a subject which has been treated in many different ways, and the result has been a confusion of facts and opinions. The present work is an attempt to give a clear and concise account of the subject, and to show the progress of the Monasticon from its origin to the present time.

Eynsham, or Egnesham Abbey,

OXFORDSHIRE.

THE history of the destroyed monastery of Stow, or Mariestow, in Lincolnshire, is so closely connected with the history of Eynsham abbey, that it is impossible to separate one from the other. Eynsham was first annexed to Stow; then Stow to Eynsham, in which it finally merged.

was built and endowed by Aethelmare, or Ailmer, earl of Cornwall and Devonshire, before A. D. 1005. King Æthelred's confirmation Charter, dated in the year just mentioned, speaks of the church, at its first foundation, as dedicated to St. Saviour and All Saints.^a A Charter of King Henry the First calls it the church of Christ and the Virgin Mary.^b Bishop Tanner, possibly alluding to a later consecration, states it to have been dedicated to the blessed Virgin Mary, St. Benedict, and All Saints.^c Bishop Kennett says to St. Mary and St. Eadburgh.^d Æthelred's Charter will be found in the Appendix of Instruments. It recites the different possessions with which the monastery stood at that time endowed, together with the boundaries of the respective lands. These consisted of thirty manses at Egnesham, five manses at Sceaptun, the villis of Scipford and Micclantun, five manses at Burtun, three at Maranacive, two manses at Beonetlege, ten at Erdintone, twenty manses at Aescaeron, and land at Bictun and Rameslege.

The church of Eynsham appears once only in the Domesday Survey, as holding in capite, among the lands entered in Gloucestershire:

xiiii. hidæ. In dominio sunt v. car. et xx. villani et vii. bord. cum x. car. Ibi viii. servi et ii. ancille, et xxiiii. mensuræ salis de Wich. Valet et valet x. lib. Eadem æcclesia tenuit tempore regis Edwardi."^e

Other lands belonging to it are entered among the estates of the see of Lincoln,^f to which the Monastery appears to have been in a great degree subordinate. These entries, as well as others concerning Stow monastery, will hereafter be given at length in the account of the see.

STOW, MARIESTOW, or SANCTÆ MARIE LOCUS, was first a church, or minster, for secular priests, built, to the honour of the blessed Virgin Mary, by Eadnoth bishop of Dorchester; as Bishop Tanner supposes, by the second bishop of that name, about the year 1040: Leofric earl of Mercia, and his lady, the celebrated Godiva, enriching it very much by their benefactions.^g Henry of Huntingdon calls it Stow sub promontorio Lincolnice,^h by which, says Bishop Tanner, one would guess that this place was under Lincoln hill; but it is pretty evident from Pet. Blesensis Contin. Ingulfi, p. 127, that it was in the bishop's manor near the Trent side. Remigius, who translated the episcopal see of Dorchester to Lincoln, appears, soon after the Conquest, to have changed the religious here to Benedictine monks; according to Ingulphus, before the year 1076;ⁱ placing them under the government of an abbat of the name of COLUMBANUS,^k and procuring for them, of King William Rufus, the annexation of the abbey of Eynsham and its revenues.^l This last augmentation of the property of Stow monastery appears to have taken place in 1091.^m

From this time to the year 1109 the monastery of EYNESHAM, in all probability, lay desolate. In that year, Robert Bloet, bishop of Lincoln, obtained a Charter of King Henry the First for its restoration; when a fresh endowment took place,ⁿ and the abbat and monks were removed hither from Stowe. The estates of Stowe and less died the following day, and his bowels were reposit in the monastery of Eyvesham (I suppose Egnesham), to which he had been a restorer and benefactor." Jo. Brompt. p. 987.

Wood, in his Annals, under the year 1296, says that "in the century foregoing, namely, about the year 1130," Alexander bishop of Lincoln granted that in the time of Pentecost certain processions and other solemnities should be performed at the church of Eynsham abbey instead of the mother church of Lincoln, the latter being so remote that the people of Oxfordshire could not reach it. "Which grant," he adds, "being observed many years, the usual revellings that are to this day at Einsham in Pentecost week took their original." See Gutch's edition of Wood's Annals, vol. i. p. 347. Compare also several Instruments and Entries in the Chartulary of Eynsham, now in Christ-Church Archives, num. 26, foll. xiii. xiv. xxiii.

^l V. The bowels of Remigius bishop of Lincoln. See Twysd. Script. X. Knyghton, r. Antiq. under the year 1123, says the in who died that year. "At Christmas stock, where, three days after Epiphany, of Lincoln, at a distance from all other his horse, and being carried home speech-

Newark were at this time retained for and annexed to the see of Lincoln; the bishop bestowing Charlebury in Oxfordshire and some other lands upon Eynsham in exchange. King Henry's Charter finishes, "Hæc autem Abbatia tota est in manu et potestate Lincolnensis episcopi constituendi abbatem canonicè, assensu et consilio regis."

Sir William Dugdale, in the head to some extracts from two or three of our historians, calls Stow "CELLA de Eynesham;"^a in which he is followed by Bishop Kennett in his Parochial Antiquities.^b No subordinate institution, however, after the reinstatement of Eynsham, remained at Stow; even the manor, as has been already noticed, was taken away, and nothing but the tithe of wax from the altar of the church of Stow retained.^c

The benefactions to Eynsham abbey through the subsequent periods of its history were extremely numerous, as will be seen from the Charters given in the Appendix of Instruments, as well as from the titles of other Charters contained in the abstracts of the Registers at Christ Church Oxford.

In 1118, David, brother of Alexander king of Scotland, and of Maud queen of England, having married Maud eldest daughter of Earl Waltheof, the relict of Simon earl of Huntingdon and Northampton, held, in her right, the manors of Pidington and Merton, in Oxfordshire; in the latter of which he gave the advowson of the church to the abbat and monks of Eynsham.^d

In 1150 the church of Combe, in Oxfordshire, was given to the monks by the Empress Maud.^e

Henry the Second and Henry the Third granted to the monastery various Charters.^g Two or three other Charters were also granted by King Edward the Second.

ABBATS OF EYNESHAM.

NICHOLAS occurs A. D. 1115.ⁱ

WILLIAM occurs abbat in 1138.^k

GODFREY occurs in the time of King Stephen;^m and also in the reign of Henry the Second, A. D. 1180.

ROBERT, who had been prior of Dore, in Herefordshire, occurs A. D. 1197. Willis and Stevens say he occurs in 1205, and was about that time succeeded by

EUSTACHIUS.ⁿ

In 1212 we find the custody of the abbey granted by the king to Roger de Nevil:^o soon after which, in all probability,

ADAM, the second of the name, became abbat. He occurs in the larger of the Christ Church Registers in the 16th of John, and in the 3d and 9th years of Henry the Third.^p

NICHOLAS occurs abbat in 1234, 19 Hen. III.^q He probably succeeded about two years before.

JOHN DE DOVER, who had been prior of the monastery, was elected abbat upon Nicholas's resignation in 1238.^r

ALEXANDER DE BRACKELE was admitted abbat on the 10th of the kalends of June, 1264.^t

JOHN DE OXON, or OXFORD, succeeded, upon Brackele's death, 7 id. April, 1268.^u Willis says he died in 1281.^x The Lincoln Registers notice his resignation only.^y

THOMAS DE WELL was the next abbat. He occurs in 1281, and again in 1293.^z Upon his death,

ADAM DE LAUMBOURN was admitted abbat on the 11th kal. of July, 1307.^a

JOHN DE CHILTENHAM was elected abbat upon Adam's death, on the 7th of the ides of January, 1316.^b Upon his cession^c

JOHN DE BROUGHTON was elected April 6th, 1330,^d who also resigned: when

NICHOLAS DE UPTON was admitted abbat on the 16th of the kalends of November, 1338.^e He was removed from the rule of his monastery by the bishop of Lincoln in 1344, who, on the 20th of May in that year, appointed

WILLIAM DE SAUNFORD to be abbat.^f

NICHOLAS DE UPTON was again admitted abbat on the 15th of the kalends of June, 1349.^g

GEFFREY DE LAMBURN occurs abbat in 1354.^h Upon his death,

THOMAS BRADYNGSTOCK was elected abbat. He was confirmed in the office Oct. 3d, 1388.ⁱ

THOMAS OXENFORD was confirmed abbat Feb. 8th, 1431.^k To whom, Willis says, succeeded

JOHN EVERINGTON.^l On the Patent Roll of the 26th of Henry VI. however, A. D. 1447,

JOHN QUENYNGTON occurs abbat on the 26th of November; who may possibly be the same person.

ROBERT FARYNGDON was made abbat in the 8th year of Edward the Fourth.^m

WILLIAM WALWYN received the benediction as abbat from the bishop Oct. 15th, 1469.ⁿ He was succeeded, according to Willis, about 1498, by

MILES SALLEY; who being preferred, A. D. 1500, to the see of Landaff, held this abbey in commendam till the time of his death, which happened A. D. 1516. The rough draft of a letter from Cardinal Wolsey to the bishop of Lincoln, as patron of the monastery, immediately upon Bishop Salley's death, is still preserved among the Cottonian manuscripts in the British Museum,^o recommending for the abbacy his own and the bishop of Lincoln's common friend

THOMAS CHAUNDELER, D. D., who was appointed Feb. 21st, and confirmed March 20th, 1516.^p He had been originally a monk of Christ Church Canterbury, and was afterwards prior of the cell of Wymondham in Norfolk, subordinate to St. Albans, where Wolsey held the abbacy in commendam. Willis, in the List of Principals of Religious Houses, prefixed to the folio editions of Bishop Tanner's Notitia Monastica, says that Dr. Chaundeler died Oct. 16th, 1516; evidently giving the date of Bishop Salley's death.

HENRY REDDING is stated, by the same authority, to have been the next abbat, but without date.

^c See Numm. LIV. LV. Stevens, in his Collections for a Continuation of Dugdale, vol. i. p. 403, notices the disasters attending certain persons who possessed this monastery after the Dissolution, from Sir Henry Spelman's History of Sacrilege, edit. 1668, p. 128.

"Lodwick Grevil, owner of Miclein, a manor belonging to Ensham abby in Oxfordshire, had two sons, whereof Edward, the younger, shooting a piece, by chance slew his elder brother, and thereby succeeded in the inheritance. Lodwick himself, in the . . . year of Elizabeth, standing mute upon his arraignment for poisoning of whose Will he had counterfeited, was press'd to death. Edward, afterwards knighted, mortgaged the abbey to Fisher, a skinner of London, for a small sum, and growing further in with him by borrowing, and Use upon Use, it came at length by forfeiture and entanglement to be Fisher's absolutely; and Sir Edward Grevil having wasted his whole patrimony, and sold some part thereof in Warwickshire, to the lord treasurer Cranfeild, became bailiff to the lord treasurer of the same land. Old Fisher put over the abbey to his son Sir Edward Fisher, who with extreme suits, bribery, &c. so consum'd his estate, that he was judged to be eleven thousand or twelve thousand pounds in debt, and driven to sell his great lease of Wrongey, Blackbury, and Grandcourts in Norfolk, and yet liveth in fear of bailiffs, &c. 12 Octob. 1644. Ex relatione Joh. Wrenham, partim Rob. Mordant mil.

"Sir Edward Grevil had a son, that breaking his leg over a stile, died; his daughters are one married to Sir Arthur Ingram, to whom he sold the reversion of his chief seat Milcote, &c. and hath an hundred pounds per annum during his life and the house."

This passage appears to have been one of the additions made to Sir Henry Spelman's History of Sacrilege by Mr. Jeremy Stephens, to whom Sir Henry had consigned his papers. The tract had been written by Sir Henry Spelman in 1632: and he died in 1641, three years before the occurrence of Sir Edward Fisher's distress.

^d See Jones's Index to the Records in the office of the lord treasurer's remembrancer, Orig. 37 Hen. VIII. p. v. rot. 118. The writer of the account of Oxfordshire, in the work entitled The Beauties of England and Wales, says that the abbey-site, after passing through a younger branch of the family, came to a nephew, Sir Edw. Stanley, K. B.

Newark were at this time retained for and annexed to the see of Lincoln; the bishop bestowing Charlebury in Oxfordshire and some other lands upon Eynsham in exchange. King Henry's Charter finishes, "Hæc autem Abbatia tota est in manu et potestate Lincolnensis episcopi constituendi abbatem canonicè, assensu et consilio regis."

Sir William Dugdale, in the head to some extracts from two or three of our historians, calls Stow "CELLA de Eynesham;"^a in which he is followed by Bishop Kennett in his Parochial Antiquities.^b No subordinate institution, however, after the reinstatement of Eynsham, remained at Stow; even the manor, as has been already noticed, was taken away, and nothing but the tithe of wax from the altar of the church of Stow retained.^c

The benefactions to Eynsham abbey through the subsequent periods of its history were extremely numerous, as will be seen from the Charters given in the Appendix of Instruments, as well as from the titles of other Charters contained in the abstracts of the Registers at Christ Church Oxford.

In 1118, David, brother of Alexander king of Scotland, and of Maud queen of England, having married Maud eldest daughter of Earl Waltheof, the relict of Simon earl of Huntingdon and Northampton, held, in her right, the manors of Pidington and Merton, in Oxfordshire; in the latter of which he gave the advowson of the church to the abbat and monks of Eynsham.^d

Stephen granted them a market at Eynsham, and was otherwise a benefactor.^f

Henry the Second and Henry the Third granted to the monastery various Charters.^g Two or three other Charters were also granted by King Edward the Second.

ABBATS of EYNESHAM.

GODFREY occurs in the time of King Stephen;^m and also in the reign of Henry the Second, A. D. 1180.

ROBERT, who had been prior of Dore, in Herefordshire, occurs A. D. 1197. Willis and Stevens say he occurs in 1205, and was about that time succeeded by

EUSTACHIUS.ⁿ

In 1212 we find the custody of the abbey granted by the king to Roger de Nevil:^o soon after which, in all probability,

ADAM, the second of the name, became abbat. He occurs in the larger of the Christ Church Registers in the 16th of John, and in the 3d and 9th years of Henry the Third.^p

NICHOLAS occurs abbat in 1234, 19 Hen. III.^q He probably succeeded about two years before.

JOHN DE DOVER, who had been prior of the monastery, was elected abbat upon Nicholas's resignation in 1238.^r

GILBERT DE GLOVERN, monk and cellarer of Eynsham, (whom Willis calls GILBERT cellerar of Gloucester) was elected abbat in 1240.^s Upon his death,

ALEXANDER DE BRACKELE was admitted abbat on the 10th of the kalends of June, 1264.^t

JOHN DE OXON, or OXFORD, succeeded, upon Brackele's death, 7 id. April, 1268.^u Willis says he died in 1281.^v The Lincoln Registers notice his resignation only.^w

THOMAS DE WELL was the next abbat. He occurs in 1281, and again in 1293.^x Upon his death,

ADAM DE LAUMBOURN was admitted abbat on the 11th kal. of July, 1307.^y

JOHN DE CHILTENHAM was elected abbat upon Adam's death, on the 7th of the ides of January, 1316.^z Upon his cession^a

JOHN DE BROUGHTON was elected April 6th, 1330,^d who also resigned: when

NICHOLAS DE UPTON was admitted abbat on the 16th of the kalends of November, 1338.^e He was removed from the rule of his monastery by the bishop of Lincoln in 1344, who, on the 20th of May in that year, appointed

WILLIAM DE SAUNFORD to be abbat.^f

NICHOLAS DE UPTON was again admitted abbat on the 15th of the kalends of June, 1349.^g

GEFFREY DE LAMBURN occurs abbat in 1354.^h Upon his death,

THOMAS BRADYNGSTOCK was elected abbat. He was confirmed in the office Oct. 3d, 1388.ⁱ

THOMAS OXENFORD was confirmed abbat Feb. 8th, 1431.^k To whom, Willis says, succeeded

JOHN EVERINGTON.^l On the Patent Roll of the 26th of Henry VI. however, A. D. 1447,

JOHN QUENYNGTON occurs abbat on the 26th of November; who may possibly be the same person.

ROBERT FARYNGDON was made abbat in the 8th year of Edward the Fourth.^m

WILLIAM WALWYN received the benediction as abbat from the bishop Oct. 15th, 1469.ⁿ He was succeeded, according to Willis, about 1498, by

MILES SALLEY; who being preferred, A. D. 1500, to the see of Landaff, held this abbey in commendam till the time of his death, which happened A. D. 1516. The rough draft of a letter from Cardinal Wolsey to the bishop of Lincoln, as patron of the monastery, immediately upon Bishop Salley's death, is still preserved among the Cottonian manuscripts in the British Museum,^o recommending for the abbacy his own and the bishop of Lincoln's common friend

THOMAS CHAUNDELER, D. D., who was appointed Feb. 21st, and confirmed March 20th, 1516.^p He had been originally a monk of Christ Church Canterbury, and was afterwards prior of the cell of Wymondham in Norfolk, subordinate to St. Albans, where Wolsey held the abbacy in commendam. Willis, in the List of Principals of Religious Houses, prefixed to the folio editions of Bishop Tanner's Notitia Monastica, says that Dr. Chaundeler died Oct. 16th, 1516; evidently giving the date of Bishop Salley's death.

HENRY REDDING is stated, by the same authority, to have been the next abbat, but without date.

"Lodwick Grevil, owner of Micletin, a manor belonging to Ensham abby in Oxfordshire, had two sons, whereof Edward, the younger, shooting a piece, by chance slew his elder brother, and thereby succeeded in the inheritance. Lodwick himself, in the . . . year of Elizabeth, standing mute upon his arraignment for poisoning of . . . whose Will he had counterfeited, was press'd to death. Edward, afterwards knighted, mortgaged the abbey to . . . Fisher, a skinner of London, for a small sum, and growing further in with him by borrowing, and Use upon Use, it came at length by forfeiture and entanglement to be Fisher's absolutely; and Sir Edward Grevil having wasted his whole patrimony, and sold some part thereof in Warwickshire, to the lord treasurer Cranfeild, became bailiff to the lord treasurer of the same land. Old Fisher put over the abbey to his son Sir Edward Fisher, who with extreme suits, bribery, &c. so consum'd his estate, that he was judged to be eleven thousand or twelve thousand pounds in debt, and driven to sell his great lease of Wrongey, Blackbury, and Grandcourts in Norfolk, and yet liveth in fear of bailiffs, &c. 12 Octob. 1644. Ex relatione Joh. Wrenham, partim Rob. Mordant mil.

"Sir Edward Grevil had a son, that breaking his leg over a stile, died; his daughters are one married to Sir Arthur Ingram, to whom he sold the reversion of his chief seat Milcote, &c. and hath an hundred pounds per annum during his life and the house."

This passage appears to have been one of the additions made to Sir Henry Spelman's History of Sacrilege by Mr. Jeremy Stephens, to whom Sir Henry had consigned his papers. The tract had been written by Sir Henry Spelman in 1632: and he died in 1641, three years before the occurrence of Sir Edward Fisher's distress.

hands of the abbat of Oseney and prior of St. Frideswides, of which twenty-six shillings were to be paid on the feast of All Saints, and the remainder in the beginning of Lent. Mr. Gutch, his editor, adds, "Note, that the sum of fifty-two shillings was soon after paid by Eynsham abbey, as appears by the obligation of Adam the abbat and the convent of that place; which payment with sixteen shillings and eight pence more for the feeding of a hundred scholars being made by them to the university, till the dissolution of this house, it was ordered by the lord chancellor and the king's council, 38 Hen. VIII. (which order was confirmed by the king the same year) that the university should receive the said sums of money from the hands of the general receiver of the revenues of the Augmentation of the king."^a

In another passage, under the year 1275, Wood informs us, that "The civil law being at this time in great renown in the university of Oxford, to the corruption and decay of the study of philosophy, (as for forty years past and more it had done) and also used in so great measure that divinity was reputed bare without it; many from beyond the seas came to obtain the true way of it, such as Bologna in Italy could scarce brag of. Among divers that came, were Mr. Alfonsus de Senis or Siena, in the year 1268, to whom that, and several years after, the abbat and monks of Eynsham allowed a hundred shillings for his maintenance in his studies at Oxon, merely upon the desire of Ottobon cardinal of St. Adrian and at that time legate in England, who, as 'tis probable, brought him into this kingdom in his company."^b

The same writer also mentions "EINSHAM SCHOOLS" in that university, "in a tenement in School Street belonging anciently to the abbey of Einsham." "All the mention that I find of them," he adds, "is in a certain rent-roll, or rather a parchment, containing a tax or subsidy laid upon the houses of clerks in the university in the time of Edward II.

church of St. Mary, and the place called Beaufront as in the record cited in the margin appears.^c As for the time when the said tenement was consecrated to the Muses I cannot determine, being as I conceive out of the reach of record. 'Tis confest that the monks of Einsham had divers mesuages in Oxford, but who gave this to them I cannot justly say, unless it was Robert de Oily, the second of that name in England; or by Walcheline Harang. For this truly must be known, that the former with Edida his wife, gave to the said abbey their land in Oxenford, which Rualdus a clerk held, about the year 1120;^d and the other, land in the city of Oxford, which Segrinus another clerk held also, about 1180.^e Godfrey being then abbat of that place. The evidences concerning which gifts being promiscuously written with others concerning tenements laying in the parish of St. Mary or near to it, hath always possessed me with an opinion that one of them concerned this tenement that we now mention, and the rather because it was held by a clerk or clerks, the common title in those times of academians. After the dissolution of abbeys in the time of Henry the Eighth, this tenement (after it had been for several ages known by the name of Staple Hall) came into the possession of Lincoln college, who leasing it out by that name to the house of Brasenose Nov. 6th in the 3d and 4th of Philip and Mary an. Dom. 1556,^f it continueth for their use to this day, being just opposite to the common gate of the said house." The editor, in a Note, says, "It is now part of the site of Dr. Radcliffe's library."^g

Willis says, in a draught of the RUINS of this monastery taken about sixty years ago (A. D. 1657) in one of Mr. Anthony Wood's manuscripts,^h there is a representation of the west end of Eynsham Abbey Church, which consisted of two very spacious towers, with a large west window in the middle between them, under which was a spacious door to give entrance, as there were two lesser under the two towers. Here were then standing, besides the walls of these towers, some pillars of the church, and walls of the cloister, which stood on the north side.ⁱ This I mention, he continues, because nothing is now remaining, except some old foundations, and a gate-house, as we are informed by Mr. Hearne in Leland's Itinerary, vol. v. p. 92.

Scarcely any vestiges of the edifice of Eynsham abbey are now (1819) visible, except a small door-way and a shield, with the date of 1504, placed in the vicarage garden.

Of the SEAL of Eynsham abbey no perfect impression is at present known to the Editors of Dugdale's Monasticon: but two imperfect ones have been found in the Augmentation Office; one appendant to a Deed dated 1 Ric. III. acknowledging the receipt of an annual rent of forty shillings from the prior and convent of Burcester for premises in Clyston, near Dadington; the other attached to the Surrender of the monastery. From these two impressions a tolerably correct idea of the entire seal may be formed. It contains three divisions: in the middle one is the Virgin Mary and child, seated under a Gothic canopy, surmounted by a figure, probably intended to represent the Deity; in an arch, under the feet of the Virgin, is an abbat, or monk, with a pastoral staff; in each of the side compartments is a female saint. The legend cannot be completely made out. Such part of it as is legible appears to be as follows: SIGILLUM . ECCLESIE ... TRINITATIS ... MARIE A small portion of a seal, apparently representing the figure of the Virgin Mary, has been already noticed as engraved in one of Dr. Rawlinson's plates.

NUM. I.

Carta Regis Æthelredi de Fundatione Ecclesiae de Eynesham.

P DOMINANTE per secula infinita omnium dominatore, Christo salvatore nostro, universitatisque creatore, Æthelredus gratia Dei, ejusque misericordia rex et rector regni Anglorum, et devotus sanctae ecclesiae defensor, humilisque adjutor, omnibus ecclesiasticae pietatis ordinibus, seu secularis potentiae dignitatibus, in Christo Domino pacis et beatitudinis praemia. Considerans pacifico pie mentis intuitu, cum bona voluntate, una cum Dei sacerdotibus, et consiliariis nostris, iram plus solito saevientis Dei in nos, eum placare cum continua bonorum operum exhibitione, et ab ejus laudibus nunquam desistere decrevi. Et quia in nostris temporibus bellorum incendia, direptionesque opum nostrarum patimur, necnon ex vastantium crudelissima depredatione hostium barbarorum, paganarumque gentium multiplici tribulatione, affligentiumque nos usque ad interuersionem, tempora cernimus incumbere periculosa: nobis, in quos fines seculorum devenerunt, nimium convenit de nostrarum utilitatibus animarum cura diligenti perscrutari, qualiter quibusque meritis in seculo jam futuro, cum auctore omnium Christo sint victurae, quia non ullam, (ut apostolus ait) hic habemus mansionem, sed futuram inquirimus; et ideo magna nobis incumbit necessitas, cum terrenis divitiis futuram totis inquirere viribus. Nostrae siquidem divitiarum nisi communicatae in plures, nobis prodesse nequaquam possunt; nullus enim tam composite felicitatis constat, ut non ea quae possidet vel sponte sive nolens amittat: et ideo multis humanae felicitatis dulcedo amaritudinibus respersa est, quae etsi ad tempus fruendi jocunda esse videatur, finem tamen amaritudinis semper introducet. Duo quippe sunt quibus omnis humanorum actuum constat effectus; voluntas scilicet, et potestas, quorum si alterum desit, nihil est quod explicare quis queat: voluntate autem deficiente, ne aggreditur quidem quisque quod non vult. Ac si potestas desit, voluntas omnino necesse est ut frustra sit. Sed boni quique recta voluntate, et optima potestate adipiscuntur bonum quod adappetunt, quia per temporalia hujus evanescentis vitae negotia aeterna sibi futuri calce carentis seculi praemia mercantur sine fine mansura.

Quapropter ego Æthelredus, multiplici Dei clementia indulgente, Angul-Saxonum antedictus rex, ceterarumque gentium longè latèque per circuitum adjacentium gubernator et rector, mihi insitum video et velle et posse; et

ideò memoriae praesentium, et etiam futurorum sequentium post nos veracibus literarum apicibus insinuare curavi, quod Æthelmaro, viro valde fidelissimo, mihi quoque dilectissimo impetrante, absolutissimum libertatis privilegium constituo monasterio ejus in honore sancti Salvatoris, Omniumque Sanctorum suorum, jure dedicato, in loco celebri juxta fluvium qui vocatur Tamis constituto, quod ab incolis regionis illius Egnesham nuncupatur vocabulo. Quod quidem monasterium Æthelmarus ab Æthelweard genero suo mutuando accepit, et pro illis triginta mansiunculis dedit triginta sex mansiones, tribus divisas in locis, tres videlicet in Upoteri, et decem in Litlancumtune, in Lellincge, et tresdecem in Scildforda. Vitae igitur regularis monachos inibi constituens, ipse patris vice fungens vivensque communiter inter eos, abbatem sanctae monachorum congregationi preferre se vivente instituit, ut ita deinceps post ipsum quem constituit abbatem, abbatum electio, secundum regulae praeceptum, ex eadem congregatione usu teneat perpetuo, id est ut ex eadem congregatione qui ordinandus est, et aliunde nequaquam, nisi peccatis promerentibus, vel impediante imperitia, talis qui dignus sit in ea reperiri nequiverit, cum regis consilio eligatur. Rex autem non ad tirannidem, sed ad munimen loci, et augmentum, uti mos est, super pastorem et Christi gregem dominium solerti vigilantia misericorditer custodiat. Secularium verò quispiam, ne ad magni detrimenti ruinam deveniat, ut dominium loci teneat, excepto rege nunquam eligatur. Sunt etenim rura haec, quae sancto Salvatore, omnibusque sanctis ejus, vir praefatus Æthelmarus, et divinae servitutis obsequio, et magna cum humilitate, non solum à rege sed etiam a diversis hominum personis nunc comparando nunc mutuando optinuit, quae ad usus monachorum inibi degentium aeterno concessit donario. Quinque videlicet manentes in loco ubi ab indigenis Scaaptun dicitur. Villam quoque quae Scipford dicitur, dedit vir praedictus ad monasterium antedictum, quam ei Leofwinus suus consanguineus spiritu in ultimo constitutus donavit, quam Birthnotus antea dux praclarus ab Eadgaro patre meo, dignis praemium pro meritis accipere laetabatur. Micclantun similiter ad monasterium dedit, quam ille Birthnotus dux praedictus ultimo commisit dono, ab Eadgaro quoque ei antea donatam, et in kartula firmiter commendatam. Terram quoque quinque manentium, quae Burtun dicitur, donavit, quam a me promeruit, et ab Æthelweardo genero suo voluntate antea accepit, pro remedio animae uxoris suae. Emit quoque praedictus vir Æthelmarus a me cum triginta libris, duodecim mansiones de villulis quas matrona quaedam, nomine Leoftet, suis perdidit ineptiis et amisit, tres semis videlicet manentes aet Maranaclive, quas pari modo ad monasterium dedit, duas similiter mansiones aet Beonetlege silvæ communis dedit. Donavit etiam vir sæpe nominatus quinque mansas aet Stodelege et decem aet Cestertune, propinquo suo, nomine Godwino, pro decem mansionibus terræ communis quæ aet Erdintune dicitur, quas quoque prædicto monasterio commisit. Dedit quoque Byrthelmus quondam episcopus Æthelweardo propinquo suo, patri videlicet Æthelmari, viginti mansiones, ubi ab incolis aet Aescaeron dicitur, quas Æthelwerdus filio suo Æthelmaro longè ante mortem suam donavit, et ille supradictas mansiunculas ad monasterium dedit. Terram similiter quæ Bictun dicitur, quam a me promeruit kartula confirmatam, monasterio antedicto donavit. Rus quoque quod Rameslege dicitur, et portum ad se pertinens quod illi Wulfin propinqua sua, in ultimo constituta spiritu commisit, monasterio prædicto concessit. Sit igitur monasterium prædictum ab omni humanæ servitutis iugo liberum cum omnibus supradictis uilulis ad se ritè pertinentibus, expeditione excepta, et pontis arcisve constructione. Si quis igitur hoc nostræ libertatis donum confirmare, et firma voluntate stabilire et amplificare satagerit, augeat amplificetque ei Deus omnipotens in seculo præsentis prospera cuncta, et in futuro felicitatis tripudium. Qui vero in aliud evertere, et nostræ libertatis munimen destruere voluerit, sit ipse alienatus à sanctæ Dei ecclesiæ consortio, necnon et à participatione sacrosancti corporis et sanguinis Christi, et in magni iudicii die, cum Juda Christi proditore, sinistra in parte condemnatus, nisi hic priùs digna satisfactione humilis pœnituerit, quod contra nostra decreta deliquit.

sacrorum uberum nectare educatos, respiciendo gratulanter aluisse se gaudeat. Et quanquam hæc sollicitudinis cura cunctis fidelibus necessaria judicatur, rectoribus tamen ejusdem matris nostræ, qui ei propagandi gratia, non tam præesse quàm prodesse divinitus constituuntur, præ cunctis specialius congruit, quos quidem tota mentis integritate niti decet, ut cujus fluviali fecunditatis alvo renati, cujusve sacramentis salutaribus delibuti sunt, eam temporaliter dotare, temporalibusque donariis ditare et decorare diligenter studeant, quatinus cum magni dies examinis repentinus ingruerit, immortalitatis stola decorari, atque inopinata sanctorum remuneratione, ejusdem immortalis sponso largiente, cum legitimè certantibus eternaliter dari mereantur. Cujus quidem inestimabilis præmii vasto cordis conamine consors fieri gestiens, et ut illud nancisci fœliciter merear satagens, ego Remigius, sanctæ Lincolnensis ecclesiæ pontifex, ob temporalem domini mei gloriosissimi regis Anglorum, Willielmi videlicet secundi, propriique corporis mei, atque omnium mihi subditorum prosperitatem, necnon æternam utriusque domini mei, patris siquidem et filii, domine meæ quoque dulcissimæ Mathildis reginæ, animæque meæ egentis, ac utriusque mei parentis, et ut præfixum est, omnium mihi commissorum salutem, ecclesiam sanctæ Dei genetricis et perpetuæ Virginis Mariæ in loco qui vulgò dicitur Stowa, quondam prolixo temporis spacio præsentium incuria desolatam, reformare decerno; ibique memorati domini mei victoriosissimi regis Anglorum Willielmi, filii videlicet præcellentissimi regis Willielmi præcedentis, necnon omnium episcoporum et abbatum, cæterorumque optimatum totius regni sui auctoritate, Columbanum virum venerabilem, sacrisque exercitiis haud modicè cluentem, abbatem cum monachis sibi regulariter subditis inviolabiliter constituo; cui etiam possessiones universas sibi olim, ob divinæ pietatis amorem à clarissimo consule Leofrico, et ab ejusdem devotissima conjuge Godgiva collatas, Brantonam scilicet, et duas portiones Guelleg-uapentac, cum omnibus sibi pertinentiis, Newercham quoque et Flatburch, cum universis sibi adjacentibus, perpetuò concedo, præsentisque paginæ testimonio indissolubiliter corrobore. Et ut ipsa Dei genitrix, et unica Virgo Maria, filio suo unico largiente, me fontem vitæ sitientem ab spe ad speciem transferat, quo regem in decore suo cernere merear, quæcunque in ipso capite prænotatæ pontificalis mansionis, in qua præfata sita est ecclesia, juris episcopii hactenus extiterant; oblationem scilicet illius ecclesiæ altaris, et terram ibidem quatuor aratorum, cæteraque quæ, ut supra memini, episcopatu jure debebantur, præfatæ ecclesiæ cælorum reginæ dudum dicatæ, ad ejusdem scilicet instaurationem, et ad usum fratrum inibi Deo militantium beneficia prolata, accumulando simili modo perhenniter possidenda attribuo, et attributa inviolabiliter affirmo. Et ne posterius mei diebus vitæ meæ finitis, animæ meæ detrahentes, episcopatum me temerè minuisse, vel suis quocunque modo rebus exspoliassent asserant, possessionem quandam, immanissimis à me laboribus vindicatam, Slatfort scilicet pagum quendam perpulchrum, mihi nempe, mihi que Christo jubente succedentibus aptum, ac valdè necessarium, cum cunctis ritè attinentiis, pro supra memoratis stipendiis episcopatu sublatis, tam mihi quam successoribus meis in episcopatum commutationem perhennem restituendo, firmiterque stabilio.

Addo etiam præterea eidem gloriosissimæ Dei genetricis ecclesiæ, sibi que famulantibus monachis, augmentum quoddam insigne Egneshamensem, cum eodem pago in quo antiquitus construitur, cæterisque sibi membris adherentibus, Scipfort scilicet et Rollendricht, necnon Aerdintona atque Micletuna, quadam quoque ecclesiola sanctæ Aebbe in urbe Oxenefordensi consita, cum reculis sibi devotione pia fidelium collatis, atque etiam duobus molendinis secus ejusdem urbis aquarum decursus pridem erectis, cum universis quoque jure sibi appendicibus, supra dicto modo perpetualiter optinenda annuo, strictimque connecto.

Hujus itaque constitutionis, atque inviolabilis meæ donationis serie taliter explanata; non solum à me concessa et attributa præsentique cartula jam inviolabiliter inserta; verumetiam quæcunque in futuro pia fidelium largitione vindicari poterunt, sæpissime memoratæ Christi matris ecclesiæ, cui omnia prælibata sunt; necnon piæ memoriæ patri supradicto, Columbano videlicet abbati, suisque successoribus, ibidem canonicè imperpetuum promovendis, jure perhenni cum omnibus consuetudinibus præsidenda, concedo; et concessa sub Christi et totius ecclesiæ testimonio, præsentisque cirographi assertione, pontificali auctoritate constanter consolido, propriaque manu consigno ✠.

Et ne antiqui hostis instinctu conscripta constitutionis meæ donaria in posterum à quolibet proditoris filio frustrentur, sed potius rata et solida habeantur, eidem sacratissimæ virginis ecclesiæ talem æternaliter libertatem largior, ut nullus mortalium, elationis tumore debriatus, dominationem in eam aliquam exerceat, excepto Lindicolinensi, nostræ videlicet ecclesiæ sedis antistite, cui cum suo pastore quicumque sit, cæterisque sibi beneficiis ob multorum fidelium animarum remedium impensis, juxta veterum patrum traditionem, utpote domino, immo ut conditori in æternum subiacebit, à quo etiam honoris donationem, et sacri ordinis consecrationem, secundum canonum censuram adepturus est: qui sic tamen ei piè et paternè præsit ut nunquam tributum vel quemlibet redditum inde exigat, seu tesseram necessitate aliqua ingruente sibi imponere præsumat, vel etiam consuetudinem quamlibet aliam ab ea extorqueat, sed potius eam ab hostium infestatione muniat, ut in die retributionis arbiter orbis, mitissimæ genetricis suæ supplicatione sibi largè retribuat. Si quis autem in futuro, quod absit, totius bonitatis inimico machinante, huic salutiferæ constitutioni nostræ mente sacrilega fraudulenter obviaverit, meamque hanc saluberrimam donationem, tot tantorumque procerum sanctione roboratam, avaritiæ veneno repletus, minuere vel delere violenter præsumserit, deleatur de libro viventium, et cum justis non scribatur, sed tanquam pulvis quem projicit ventus à facie terræ, ne gloriam Dei videat, cum impiis tollatur, sitque juxta apostolum, anathema maranatha, nisi resipuerit, et Deo sanctæque ecclesiæ quam fraudulenter læserit dignè satisfecerit. Amen.

Est archa una depositis secularium assignata sub tribus seris quarum claves custodiunt prior et alii duo fratres in capitulo assignati. In hac archa reponitur theca duabus seris assignata, in qua reconditur majus sigillum conventus, et habet unam clavem dompnus abbas, et alius frater communi consilio capituli sicut et alii fratres supra constitutus. Istud majus sigillum sic sub tribus clavibus custoditus nunquam alicui scripto nisi in generali capitulo lecto et approbato, et ibidem coram omnibus assensu cunctorum signato, apponetur; nec signabunt hoc sigillo nisi magna et ardua ecclesiæ negotia et perpetuum robor obtinentia sicut cartæ vel cartis similia, vel talia scripta quæ majoribus fuerint destinanda, quibus minus sigillum decenter propter personarum excellentiam apponi non possit, et quæcunque fuerint ipso sigillo signata, ipsorum omnium memoria reponetur ad majorem securitatem et futurorum notitiam, ut sciant futuri quid moderni fecerint, sed si forte de veritate sigilli vel alicujus scripti orta fuerit dubitatio per repositum veritas completur, et istud sigillum sine minori sigillo a tergo semper ponendo nunquam emittetur.

De minori sigillo sciendum quod sub tribus seris custodietur, scilicet in archa ubi cartæ reponuntur; cujus duas claves duo strenui fratres ad hoc in capitulo provisus custodiunt, et pixidis clavem ubi reponitur sigillum prior, ita ut sine ipso et ipsius sigillo a tergo ponendo, si sigillum abbatis defuerit, cum conscientia fratrum quotquot adesse potuerint nichil signetur, et quæcunque scriptum signatum fuerit tenor ipsius in capitulo cunctis fratribus antea si possit, vel post si talis negligentia fuerit ostendatur, et omnia signata abbreviantur ne oblivioni tradantur quicquid et isto sigillo fuerit consignatum, facta est hæc provisio anno gratiæ M.CC.XXVII. in die Natali beatæ Virginis. Quæ autem de parvo sigillo conventus et sigillo abbatis vel prioris a tergo ponendo fiunt procuraciones provisum est anno gratiæ M.CC.XXVIII. in vigiliis Conversionis sancti Pauli.

Monastery of Burton upon Trent,

IN

STAFFORDSHIRE.

Y a singular mistake, Sir William Dugdale, having found a Charter of King Eadred, given to one Wulfric in the year 949, of lands in Burgetune, took it for granted that this Wulfric was Wulfric Spott, and Burgetune the place where the abbey of Burton upon Trent was afterwards founded.^a Mr. Graves, however, in the Appendix to Hemming's Chartulary, p. 640, observes, that the boundaries of the lands in this Charter are ascribable to "Burton on the Water" in Gloucestershire, and are verbatim in the Evesham Register, to which that village belonged.^b

The abbey of Burton upon Trent was really founded by Wulfric Spott, whose liberal donations for the support of the monks are minutely detailed in his will, printed by Sir William Dugdale in the original Saxon, to which a Latin translation is appended, together with the modern names of the different vills and manors mentioned in it.^c Wulfric Spott appears to have been an officer attached to the court of King Ethelred, whose Charter of confirmation, dated in 1004, will also be found in the Appendix.^d The Polychronicon, Brompton, &c. date Wulfric Spott's foundation in 1002.^e The portion of his paternal inheritance with which he endowed the monastery (for he did not give it all) is said to have been valued, even at that period of time, at seven hundred pounds.^a For a confirmation of his will, Wulfic Spott gave to the king two hundred marks or mancuses of gold, two silver-hilted swords, and four horses (two with caparisons and two without), together with the arms appertaining to each. To every bishop he gave five mancuses of gold, and to the two archbishops ten each. To Archbishop Ælfic he gave moreover the manor of Dumelton in Gloucestershire, which had been taken from the monastery of Abingdon.^b He also constituted King Ethelred sovereign lord, and Ælfic and Ælfhelme his brother protectors of the monastery and its possessions.^c

The church of Burton Abbey was dedicated to the blessed Virgin Mary, and St. Modwen: although in Domesday, as well as in many of the Charters to this monastery, it is called the abbey of St. Mary only. St. Modwen, or Modwenna, was an Irish saint, who lived as an anchorite several years near this place, in an island of the Trent called Andredesey, where she was buried. Her reliques were afterwards enshrined in this Abbey, which, on her account, according to Leland, was sometimes called MODWENNESTOW.^d St. Modwen's epitaph is thus given by Camden:

"Ortum Modwennæ dat Hibernia, Scotia finem,
Anglia dat tumulum, dat Deus astra poli.
Prima dedit vitam, sed mortem terra secunda,
Et terram terræ tertia terra dedit.
Aufert Lanfortin quam terra Conallea præfert,
Felix BURTONIUM virginis ossa tenet."^e

The following was the return of the possessions of Burton Abbey at the formation of the Domesday Survey, A. D. 1087.

In Warwickshire, the church of Burton held two hides and a half at Aldlvestrev, which had been given to the monks by Earl Leuric. In Staffordshire, the abbey held a hide and a half in the vill of Stadford; a hide and a half in Brantestone; a hide and a half, with their appendages, in Witmere;^f a hide and a half in Stratone; half a hide, with its appendages, in Brunlege; three virgates of land in Derlavestone; three virgates in Lege; three virgates, and their appendages, in Acovre; a hide in Witestone and Nauuen; and half a hide in Beddintone. In Derbyshire, ten carucates at Ufre, including the berewicks of Ufre Parva, Findre, and Potlac, with the soke of Snellestune, Beruerdescote, Dellengeberie, Hougen, Redlesleie, Sudberie, Hiltune, and Sudtun; in Apleby five carucates; two carucates in Wineshalle; two carucates in Cotes, or Cotune; four carucates in Stapenhille; two carucates in Caldewelle given by King William the Conqueror;^g and five bovates and the third part of another bovat in Tichenballe.^h The total value of the lands in the three counties amounting to the annual sum of 39*l.* 8*s.* 8*d.*ⁱ

^a See Num. II. The book of Abingdon, there quoted, says that Wulfic Spott gave the monastery the whole of his paternal inheritance; but this is evidently in contradiction to his Will.

^b Ibid.

^c Shaw, in the History of Staffordshire, conjectures this Wulfic Spott to have been the same person with Alfric, who was afterwards so traitorous in his conduct to King Ethelred; of whom see Dugd. Bar. tom. i. p. 7. The "Historia Fundatoris et Abbatum" in the Burton Register, says, that Wulfic Spott was killed by the Danes at Ipswich on the 11th kalends of November, A.D. 1010. His body was interred in the cloister at Burton. See Num. XXII.

Dubl. vol. viii. p. 52; and, above all, the Acta Sanctorum of the Bollandists, month of July, tom. ii. p. 241. St. Modwen has been already mentioned as the person who induced King Egbert to found the nunnery of Pollesworth in Warwickshire. See vol. ii. of the present Work, p. 365, App. Num. II. She had before established two famous nunneries in Scotland; one at Sterling, the other at Edinburgh.

^e Camd. Brit. edit. Gough, 1789, vol. ii. p. 377. Shaw, in his Hist. of Staffordshire, Burton upon Trent, vol. i. p. 1, says, "It is specified in a curious Rental of the earl of Uxbridge, written in the third year of Edward VI. that Andrew's Isle, alias Mudwin's Chapel, was then let to John Hewit, at will, at the annual sum or rent of three shillings and three pence. The situation is at this day known to be that insulated meadow between the two branches of the river opposite to the church: and there is a part of the water well known at this day by the name of Modwen's or Mudwin's hole. Dr. Plot also notices St. Modwen's well here, like other holy wells, as famous for the cure of the king's evil, and other extraordinary cures."

^f Withmere, Wightmere, or Whitmore, is a small member of VOL. III.

Two Extents of the lands belonging to this abbey in the reign of Henry the First, one in the time of abbat Nigel, the other in the first year of abbat Geoffrey, A. D. 1114, 14 Hen. I. are given by Shaw in his Appendix.^k About this time, Shaw adds, there was a great dispute between Robert de Ferrers and Geoffrey abbat of Burton, concerning part of a wood between Balea and Watsches Broc, extending through Stanbruge, Hinfold, and Mere-wey, claimed by the monks; when, at length, the said Robert, struck, as the deed expresses it, with the fear of God, and commanded by the king, appointed himself protector and friend of the church; upon which the monks granted to him the said wood for twenty shillings per annum, and he gave them permission to send two carts to his wood to carry for themselves fire-wood of the dead wood in Nedwode. This agreement was first made in Tutbury castle, and afterwards confirmed in the chapter of Burton. Among the witnesses were Robert bishop of Chester, William Peve-rell, whom the king had sent to make this Agreement, &c. It was afterwards confirmed by several charters of William earl de Ferrers, grandson of Robert, who likewise granted to the monks twenty shillings rent from his mill at Bar-tone.^l

The liberties and privileges of this monastery were confirmed by King Henry the First,ⁿ King Stephen, and King Henry the Second, who also granted to it a charter of free-warren.^o A charter of confirmation of privileges is likewise extant from Adeliza, queen of Henry the Second.^p Pope Lucius the Third, by a bull dated Sept. 9th, 1185, ordained that the rule of St. Benedict should for ever be observed here: he also confirmed all grants which had been or might thereafter be made to the monks, reckoning up the particulars of such as had been bestowed upon them to that time; adding the usual blessing and imprecation.^q King William the Conqueror's donations to Burton, in this Instrument, are noticed at greater length than in the Burton Annals. The liberties of Burton monastery were also confirmed by the several charters of Robert and Roger, bishops of Chester, and Walter and Richard, bishops of Coventry. About the time of Henry the Third, Shaw adds, Alan archdeacon of Stafford, A. de Stanes dean of Pirehill, and A. de Jebbeseia, his successor, confirmed the liberties of the monks.^r

The charter of liberties granted to the monastery by King Henry the Third in the 11th year of his reign, will be found in the Appendix of Instruments,^s together with another charter, granted at the same time, for a market and fair at Bromley: the former to be held weekly, on Tuesdays; the latter annually, to continue three days, upon the eve of St. Bartholomew and two following days.^t

Burton, situated in the meadows about half a mile north of the town, where was formerly a large grange belonging to the abbey. King Ethelred granted it to Wlfget, the first abbat in 1012, in consideration of the payment of seventy pounds. The king's charter (with the boundaries of the land annexed) is printed by Shaw, Hist. Staff. vol. i. p. 19; together with abstracts of some other Instruments relating to Withmere, pp. 20, 21. Abstracts of Instruments relating to Brantestun, another hamlet of Burton, also occur pp. 21, 22; of Scobenhall, or Shopnall, an ancient grange about a mile west from the town, belonging to the abbey, p. 23; of Horninglow, pp. 24, 25; and of Stretton, p. 25.

^s The Annals of Burton say that King William also gave to the monastery the two Ufres, with all their land beyond the Dove, and Eccus. See Num. XVII. sub an. MLXXXVII.

^t Rolueston, or Rolleston, in Derbyshire, is, of course, unnamed in the Domesday Survey of the abbey property. King Ethelred's Charter, granting Rolueston in exchange for Eldeswirthe and Elfredinton, to abbat Wulfget, on account of the distance of these places from the abbey is printed by Shaw, Hist. Staff. vol. i. p. 28, from the Register of Burton, together with the boundaries of the manor, in Saxon. In the reign of Edward the Confessor it had become the lordship of Earl Torti; at whose death the king gave it to Morcar, earl of Northumberland.

The Burton Annals contain the proceedings in the time of abbat Laurence, in the reign of Henry the Third, respecting the bridge at Egerton over the Dove, now called Monks Bridge; the inhabitants of which place were desirous to throw the burthen of repairing the bridge upon the abbey.^a

In the 14th of Edw. II. Thomas earl of Lancaster, being at the head of a formidable insurrection against the king, did much injury to Burton upon Trent. The abbey suffered so much at this time from the depredations of his followers, that the king gave to the monks the advowsons of the churches of Tatenhill and Hanbury, which were among the earl's property forfeited to the crown.^b

ABBATS of BURTON.

WLFGET, or WLFGETUS, has been already mentioned as the first abbat, A. D. 1004. He died in 1026.

BRITERIC, or BRICTRIC, succeeded in 1027. He, as well as Wlfget and their five immediate successors, were originally monks of Winchester. Briteric died on Sunday the 12th of the kalends of May, A. D. 1050.

LEUERIC, or LEURIC, became abbat in 1051. He died on the 8th of the ides of January, A. D. 1085. In the same year

GEOFFREY DE MALA TERRA became abbat. He was deposed in 1094, in the seventh year of William Rufus, for wastefulness and mismanagement in the concerns of the monastery. His successor was NIGELL. He died on the 6th of the ides of May, A. D. 1113.

GEOFFREY became abbat in 1114. He died in 1151. He is stated to have taken great pains in ascertaining the legend of St. Modwen; and to have added a campanile, or bell tower, to the choir of the church.

ROBERT succeeded Geoffrey. The date of his election in the Annales Monast. Burton. is 1150. He also was deposed, A. D. 1159, for alienating the possessions of the monastery.

BERNARD, who had previously been a monk of Gloucester, and then abbat of Cerne, succeeded to the abbacy of Burton, upon relinquishing his former preferment, in 1160. He is stated to have recovered for his house the vill of Cotes, or Coton, which his predecessor had alienated to one who was sheriff of Staffordshire. The vill, however, remained long afterwards in litigation. Upon Bernard's death, in 1175, abbat

ROBERT was restored. His second abbacy, however, continued but a year and half. He died on the 15th of the kalends of December, 1177.

ROGER MALEBRAUNCH, prior of Great Malvern, became abbat of Burton in 1178. He died on the 2d of the nones of May, A. D. 1182.

RICHARD, prior of Rochester, became the next abbat. His death is placed on the 13th of the kalends of May, A. D. 1188.

NICHOLAS, prior of Abingdon, succeeded Richard. He died on the ides of December, A. D. 1197.^c His

Charters to the Monks of Burton, "de Camera," and "de Coquina," are printed by Shaw in his History of Staffordshire.^d

WILLIAM MELBURNE, a monk of Reading, was the next abbat. The Annals of Burton place his election in the year 1200.^e He appears to have been a great benefactor to the building of the town of Burton, where he also established first a fair and market. Other of his benefactions are recorded in the "Historia Fundatoris et Abbatum."^f Shaw has printed his Charter endowing the almshouse of the monastery.^g Abbat Melburne died on the 8th of the kalends of August, A. D. 1210. His successor is stated to have been

ROGER, a monk of Normandy. The Annals of Burton, however, do not place his entrance as abbat till 1215. "Eodem anno venit Rogerus abbas Normanniae."^h The "Historia Fundatoris et Abbatum" places abbat Roger's death on the 18th of the kalends of October, 1218: the Annals of Burton say in 1216; in which they are supported by the entry upon the Patent Roll announcing the royal assent to the election of

NICHOLAS DE WALINGFORD, who had previously been prior of Burton.ⁱ The "Historia Fundatoris et Abbatum" places this abbat's death on the 4th of the kalends of August, 1222.

RICHARD DE INSULA, prior of St. Edmundsbury, received the royal assent to his election June 10th, 6 Hen. III.^k He was afterwards made abbat of St. Edmundsbury. The Annals of Burton place his death in 1233.^l

LAURENCE, a monk of Burton, was the next abbat. The Patent Roll calls him LAURENTIUS DE SANCTO EDWARD. The royal assent was given to his election July 25th, 1239.^m He died on the 6th of the nones of July, 1260, and was buried in the church of Burton, between the altar of the Martyrs and the Mary-chapel. The building of the latter is said to have been begun in his time.ⁿ

JOHN DE STAFFORD, prior of the monastery, was elected abbat upon Laurence de St. Edward's death. The royal assent was given to his election July 15th, and the temporalities restored to him July 26th, 1260.^o He resigned his office on Sunday the 19th of the kalends of February, 1280, having been a monk of Burton sixty years; and died in the same year on the 8th of the kalends of March. He was interred near the centre of the Mary-chapel, which had been finished in the time of his abbacy by prior Michael de Mercinton.^p

THOMAS DE PAKINTON, monk and prior of Burton, had the king's assent given to his election Feb. 8th, and the temporalities restored Feb. 20th, 1281.^q He died on the kalends of October, 1305, and was interred in the church of Burton, before the high altar, under a marble stone bearing a cross fleury on the top. This stone appears afterwards to have been removed by abbat Feylde to Andreseye, and placed upon the tomb of St. Modwen. During abbat Pakinton's time the upper chancel of the church of Burton was rebuilt.^r

hundred of Offlow, preserved among the Harleian Charters in the British Museum, K. 10, explains the property and privileges of the monastery in that district about the year 1255.

monastery restored to him Nov. 1st, 1305, his election as abbat having been previously confirmed by William de Eadburbury, vicar general to the bishop of Coventry and Litchfield, then abroad.^a The "Historia Fundatoris et Abbatum" speaks of him as a benefactor to the buildings of the monastery, and places his death on the 8th of the kalends of July, 1316. He was buried before the high altar of the abbey church, on the right of abbat Pakinton.

WILLIAM DE BROMLEYE, or BROMLEGH, according to the entry on the Patent Roll, received the royal assent to his election June 15th, and the temporalities July 12th, 1316.^b He died on the 11th of the kalends of July 1329; and was buried before the high altar, on the left of abbat Pakinton. It was during the time of this abbat that the Earl of Lancaster's rebellion took place.^c Upon abbat Bromleye's death the convent of Burton appears to have been divided as to the choice of a successor; one party choosing Roger de Bylington, a monk of the house, as abbat, the other choosing Robert de Longedon, prior of Tutbury, and both applying to the king for his assent, which was refused to both.^d The bishop of Coventry and Litchfield, however, ultimately appointed

ROBERT DE LONGEDON to the vacancy; to whom the temporalities were granted Sept. 10th, 1330.^e This abbat built what was called the chapel of the Confessors, and also began the erection of the chapter-house. He died on the 4th of the kalends of March, 1340.

ROBERT DE BRYKHULL received the royal assent to his election March 27th, and had the temporalities granted to him April 5th, 1341.^f Upon his death,

JOHN DE IBESTOCK was elected abbat. The temporalities were restored to him Sept. 5th, 1348.^g

THOMAS DE SOUTHAM, or SODETHOM, received the temporalities Oct. 20th, 1366.^h Upon his resignation,

JOHN DE SUDBURY was elected abbat; to whom the temporalities were granted Dec. 16th, 1400.ⁱ He resigned in 1423: in which year, on Sept. 21st, WILLIAM MATTHEWE received the temporalities.^k He resigned Sept. 6th, 1430.

ROBERT OWNESBY was elected abbat Sept. 29th following.^l The royal assent was given to his election Oct. 7th, and the temporalities restored Oct. 14th.^m Abbat Ownesby resigned Jan. 24th, 1432.ⁿ

RALPH HENLEY was elected Feb. 7th following.^o The temporalities were restored to him March 10th.^p Upon Henley's resignation,

WILLIAM DE BROUSTON, or BRONSTON, was elected abbat. He received the temporalities March 17th, 1455.^q Upon his death,

THOMAS FELDE, or FEYLDE, was elected abbat. He received the temporalities April 13th, 1474.^r

WILLIAM FLEGHE received the temporalities as abbat Sept. 3d, 1494.^s He died May 14th, 1502. He was succeeded by

WILLIAM BONE, or BEYNE; to whom the temporalities of the monastery were granted June 8th, 1502.^t

JOHN BEATON, or BOSTON, as he is called in the "Historia Fundatoris et Abbatum," was the next abbat. Upon his resignation,

WILLIAM EDYS was elected. He received the temporalities April 13th, 1534;^u and on Nov. 14th, 1539, surrendered his monastery to the king.^x

The monastery of Burton upon Trent was valued, in the 26th year of Henry VIII. according to Dugdale, at the sum of 267*l.* 14*s.* 3*d.* per annum: according to Speed, at 356*l.* 16*s.* 3*d.* But in the Record in the First Fruits Office, according to Tanner, the whole yearly valuation of this monastery was 501*l.* 7*s.* 0*d.*: from which sum, after 89*l.* 0*s.* 2*d.* had been deducted for reprises, there remained clear 412*l.* 6*s.* 10*d.*^y

Bishop Tanner says, about Nov. 3d, 1541, King Henry the Eighth founded on the site and in the Church of this Monastery a COLLEGE of a DEAN and CANONS, to the honour of Jesus Christ and his mother Mary; and granted, for their support, the manor of Burton, and thirteen other manors, &c. belonging to the monastery.^z

This foundation consisted of a dean and four prebendaries only. WILLIAM EDYS, the last abbat, was the dean:^a John Ruddle, B.D., James Townley, Robert Moore, and Roger Ball, the first prebendaries.

The Collegiate Church, however, was but of short continuance;^b for it was dissolved before Jan. 31st, 1545,^c when all the lands and endowment of the same were granted by the king to Sir William Paget, his secretary; from whom they have descended to the present Marquis of Anglesea.

The only REGISTER of Burton abbey at present known is that which Dugdale saw in 1650; now, together with numerous detached Charters, in the Marquis of Anglesea's possession.^d

"Commissio sub mutue vicissitudinis obtentu. In causa fratris Johannis Sudbury abbatis monasterii de Burtone super Trentam, gravia crimina adulterii et incontinentie cum Margeria Strettone de Magna Overa, et Agnete uxore Petri Gibbone commisit, ac eisdem mulieribus in criminibus hujusmodi sæpius et notorie adherebat, eademque in ipsis criminibus publice tenuit, in animæ suæ grave periculum, Ordinisque et religionis suorum scandalum manifestum, aliorumque exemplum perniciosum."

^a The precise time of dean Edys' death is not recorded. Cole says, "He willed in 1544 to be buried on the south side of the high altar of Burton collegiate church." MS. Cole, Brit. Mus. vol. xxvii. fol. 89 b.

^b Bishop Tanner says, the dean and chapter were required by their Charter to lay out more in alms, and towards repairing highways, yearly, than the king's other new foundations in the cathedrals of Rochester, Bristol, Chester, Carlisle, Peterborough, or Ely. See Rym. Fœd. tom. xv. pp. 77, 78.

^c Shaw, Hist. Staff. vol. i. p. 8, says, it was in the month of October, 37 Hen. VIII. that the dean and prebendaries, by deed enrolled in Chancery, surrendered the church and all their lands to the king.

The following is the notice of the Pensions payable in the 2d & 3d Phil. and Mar. to the canons who had surrendered. "BURTON nuper COLLEG. Penc. Johannis Cartor nuper canonic. ibidem per annum vj*l.* Roberti More nuper præbendar. ibidem per annum xxvj*l.* Willielmo Sutton un. minorum canonicorum ibidem vj*l.* Willielmi Hether nuper epistolar. ibidem per annum c*s.*"

^d Bishop Tanner adds the following references to Records which have not been already noticed:

"Fin. 5 Hen. III. m. 4. Plac. de banco, 8 Hen. III. Mich. rot. 14, de commun. pastur. in Overe. Ibid. 9 Hen. III. Mich. rot. 20, pro triginta acris in Overe, Derb. Plac. de banco, 10 Hen. III. Hill. rot.

Shaw, in his History of Staffordshire, has engraved a fragment of the common SEAL of the ABBEY, the area representing St. Modwenna seated on a church; together with a smaller Seal, appendant to a Deed of the year 1493, bearing the inscription, SIGILL · ABBIS · ET · CO · DE · BVR · TONA. He has also engraved the Seals of the following abbats: abbat Nicholas, 1188—1197, with a counter-seal representing a head, and the inscription, SANCTA MOD · WENNA; William Melburn, 1197—1210; Laurence, 1229—1260; John de Stafford, 1280; Thomas de Packinton, 1287; Thomas Southam, 1391; and a seal of 1441, probably of Ralph Henley.

The SEAL of the COLLEGIATE CHURCH is also engraved in Shaw's History. It represents our Saviour and his disciples at the last Supper, with the Arms of the Abbey below. Round the area, SIGILL · CŌE · DECANI · ET · CAPITVLI · ECCLESIE · COLLEGIATE · XPI · BVRTONIE · DE · TRNT.

A south view of this ABBEY and CHURCH was engraved by Hollar, in 1661, for the former edition of the Monasticon, vol. ii. p. 870. Shaw says, it is difficult to reconcile every part of this print with a ground-plan which he discovered amongst the abbey records at Beaudesert. The plan, an outline of which is engraved in his History, shows the form and dimensions of the church; being in length two hundred and twenty-eight feet, and in breadth fifty-two feet and a half; the wall of it being five feet thick, having a tower at each end corresponding with those represented in Hollar's elevation. The cloister adjoining to it on the south side was a hundred feet square; and adjoining to that, on the south, was the fraytor, or common sitting-room, ninety-six feet in length, and thirty in breadth. On the east side of this was the dortor, or dormitory, a hundred feet in length and ten in breadth, with three other chambers annexed to it on the north. On the west of the cloister were the abbat's three chambers, &c. There were, also, two spacious gardens walled about.^a

Shaw says, some considerable remains of the cloisters are still visible in the old walls between the present church of Burton upon Trent and the bowling-green, in which are several curious old arches; and beyond this, close to the river, are some other remains, represented in his History, plate III. In the work entitled the Beauties of England and Wales, vol. xiii. p. 757, is an engraving of some further remains of that part of the monastery which was appropriated to the abbat for his private residence, now called the old manor house.

In nomine Domini. Hic declarat Wulfricus dilecto domino suo testamentum suum, et omnibus amicis suis: hoc est, quod ego do domino meo ducentas marcas auri, et duos gladios cum manubriis argentatis, et quatuor equos, duos (scil.) ephippiatos, et duos sine ephippiis, et arma quæ eò spectant. Item do cuique episcopo quinque marcas auri, et duobus archiepiscopis, ipsorum (scil.) utrique, decem marcas auri. Item do unicuique regulæ monachicæ (vel, monachorum ordini) unam libram, et cuique abbati, et cuique abbatissæ quinque marcas auri. Item do Ælfrico archiepiscopo terras illas apud Dumeltun, unâ cum cæteris, pro animâ meâ, ut ipse amicus et adjutor eò propensior sit erga illum locum (monasterii scilicet) quem ego construxi. Item do Ælfhelmo et Wulfago...^a... terrarum illarum inter Ribbel et Maerse, et in Wirhale, ut ipsi distribuunt inter se maximâ quâ possint æqualitate, nisi eorum uterque suam propriam (partem) habere malit, eâ lege, ut quando ad squatinas capiendas itum fuerit,^b uterque det tria squatarum millia loco illi apud Byrtune. Item do Ælfhelmo Rolfestun, et Heorelfestun. Item do Wulfago terras illas apud Beorelfestune, et apud Merchamtune. Item do Ælfhelmo terras illas apud Cunugesburh, dummodò ipse curet ut monachi habeant quotannis tertiam partem piscium, (ibi scil. capiendorum) et ipse duas partes. Item do Wulfago terras illas apud Alewaldestune. Item do Ufegeato terras illas apud Northtune, eâ lege, ut is amicus et adjutor eò propensior sit erga illum locum. Item do misellæ filiæ meæ, terras illas apud Elleforde, et illas apud Aclea, cum omnibus quæ eò nunc pertinent, quamdiu dies ejus fuerint, (i. e. quoad vixerit) et post dies suos, transeant illæ ad locum illum (monasterium scil.) apud Byrtune: ipsa autem (ita) possideat, ut nullo modo corrumpat, sed habeat usum fructum (earundum) quamdiu promereri possit (i. e. quamdiu benè se gesserit): transeat autem postea ad locum illum apud Byrtune, quoniam erat (fundus iste) susceptoris mei donum. Item volo quod Ælfhelmus sit ipsius patronus: terras autem illas, et illam apud Tomwurthin nulli subiciat servituti, nec cujusvis generis hominibus nisi ipsi principatum illum (quem hodie dicimus comitatum) habuerint. Item do Wulfgaro puero (vel, famulo) meo terras illas apud Baltrytheleage prout pater ejus ipsi illas conquisivit. Item Morcaro terram illam apud Walesho, et illam apud Theagendethorpe, et illam apud Hwitewille, et illam apud Clune, et illam apud Barleburh, et illam apud Ducemannestune, et illam apud Moresburh, et illam apud Eccingtune, et illam apud Bectune, et illam apud Donecestre, et apud Morlgtune. Item do uxori suæ Aldulfestreo, sicut modò constat, cum cibariis, (i. terræ fructibus) et hominibus (colonis scil.) Item do Ælfhelmo cognato meo terras illas in Paltertune, et illas quas (quidam) Segth mihi legavit. Item do Æthelrico fundum illum apud Wibbetofte, et illum apud Twongan, in dies (i. vitam) suos, et post dies suos transeat fundus ille pro animâ meâ, et pro matre ipsius, et pro suâ, in Byrtonam. Atquæ hæ sunt terræ quas ego do (monasterio apud) Byrtone, i. e. inprimis Byrtone, ubi monasterium illud fundatum constat, et Straeton, et Bromleage, et Bedintune, et Gageleage, et Witestun, et Laganford, et Styrleage, et Niwantun apud vicum, et Waededun, et agellus ille quem habeo in altera Niwentune, et Wyneshylle, et Sutton, et Ticenheale, et apud Scenctune, et apud Wicgestane, et apud Halen, et apud Remesleage, et (fundus) ille apud Sciplea, et ille apud Suthtune, et ille apud Actune, (quem teneo) in duorum hominum dies, (i. e. vitam) prout pactum loquitur, et Deorlafestun, quodque eò spec-

tat, id est, Rudegard, et agellus meus in Cotewaltune et Lege, cum omnibus eò spectantibus: Acofre, cum illis quæ eò spectant i. e. Hilum, et Celfedum, et Cetesthurne, et fundus ille hereoto (servitute sic dictæ) obnoxius apud Sut-tune, et Morlege, et Braegeshale, Mortun, et omnis illa jurisdictio (Normanno-Latinis franchisesia) quæ eò spectat, et fundus ille eò pertingens apud Wyllesleage, et Oggode-stun, et Winnefeld et Snodeswic ad Mortunam pertinens, et ille apud Tathawyllan, et fundus ille apud Æappelby, quem emi pecuniâ meâ et apud Westune, et Burtune, et hida (terræ portio scil. alendæ uni familiæ sufficiens) apud Scearnford ad Wiggestanam pertinens, et ille apud Here-burgebyrige, et Ealdeswurthe, et Æelfredingtune, et Ec-cleshale, et apud Waddune, et una hida apud Sceon. Item do conventui in Tamwurthin fundum illum apud Langan-dune, sicut ipsi (monachi) illum mihi antehac locarunt, et habeant ipsi usum fructum (ejus) dimidium et dimidium monachi Byrtonenses, cum in cibariis, tum in hominibus, tum in pecudibus, tum in rebus omnibus. Et episcopus accipiat terram suam apud Bubandune, et accipiant mona-chi Byrtonenses, id quod in fundo illo existit, tam in ho-minibus, quàm in rebus omnibus, et fundum illum episcopo exinde tradant. Item volo ut rex sit dominus monasterii illius quod ego construxi et prædiorum illorum quæ ego illi legavi, Dei in laudem et honorem, pro domino meo, et pro animâ meâ. Et Ælfricus archiepiscopus, et Ælfhelmus frater meus, (volo) ut sint patroni, et amici, et advocati illius loci contra omnes homines, ab eis non in propriam (ipsorum) possessionem (capessendi) nisi secundum sancti Benedicti regulam (curam scilicet habeant ut res et bona loci nemini cedant in peculium, sed omninò pro regulæ S. Benedicti ratione disponantur). Item do filiæ meæ lustricæ (sive in baptismo à me susceptæ) Morcaræ et Ealdgithæ fundum illum apud Staettune, et bullam illam quæ fuit aviæ suæ et monasterio illi apud Byrtune (do) centum equos feros (vel, indomitos) et sedecim equos domitos, (forsan spadones) et præterea quicquid habeo, vivum (scil. sit) vel mortuum, præter ea quæ (supra) legavi. Et Deus omni-potens eam avertat ab omni divino gaudio, et ab omni Christianorum communionem, qui hoc (testamentum) aver-terit, nisi meus proprius naturalis dominus sit. Quin et spero eum adeo bonum, adeoque misericordem (fore) ut nec id ipse facturus sit, neque etiam ab ullo alio fieri sit pas-surus. Valete in Christo.

Hæc est magnifica illa charta (charta donationis scil.) monasterii apud Byrtune, quod Æthelredus rex semper et æternum liberum fecit, Dei in laudem, omniumque sanc-torum ejus in honorem, sicut id Wulfricus antea stabilivit, pro suâ et pro antecessorum suorum animabus et id mona-chis assignavit, ut inibi semper hujus ordinis viri^c sub eorum abbate Deo serviant secundum sancti Benedicti doc-trinam (vel, institutionem.)

NUM. IV.

Carta Æthelredi Regis.

[Adhuc ex eodem Registro, de Burton, fol. 1.]

POSTQUAM malesuada veneniferi serpentis suggestio pri-

um generis humani parentem, invidia fraudulentæ, seduxit edulio pomi, mortis continuè sententia, hujusque vitæ ærumnosa ipsi protoplasto opponitur peregrinatio. Unde et in posteros mortiferæ cumulus damnationis ob multiplices iniquitatum exercitationes adeo excrevit, ut totius adinventor maliciæ diabolus, ab ipsius quam prædiximus, radice originis totam sibi fermè hominum progeniem, divina permissione, et culpa exigente, ad pœnas consociaret gehennales, ejus tumidæ ab initio satellitumque conspirantium præparatas elationi, donec unicus æterni patris verbigena substantia, dolens perisse quæ suæ ymaginebatur similitudini misterio secretiori in ultima seculi ætate virginea sese carne velaret, ac verus Deus verusque homo inter homines sine peccati macula in personæ conversaretur unitate. Idque supernum concilium inimico in tantum celabatur, ut ipsum gula, vana gloria, avaritia quibus armis primum prostraret hominem, adgredi non diffideret; autumans ipsum qui totius bonitatis fons caputque est laqueo iniquæ posse irretiri prævaricationis; sed sacræ Scripturæ testimonio tertio ab ipsa transverberatus veritate, umbras denuò victus repedit infernales. Huic nostræ auctori salutis mox famulatus adfuit angelicus. Eisque omnibus, ita ut diximus, humanitatis exactis, Jesus sancto refectus pneumate, sapientia ætate proficiens et gratia medicamenta restorationis humanæ tali protinus proposuit institutione, "Pœnitentiam (inquiens) agite, appropinquabit enim regnum cœlorum."

Hæcque et alia suæ documenta pietatis multiplicis dignatus est confirmare signis miraculorum, cæcos illuminando, surdis auditum reddendo, mutis loquendi officium, mancis manuum utilitatem, claudis gradiendi possibilitatem, paraliticis membrorum integritatem, leprosis corporis emundationem, lunaticis dæmoniacisque obscensum mentis, mortuis vitam, vivis viam vitæ hujusmodi sententiis celerando: "Currite dum lucem habetis ut non tenebræ vos comprehendant." Verumtamen hostis insidiis antiqui infidelium corda Judæorum inter hæc omnia obduraverunt, ut ipsum mediatorem Dei et hominum post illata probra et flagella cruci adfigere animo non metuerint cæcato. Qui tamen corpus animatum tertia die incorruptibile victor resumpsit, et immortale, discipulisque palandum clausis exhibuit januis, quadraginta inter eos, crebrius illis apparendo, conversatus ymeras, illisque adstantibus et intuentibus die quadragesima cœli petiit habitacula, collocans secum nostræ carnis substantiam in paterna dextera throni, angelis hæc verba apostolis pronunciantibus, "Sic veniet quemadmodum vidistis eum euntem in cælum." De quo adventus sui die ita ipse prophetavit, "Dies," inquit, "ille, dies iræ, dies calamitatis et miseriæ, dies tribulationis et angustiae, dies tenebrarum et caliginis, dies nubis et turbinis, dies tubæ et clangoris."

Tanti siquidem formidine diei adtactus, et tam districto judici placere gestiens, ego Æthelred rex Anglorum, offero ipsi Domino nostro Jesu Christo, libertatem monasterii cujusdam vulgari usu æt Byrtun appellati, ut sit semper cum omnibus quæ sibi subjacent villulis, prædiis, campis, silvis, pratis, pascuis, aquarum decursibus, piscationum hostiis et cunctis necessitatibus humanæ utensilibus, æterna securitate liberrimum, ut illud nobilis progeniei minister Wlfricus extruxit et collegio instituit monachico, dominium loci et in eo habitantium, meæ regali committens dominationi. Habeatque abbas vocabulo Wlfgeat ad hoc ordinatus est primus, liberam facultatem interiùs exteriùsque sub mea ditione illud gubernandi post posito cujuslibet alterius hominis dominio.

Hæc verò libertas hujus privilegii annotatione ideo roboratur, quatinus in ipso loco ejusdem quo prædiximus ordinis familia jugiter regulari more sub abbate tunc sibi prælato juxta S. militans Benedicti adgregetur, spesque præscripti ministri qui hoc Christo contulit monasterium, per puram in ipso habitantium conversationem, sanctamque eorum intercessionem ad cœlestium remunerationem erigatur divitiarum. Verum si quispiam altioris inferiorisve personæ hunc locum devastare, vel quicquam ex eo abstrahere seu minuere aut in servitutem studuerit redigere, tribus tantummodò exceptis, expeditione scilicet, arcis pontisve constructione, sciat se à cœlesti alienigenari gloria, et gehennalia subire tormenta, ubi vermis est non moriens et ignis indeficiens dentiumque stridor intolerabilis, ni citiùs à sua respiscat pravitate. E contrario, si quis hoc donum quod Christo offertur augmentare voluerit, noverit cœlestia

LUCIUS episcopus servus servorum Dei, dilectis filiis Ricardo abbati monasterii de Burthonia, ejusque fratribus tam præsentibus quam futuris regularem vitam professis, imperpetuum. Piæ postulatio voluntatis effectum debet prosequente compleri, ut et devotionis sinceritas laudabiliter enitescat, et utilitas postulata vires indubitanter assumat. Eapropter, dilecti in Domino filii, vestris justis postulationibus vehementer annuimus, et præfatum monasterium de Burthonia, in quo divino estis obsequio mancipati, sub beati Petri et nostra protectione suscipimus, et præsentis scripti privilegio, communimus. Inprimis siquidem statuentes, ut ordo monasticus qui secundum domini et beati Benedicti regulam in eodem monasterio nascitur institutus, perpetuis ibidem temporibus inviolabiliter observetur. Præterea, quascumque possessiones, quæcumque bona, idem monasterium in præsentiarum justè et canonicè possidet, aut in futurum concessionem pontificum, largitione regum vel principum, oblatione fidelium, seu aliis justis modis præstante Domino poterit adipisci, firma vobis vestrisque successoribus et illibata permaneant. In quibus hæc propriis duximus exprimenda vocabulis.

Locum ipsum in quo idem monasterium situm est cum omnibus pertinentiis suis: villam de Burthonia cum ecclesia et omnibus appendiciis suis: villam de Branteston, Sobenhall, terram de Tatenhille, Horniglawe, Straton, Withmere, Ansedelega; villam de Wineshull, Bersicote, Tichenhale; villam de Stapenhulle, Appelby, Aldulfestre, Caldewell; terram de Wulfricheston; villam de Pilatehale; villam de Witestone; villam de Derlaveston, cum omnibus pertinentiis suis; villam de Bromlega, cum ecclesia et omnibus pertinentiis suis; villam de Felda, et villam de Lega, cum ecclesia et omnibus pertinentiis suis, ex dono Wulfrici Spotti vestræ ecclesiæ fundatoris.

Sanè novalium vestrorum quæ propriis manibus vel sumptibus colitis, sive de nutrimentis animalium vestrorum, nullus à vobis decimas extorquere præsumat. Liceat quoque vobis clericos vel laicos è seculo fugientes liberos et absolutos ad conversionem recipere, et eos absque contradictione aliqua retinere. Prohibemus insuper, ut nulli fratrum vestrorum post factam in monasterio vestro professionem fas sit de ipso absque abbatis sui licentia, nisi arctioris religionis obtentu, discedere. Discedentem verò sine communium literarum cautione nullus audeat retinere. In parochialibus verò ecclesiis quas habet, is licet vobis clericos vel sacerdotes eligere, et diocesano episcopo præsentare, quibus si idonei fuerint, episcopus curam animarum committat, et ei de spiritualibus, vobis autem de temporalibus, debeant respondere. Crisma quoque, oleum sanctum, consecrationes altarium seu basilicarum, ordinationes clericorum qui ad sacros ordines fuerint promovendi, à diocesano episcopo vobis sine pravitate aliqua præcipimus exhiberi. Cum autem generale interdictum terræ fuerit, liceat vobis, clausis januis, exclusis excommunicatis et interdictis, non pulsatis campanis, subpressa voce, divina officia celebrare. Sepulturam præterea ipsius loci liberam esse decernimus, ut eorum devotioni et extremæ voluntati qui se illic sepeliri deliberaverint, nisi forte excommunicati vel interdicti sint, nullus obsistat. Salva tamen justitia illarum ecclesiarum quibus mortuorum corpora assumuntur. Prohibemus etiam, ut nullus archiepiscopus, vel episcopus, aut eorum officialis, in vos vel ecclesiam vestram excommunicationis vel suspensionis aut interdicti, sententiam sine manifesta et rationabili causa promulgare præsumat, vel novas aut indebitas exactiones imponat. Libertates insuper, et immunitates, ac rationabiles consuetudines in ecclesia vestra hactenus observatas ratas habemus, easque futuris temporibus illibatas volumus permanere.

Decernimus ergo, ut nulli omnino hominum liceat præfatum monasterium temerè perturbare, aut ejus possessiones auferre, vel ablatas retinere, minuere, seu quibuslibet vexationibus fatigare, sed omnia integra conserventur, eorum pro quorum gubnatione ac sustentatione concessa sunt usibus omnimodis profutura, salva sedis apostolicæ auctoritate et diocesani episcopi canonica justitia. Si quæ igitur in futurum, ecclesiastica secularisve persona, hanc nostræ constitutionis paginam sciens, contra eam temerè venire temptaverit, secundò tertiove communia, nisi reatum suum digna satisfactione correxerit, potestatis honorisque sui careat dignitate, reamque se divino judicio existere de perpetrata iniquitate cognoscat, et à sacratissimo corpore et sanguine Dei et Domini redemptoris nostri Jesu Christi aliena fiat, atque in extremo examine districtæ ultioni subjaceat. Cunctis autem eidem loca sua jura servantibus, sit pax Domini nostri Jesu Christi, quatinus et hinc fructum bonæ actionis percipiant, et apud districtum judicem premia æternæ pacis inveniant. Amen. Amen. Ego Johannes presbyter cardinalis tituli sancti Marci subscribo, &c. Data Veronæ per manum Hugonis sanctæ Romanæ ecclesiæ notarii, iij. non. De coquinaria, v. marcæ, viij^s. iij^d. ob.

Summa summarum, xxiv^{li}. xiv^s. ij^d.

Sub pœna excommunicationis facta fuit ista decimatio, et consimilis per totum regnum Angliæ.

M.CCXXXIII. Ricardus de Insula, abbas sancti Edmundi, quondam abbas Burthoniæ, obiit.

Anno gratiæ M.CC.XL. Otto legatus convocavit omnes abbates, et priores proprios abbates non habentes, totius regni Angliæ apud Londonias, et singulatim super universos et singulos, ad opus domini papæ contra Frethericum imperatorem, tallagium pro voluntate sua imposuit et contributionem; nec erat diœcesanus aliquis sive alius, qui se pro eis murum opponeret contra eum. Abbates etiam qui personaliter coram eo comparuerunt, supra modum gravati fuerunt; qui vero per procuratores facilius evaserunt, redemptione eis imposita minori et leviori.

Abbas Laurentius Burthoniæ æstimans sibi et monasterio suo expedire, coram legato personaliter comparens, de xxx. marcis finem fecit, assidente eidem legato, de domini regis præcepto et licentia speciali, qui etiam suum assensum hujusmodi contributioni præstabat et favorem, domino Radulfo de Nevill, episcopo Cicestriæ, ejusdem cancellario. Tradidit etiam legato, licet invitatus, memoratus abbas, sicut et cæteri, literas suas de tanta pecunia solvenda apud Londonias in festo sancti Nicholai proximo sequentis sigillo suo signatas. Quam quidem pecuniam frater Michael ejusdem

MCCLIV. Isto anno in nocte sancti Leodegarii martyris combusta est villa de Burthonia.

Eodem anno dominus papa ad instantiam regis Angliæ concessit eidem decimam totius ecclesiæ Anglicanæ per triennium percipiendam, exceptis Ordine Cysterciensi et hospitaliorum et templariorum, et licet diversas litteras sigillatim antea diversis super hoc demandasset, tandem tamen eisdem revocatis et non obstantibus, W. episcopi Norwicensi hoc præcise demandavit exequendum. Idem autem episcopus, licet invitatus, mandato hujusmodi obtemperans, per totum regnum in singulis capitulis cujuscumque diœcesis fecit decanum et tres rectores vel vicarios qui fuerint majoris auctoritatis, pro sua voluntate jurare sub forma in ejusdem literis contenta subsequenti.

EDWARDUS Dei gratia rex Angliæ, dominus Hiberniæ, dux Aquitanniæ, omnibus ad quos præsentem literæ pervenerint salutem. Sciatis quod in augmentationem obsequii divini, et in perpetuam memoriam gloriosæ victoriæ quam Deus omnipotens sua gratia nuper nobis de inimicis et rebellibus nostris apud Burton super Trentam in comitatu Staffordiæ contulit, necnon pro relevatione status abbathiæ ejusdem villæ, quæ tunc per prædictos inimicos et rebelles nostros in multo depauperata extitit et destructa, dedimus et concessimus, pro nobis et hæredibus nostris, dilectis nobis in Christo Abbati et Conventui loci prædicti advocaciones ecclesiarum de Tatenhull et de Hanbury, quæ fuerunt Thomæ nuper comitis Lancastriæ inimici et rebellis nostri, et quæ per forisfacturam ejusdem Thomæ ad manus nostras tanquam eschaeta nostra devenerunt, habend. et tenend. sibi et successoribus suis in perpetuum. Super Monasterio de Burton et Rebellibus ibi devictis.

PAPÆ rex devota pedum oscula beatorum. Dum ad mentem reducimus quanta, exortæ nuper in regno nostro,urbationis tempore, religiosi viri, et nobis in Christo dilecti, abbas et monachi monasterii de Burton super Trentam, ordinis sancti Benedicti, Coventriæ et Leichfeldiæ diœcesis, incommoda pertulerunt: et qualiter eorum possessiones et bona, per aggressus nostrorum rebellium, vastata fuerant; necnon ipsorum villa de Burton, etiam dum propè eramus, ipsis rebellibus in fugam conversis, immissis ignibus, reducta in cineres et favillas, gravis patimur anxietatis aculeos, et, pro ipsorum relevandâ penuriâ, eo solertius manus apponere cupimus adjutrices, quo nobis ibidem, cœlitûs attributæ, victoriæ, de ipsis nostris rebellibus, semper effici-mur memores, ac exinde divinis beneplacitis, in pietatis operibus promptiores. Nuper siquidem, pater sancte, pro relevatione status ipsorum abbatis et monachorum, et in augmentum divini obsequii, ac memoriam dictæ nostræ victoriæ, eis, de liberalitate regia, advocaciones ecclesiarum de Tatenhull et Hambury, dictæ diœcesis, donavimus jure perpetuo possidendas: concedentes et licentiam tribuentes eisdem, quod ecclesias illas, ac ecclesiam de Aldulnestre, ejusdem diœcesis, sibi appropriare possent, et in usus proprios tenere; ut, ex ipsorum proventibus, citiûs restaurare deperdita, et faciliûs incumbentia eis onera supportare potuissent. Desiderantes igitur, toto corde, intentionis nostræ propositum, quoad appropriationes dictarum ecclesiarum ipsis religiosiis auctoritate apostolicâ faciendas, optato effectui mancipari, ad vestræ beatitudinis apices duximus recurrendum, votivis affectibus supplicantes, quatinus ad ipsorum religiosorum inopiam, in quam, non ex culpâ propriâ, sed furentis fortunæ injurâ insperatis eventibus, noscuntur incidisse, paternæ pietatis intuitum convertentes, supplicationem (quam vestræ Clementiæ transmittimus præsentibus interclusam, ut magis nota sit vestræ beatitudini intentio nostræ mentis) solitâ benignitate admittere, et juxta speratam fiduciam, tam gratiose expedire dignemini, intuitu caritatis, ut iidem religiosi, per apostolicæ munificentiae largitatem, ab imminente inopiâ relevati, hospitalitatem consuetam, et alia eis incumbentia onera, congruè valeant sup-portare, et eo ferventiores efficiantur ad divina, quo temporalia subsidia sibi senserint non deesse. Conservet, &c. Dat. apud Westmonasterium decimo quinto die Junii.

Placita de Quo Waranto coram W. de Herle et sociis suis itin. in Com. Derb. die Lunæ prox. post Festum Apost. Petri et Pauli, anno regni Regis Edw. III. quarto.

[Ex orig. in Domo Capitul. Westmonast. asservato.]

ABBAS de Burton super Trentam summonitus fuit ad respondendum domino regi de placito quo waranto clamat habere liberam warennam in maneriis suis de Stapenhull et Overe cum membris, et habere sok et sack, thol et them, et infangenthef, et habere totum corrodium et omnes res abbatis et monachorum de Burton quas homines sui affidare poterunt esse suas proprias quietas de theolonio, passagio, pontagio, et omni consuetudine.

Et abbas per Henricum de Asheburn attornatum suum venit, et quo ad warennam in maneriis prædictis superius clamatam dicit quod dominus Henricus quondam rex Angliæ, proavus domini regis nunc, concessit, et carta sua confirmavit Deo et Sanctæ Mariæ de Burton et abbati et monachis ibidem Deo servientibus warennam per totam terram suam, et prohibuit super decem libras forisfacturæ ne aliquis in ea fuget, ne leporem capiat, neque venetur sine licentia abbatis, &c. Et eo waranto clamat warennam prædictam, &c. Et quo ad sok et sak, thol et them, et infangenthef superius clamas dicit quod idem dominus H. rex &c. per eandem cartam suam concessit prædictis abbati et monachis curiam suam plenariam de omnibus placitis et querelis, cum soka et saka, thol et them, et infangenthef, et omnibus consuetudinibus in burgo et extra burgum, in bosco et plano, in aquis, in viis et extra vias, et in omnibus locis, &c. Prohibuit etiam quod totum corrodium et omnes res abbatis et monachorum de Burton quas homines sui affidare poterunt suas esse proprias sint quiete de theolonio, et passagio, et pontagio, et omni consuetudine, &c. Et profert cartam ipsius H. regis proavi, &c. quæ prædictus libertates testatur in forma prædicta cujus dat. est apud Wyndesore duodecimo die Maii anno regni sui undecimo. Et eo waranto clamat ipse libertates illas, &c.

Et Willielmus de Denum qui sequitur pro rege petit quod inquiretur qualiter et quo modo libertatibus prædictis usus est a tempore confectionis cartæ prædictæ, &c. Ideo inquiretur, &c. Juratores dicunt super sacramentum suum quod prædictus abbas et omnes prædecessores sui a tempore concessionum prædictarum bene usi sunt warennis illis in maneriis prædictis prout decet, et similiter infangenthef in prædicto manerio de Overe cum membris, et quod idem abbas habet furcas in eodem manerio de Overe; sed dicunt quod aliquando contigit quod quidam latro captus fuit cum manu opere in prædicto manerio de Stapenhull ad sectam partis et idem latro judicatus fuit in hundredo de Repyn-don; unde dicunt quod nec abbas nec aliquis prædecessorum suorum a tempore concessionis eis factæ de infangenthef unquam usi fuerunt libertate illa in prædicto manerio de Stapenhull, nec ibi habuerunt furcas. Et dicunt quod idem abbas et prædecessores sui a tempore concessionum prædictarum usi sunt quietantiis prædictis. Ideo prædicta libertas de infangenthef capiatur in manu domini regis. Postea Thomas de Tuttebiri et Robertus de Fyndhern fecerunt finem cum domino rege de viginti sol. pro libertate prædicta prædicto abbati rehabenda. Ideo rehabeat, &c. Et idem abbas quo ad libertatem istam et omnes alias superius clamas ad præsens sine die salvo jure regis, &c.

Christi millenis transactis quatuor annis,
Est fundata domus Burtoniæ, cui quoque patronus
Spot Wulfricus erat, si quis de nomine quærat.

1. Wulfgetus monachus Wintoniæ, sicut supradictum est prædicti monasterii de Burton super Trent primus abbas factus est, anno Domini miiij. et regni prædicti regis Etheldredi xxv. et præfuit monasterio xxij. annis, temporibus prædicti Etheldredi, Edmundi, et Canuti regum Angliæ, et obiit die Jovis xij. kal. Maii anno Domini mxxvj. et regni Canuti prædicti x. Prædictus verò Wulfgetus adquisivit à rege Etheldredo villas de Withmere, et de Rolleston pro Allesworth et Alfordington, quæ longè erant à monasterio, pro lx.^a libris in auro et argento, ut patet per cartas de eisdem.

2. Britericus monachus Wintoniæ successit prædicto Wulfgeto, et præfuit monasterio xxiiij. annis, tempore Canuti, Harauldi, Hardekanuti et sancti Edwardi, regum Angliæ, et obiit die Sabbati xij. kal. Maii, anno Domini ml. et dictus sanctus dedit monasterio de Burton, Willington cum ecclesia ejusdem, et Stapynhull cum ecclesia ejusdem.

3. Leuricus monachus Wintoniæ successit dicto Briterico, et præfuit monasterio xxxv. annis tempore S. Edwardi confessoris, Haraldi perjuri, et Willielmi primi regis Angliæ. Et obiit die Lunæ viij. die idus Januarii anno Domini mxxxxv. et dicti regis Willielmi xix. sepultus quoque est. Hic spoliavit feretrum sanctæ Modwenæ quod satis preciosum erat, instinctu cujusdam aurifabri ad alendum inopes, quia fames ægra fuit, de quo Dominus sumpsit vindictam, ut in miraculis dictæ virginis plenius continetur. Et anno ejus xvij. fuit conquestus Angliæ. Item hujus tempore dedit rex Willielmus prædicto monasterio manerium de Overa cum suis pertinentiis; videlicet parva Overa, Fynderna, Henovera, Potlac. Item in Derby ecclesiam sanctæ Mariæ cum suis pertinentiis, duas sedes molendinorum videlicet Cope-castelmyln cum insula ejusdem, le Schirismylne, cum cæteris terris. Et xij. acras prati, cum cæteris consuetudinibus in Walwikstrete ibidem, in recompensatione cæterarum terrarum quas abstulit de prædicto monasterio, ut habetur in libro de Domusdaie apud Wintoniam et Westmonasterium.

4. Galfridus Mala Terra, monachus Wintoniæ successit dicto Leverico, et præfuit monasterio x. annis, tempore Willielmi primi, et Willielmi secundi regum Angliæ. Hic propter dissipationem terrarum cæterorumque bonorum monasterii, inde expulsus est, anno Domini mxciiij. et dicti regis Willielmi secundi septimo. Hujus tempore idem rex Willielmus Rufus dedit monasterio villas de Coton et Cawldwall, &c. ut habetur in libro de Domusdaie apud Wintoniam et Westmonasterium. Item hujus tempore, contigit illud grande miraculum, vel illa horrenda vindicta de duobus rusticis de Stapinhull, apud Drakelow, qui confugerunt ad Rogerium Pictarium comitem de Drake-low, ut habetur in miraculis sanctæ Modwenæ virginis; unde processit illud vulgare dictum, The Devill of Drake-low.

diebus ejusdem, inchoatum fuit novum opus in occidentali fine ecclesiae.

6. Galfridus, monachus et prior Wintoniae successit praedicto Nigello, et praefuit monasterio xxxvj. annis, tempore Henrici et Stephani regum Angliae. Hic cessit sequenti Roberto anno Domini mcl. et obiit die Lunae iiij. non. Augusti anno sequenti, videlicet anno Domini mclj. et dicti regis Stephani xvj. Hic dictavit vitam et miracula sanctae Modwenae virginis, pro qua misit in Hiberniam, ut habetur in prohemio ejusdem. Item construxit speciosum campanile super chorum coopertum plumbo divers. tot. . . . ut habetur in miraculis dictae virginis, in fine.

Abbotsbury Abbey,

IN DORSETSHIRE.

BBOTSBURY Abbey is situated in the hundred of Uggescombe, and deanery of Bridport, in Dorsetshire, a hundred and twenty-seven miles from London.

Coker, in his "Survey of the Countie of Dorset," states, from the Register of this monastery, that a church was built here in the very infancy of Christianity among the Britons by one Bertelfus, a priest, who dedicated it to St. Peter; "unto whom," he adds, "the same saint had often appeared, and amongst other things gave him a charter written with his own hand, which will be needless for me to exemplify; only in it St. Peter professeth to have consecrated the church himself, and to have given it the name of Abodesbyry."^a

Orc, Orcius, Orkingus, or Urkus, steward of the palace to King Canute, with his wife Thola, appear to have been the real founders of this monastery. Thola, or Tola, is said to have purchased Piddle, now Tol-Piddle, which she and her husband gave to it, together with the villis of Abotesbury, Portesham, Helston, and Anstie, all in the countie of Dorset.^b

Reyner dates the foundation of this monastery in 1026.^c Bishop Tanner says, Orcus instituted a society of secular canons here about 1026, who were by him or his widow Tola, in the time of Edward the Confessor, changed into a monastery of the Benedictine order.^d Leland, in his Collectanea, says, that Orcus, having expelled the canons, introduced monks.^e Coker says, the monastery was built by Orcus in 1044, and that the first monks here were brought from Cerne.^f

By a Charter of Inspeximus of the eighth of Edward the Second it appears that King Edward the Confessor granted to Orcus, who stood in the same relation to him as before to King Canute, being his huscarl or domestic servant, the shore in all his land and all wrecks of the same. This Charter is addressed to Alfwold the bishop, Earl Harold, Alfred the sheriff, and the King's ministri of Dorsetshire. By a second Charter the same king gave licence to Thola, widow of Orcus, that she might bequeath her lands and goods to the monastery of St. Peter here, declaring himself, at the same time, protector of the convent and its possessions. This second Charter is addressed to Hereman bishop of Salisbury, who was promoted to that see in 1056. King William the First, by a Charter addressed to the same bishop and copied in the same Inspeximus, declares the abbat and brethren of the monastery, their lands, men, &c. to be under his protection; adding the liberties of sac and soc, tol, theam, and infangentheife.^g

According to the Domesday return, the church of Abbotsbury held, in 1087, twenty-one hides in Abbotsbury, eight hides in Pidele, eighteen in Eltone, twelve in Portesham, five virgates in Sevetone, two hides and a half in Widetone, one carucate in Bourtone, and two hides in Atrem: the whole of these possessions being situated within the limits of Dorsetshire, and the annual value amounting to no less a sum than 69*l.* 5*s.* 6*d.* One hide appertaining to Abbotsbury, with a virgate in Portesham, both of which had been allotted to the monks' table in the time of King Edward the Confessor, are returned as being unjustly detained from the monks by the wife of Hugh fil. Grip.^h

The copy of an inquisition concerning the estates, privileges, and rents of this monastery, taken in the 53d of Henry III. A. D. 1269, made before John le Moyné the king's escheator, and Andrew Wake sheriff of Dorset, at Uggescomb, will be found in the Appendix.ⁱ

In the 10th of Edw. III. the abbat had a Charter of free-warren in Abbotsbury, Portisham, Louke, Graveston, Wodeton Abbas, Finlegh, Witherston, Hilton, Tolepiddle, and Ramsbury, in Dorsetshire; and in Holewell, in the county of Somerset.^k

A confirmation of divers grants was also obtained by the abbat and convent from the king in the 8th year of Henry the Seventh.^l

The nature and revenue of the different possessions of this monastery in the 32d year of Henry the Eighth will be seen in the Abstract of the Ministers Accompts.

Hutchins says, "8 Edw. I. the abbat paid two marks scutage. 14 Hen. II. he accounted for one mark, and one knight's fee on aid for marrying the king's daughter. 6 Ric. I. he paid twenty shillings scutage for redeeming the king. 12, 13 Joh. he held one knight's fee. 30 Hen. III. he paid 20*s.* for one fee on the aid for marrying the king's eldest daughter. 38 Hen. III. he paid 40*s.* for two fees on the aid of making the king's eldest son a knight. 7 Edw. I. he paid 40*s.* for two fees on the scutage of Wales."^m

A chantry called Strangeways Chantry was founded here by indenture tripartite between John abbat of Abbotsbury, William Milton abbat of Milton, and Thomas Strangeways, Esq. dated on the last day of February, 1505. This chantry had conferred upon it the vicarage of the parish church of Portesham, and lands to the yearly value of ten marks; the abbat obliging the monastery for the same to keep a monk, being a priest, to say mass daily, for ever, and other prayers, for the souls of the said Strangeways, his wife and family, as also to pray for King Henry the

GEOFFREY, t. Hen. I.^b

In 1175, 21 Hen. II. this abbey was vacant.^c It was again in the king's hands A. D. 1213, 14 Joh.^d

ROGER DE BREDETON, or, as Hutchins calls him, BREDON, sacrist of the monastery, was made abbat in 1344; the royal assent being given to his election Feb. 11th that year.^e

JOHN DE HELTON, or HILTON, was the next abbat. He received the royal assent Oct. 28th, and had the temporalities restored Oct. 31st, 1256.^f Upon his death,

PHILIP DE SHIREBURN was elected. He obtained the royal assent May 27th, 1283.^g

WILLIAM DE KINGESTON succeeded upon Shireburn's death. The royal assent was given to his election on Jan. 14th, 1294:^h nevertheless, it was afterwards set aside, and the temporalities of the monastery were finally restored on March 2d that year to

BENEDICT DE LODRES, who had been presented as abbat by the bishop of Salisbury.ⁱ Upon his death

RALPH DE SHIRBORN was elected. The king gave his assent to his election July 6th, 1319.^k Upon the death of Ralph,

PETER DE SHIRBORN was elected in the month of February, 1320. The temporalities of the monastery were restored to him on the 12th of March following.^l

WILLIAM LE FAUKENER, or DE FAUCONER, received the royal assent to his election Jan. 29th, and the temporalities were restored Feb. 23d, 1323.^m Upon his death,

WALTER DE SAUNFORD, or SAMFORD, was elected abbat; to whom the temporalities were restored Jan. 26th, 1343.ⁿ

WALTER DE STROKE, or STOKES, succeeded upon Saunford's death. He received the temporalities of the monastery Jan. 17th, 1348.^o Upon his cession,

HENRY TOLRE was elected abbat. The temporalities were restored to him July 16th, 1354.^p

WILLIAM DE CERNE was chosen abbat upon Tolre's death. He received the temporalities Sept. 22, 1376.^q Upon his death, ROBERT BYLSAY was elected; to whom the temporalities were restored Dec. 18th, 1401.^r Hutchins calls him Bisley, or Bilsey.

RICHARD DE PERCY had the temporalities restored to him as abbat, upon Bylsay's death, Dec. 1st, 1426.^s Upon Percy's resignation,

EDWARD WATTON was chosen abbat. The king gave his assent to the election September 22d, and the temporalities were restored Sept. 24th, 1442.^t Watton had previously been prior of the monastery. He died Sept. 23, 1452.^u

WILLIAM WOLLER, WELLER, or WULLER, was elected abbat Oct. 5th, and received the temporalities Oct. 26th, 1452.^x He was buried Nov. 27th, 1468.

HUGH DORCHESTYR was elected abbat Dec. 13th, 1468. He died 17th May, 1496.^y

JOHN ABBOTSBURY, prior of the monastery, was elected abbat June 16th, and received the temporalities Aug. 12th, 1496.^z He died Oct. 8th, 1505.^a

JOHN PORTHAM, who had also been prior, was the next abbat. Hutchins, who calls him PORTESHAM, says, "his parental name seems to have been Pysing, or Peasing, and he probably had the local name of Portesham, from the place of his birth."^b

ROGER RODDEN, alias CORTON, was confirmed abbat Dec 30th, 1534, and received the temporalities Jan. 16th following.^c On March 12th, 1539, he, with the prior and eight monks, surrendered this abbey to William Petre, LL.D.^d The pensions bestowed at the Dissolution will be found in the Appendix of Instruments.^e The site of this monastery was granted in the 35th of Hen. VIII. to Sir Giles Strangeway, Knt.^f

The only REGISTER of this monastery known was that which formerly belonged to the Strangeway family, used by Sir William Dugdale in the Appendix to the present Account; and which was destroyed, together with the mansion-house of the Strangeways at Abbotsbury, in the civil wars of Charles the First.^g

Leland, in his Collectanea, edit. 1770, vol. iii. p. 149, notices the following manuscripts which he saw in the LIBRARY of Abbotsbury abbey:

"Paschasius Rodbertus super Lamentationes Hieremias.

The Cottonian manuscript Cleop. E. iv. fol. 57 b, contains the following appointment from Thomas Legh, LL.D. one of the visitors of the monastery, for a person of the name of Vincent to be prior. It is without date.

"In Dei nomine Amen. Nos Thomas Legh, legum doctor, illustrissimi domini regis in mon. de Abbotesbury visitator specialiter deputatus, dompnus . . . Vincent auctoritate nobis in hac parte commissa in priorem dictæ domus constituimus, mandantes omnibus et singulis officium suum concernen. similiter pareant et intendant, sub pœna regii contemptus. Et eidem insuper mandantes ut debite suum officium exequatur."

"ABBURY nuper MON. Feod. Egidii Strangways mil. capit.

VOL. III.

Albinus de Trinitate, ad Carolum magnum.
Prosper de Vita contemplativa et activa."

The SEAL of this abbey exhibits an ancient church, built in a simple style of architecture, in the form of a cross. It was first engraved by Vertue for the Society of Antiquaries. The impression whence the print was taken, appendant to the Surrender in the Augmentation Office, is greatly mutilated.

The ABBEY-RUINS consist of a large Barn; the Gatehouse, or principal entrance; a portion of the walls; a large stable supposed to have been the Dormitory; a ruined porch, which apparently belonged to the conventual church; and two Buildings, conjectured to have been the malt-house and brew-house.^a The barn, which is very ancient, when entire, was the largest in the county of Dorset. One half of it only is now used: the walls of the remaining part, covered with ivy, are in a less perfect state.

The Messrs. Buck engraved a view of the ruins of this abbey in 1733. The head-piece to the account of the hundred of Uggescomb in Hutchins's History of Dorset represents what remained in 1761.^b

The chapel of St. Mary, at the east end of the conventual church, of very elegant architecture, was preserved after the Dissolution by Sir Giles Strangeways as a place of sepulture for his family; but it was demolished when the mansion-house, which had been built out of the abbey-materials, was destroyed.

Leland, in his Collectanea, and Hutchins, have preserved the names of various persons who had willed to be interred in the conventual church; among whom were the founder Orcus and his wife Thola.^c

West of the abbey, under Chapel-Hill, is a ground of fourteen acres, supposed to have been the abbey-garden, and still so called, where are the remains of terraces and fish-ponds.

Hic innotescat ex hoc scripto, quod Orcyus dedit [vel dedicavit] sodalitiæ aulam et locum apud Abbodesberiam ad laudem Dei, et S. Petri et fraternitatis, [à seipso] dum vixerit possidenda; et postea in perpetuam sui et uxoris suæ memoriam; qui hoc averterit, inter Deum sit et ipsum [rationem scil. super eo Deo reddat] in magno [vel generali] iudicio. Hoc autem est pactum quod Orcyus et contubernales apud Abbodesberiam elegerunt [i. fecerunt] ad laudem Dei, et ad honorem sancti Petri atque ad animarum suarum opus [utilitatem sc. vel subsidium]. Id est, inprimis, tertia ante Petri missam [i. festum] nocte, sodalium unusquisque unum denarium, sive ceræ quantitatem æquivalentem, utrum horum magis expediat monasterio conferat: et in vigilia festi duo sodales [pendant] unum panem amplum, bene paratum, et bene cribratum, ad nostram communem eleemosynam. Et hebdomadâ ante Petri missæ diem [vel festum] quintâ, contribuat sodalium quisque unum sextarium contubernali [dictum] frumento pluro plenum, et persolvatur id intra biduum, sub ingressus mulctâ [non solventibus irrogandâ: mulcta fortè summam vel symbolam à quolibet in sodalium admissio introitus nomine, solvendam æquivalente:] trium scilicet frumenti sextariorum. Et lignum persolvatur [i. inferatur] intra triduum post illam tritici collationem: unusquisque [scilicet] verus sodalis unum (inferat) ligni onus, et non sodales [ni fratrum album scil. tanquam contributarii, licet fortè indigna, et fratribus cohabitantes, nondum relati] duo: sin minus unum reddant tritici sextarium [illum] contubernalem [dictum]. Et qui onus susceperit, illud autem, uti par erit, non præstiterit, fit introitus sui reus [mulctam scil. incurrat, summam vel symbolam, introitus nomine, solutam, æquivalentem] sine ulla indulgentia. Porro, sodalis qui alium intra contubernium deditâ operâ malè tractaverit, ingressu suo id redimat [vel compenset, mulctam scil. de quâ supra, pendendo] apud universam societatem, et postea apud illum quem malè tractaverit, prout poterit. Et si compensare recusaverit, sodalitus mulctetur [i. expellatur] nec alterius cujuscunque contubernii capax sit. Plures autem (quàm par erit) qui introduxerit homines absque dispensatoris et obsonatorum licentiâ, introitu suo mulctetur [mulctam scil. de qua supra solvendo].

Et si nostræ fraternitatis mortem quis obierit, defuncto conferat unusquisque socius denarium pro ejus animâ, [vel, in animæ defuncti remedium:] aut in triplum mulctetur. Et si nostrum quis infirmetur intra sexaginta abhinc millia, inveniamus [i. congregemus] quindecim viros qui eum abducant: si autem decesserit xxx. qui ad locum illum quem ipse vivens desideraverit, eum deferant. Si verò in vicinia decesserit, notificetur dispensatori quem ad locum corpus pertinet; dispensator autem postea tot sodalibus quot, vel ad eos equitando vel mittendo omnino poterit notificet, hoc fine, ut eò se conferant, et corpori honorabiliter assistant, atque ad cœnobium deferant, ac pro anima [defuncti] sedulò orent. Id meritò vocetur sodalicium, si ita faciemus, et bene conveniet, tum Dei tum mundi intuitu, quoniam nescimus quis nostrum moriatur primus. Credimus autem, Dei auxilio freti nobis omnibus hoc pactum antedictum, id si rectè observemus profuturum.

Deum omnipotentem oremus sedulò, intimo corde, ut nostri misereatur, et similiter apostulum ejus sanctum Petrum, ut pro nobis intercedat, et viam nostram ad requiem æternam ampliet [vel, aperiat]. Amoris enim ejus intuitu hoc sodalium congregavimus [i. instituimus]. Ipse [siquidem] potestatem habet in cœlo, ut in cœlum admittere possit quos voluerit, et repellere quos [ingredi] noluerit, sicut Christus ipse dixit ei in Evangelio. "Petre, tibi regni cœlorum clavem trado, et quicquid tu ligari velis in terra, id solvetur in cœlo." Confidamus et speremus in eo, ut nos, hoc in mundo, semper custodiat, et post animarum nostrarum excessum, auxilium nobis ferat in requie æterna. Amen.

manu surreptum, aut hostium igne consumptum, magno cum suo ipsius et rei antiquæ dispendio, periisse justè doleamus.]

Et monachus autem qui ipsam missam cotidie, ut præmittitur, celebraverit, percipiet in fine cujuslibet septimanæ, pro salario suo, quatuordecim denarios legalis monetæ Angliæ solvendo ac fideliter et integrè sibi liberandos apud scaccarium ejusdem abbatiæ per manus abbatis vel receptoris sui pro tempore tunc ibidem existentis, ultra salarium, proventum, et emolumentum ipsi monacho à dicto monasterio seu aliter solvi, tradi, et liberari consueta.

Concedunt etiam prædicti abbas et conventus pro se et successoribus suis, quod dies anniversarius ipsorum Thomæ et Alianoræ annuatim imperpetuum quolibet secundo die mensis Aprilis, in eodem monasterio solempniter observetur cum exequiis defunctorum die immediatè præcedenti post prandium solempniter decantandis, et missa solempnis de Requiem, ut est moris, ipso secundo die ad magnum altare ejusdem monasterii, cum orationibus, suffragiis, et ceremoniis idoneis celebretur, nisi illo secundo die festum Paschæ, vel dominica in passione Domini, seu ebdomada in Passione, vel ebdomada infra octavas Paschæ illo tempore contigerit, quo casu, quamcitiùs postea commodè fieri poterit modo prædicto celebretur, quarum exequiarum et missarum solempnitatum abbas monasterii prædicti pro tempore existens, continuè erit executor, si justa causa non fuerit impeditus, quo casu dignior persona illius monasterii tunc præsens præmissa solempnia exequetur. Et idem abbas et successores sui annuatim in ipso anniversario quatuor cereos in illis exequiis et missa in choro ibidem ardentes, et quatuor cereos circa funerale tunc ibidem ardentes inveniet. Necnon inter pauperes tunc adesse contingentes, post missam illam finitam, decem solidos bonæ monetæ seu eorundem valorem in pane frumentario confecto distribuet seu distribui faciet imperpetuum, et sacristæ monasterii prædicti pro luminariis prædictis inveniendis duos solidos, et pro pane vino et cereis cotidie in missis prædictis expendendis duos solidos annuatim solvet. Et eodem die anniversario idem abbas et successores sui abbati et conventui monasterii prædicti pro eorum pietancia octo solidos deliberabit sue deliberari faciet annuatim imperpetuum, et clericis in eodem anniversario pulsantibus quatuor denarios, et bedmanno qui obitum et anniversarium hujusmodi denunciabit annuatim quatuor denarios, et monachis junioribus sacerdotibus non existentibus, et psalterium tunc ibidem dicentibus, duodecim denarios annuatim distribuet vel distribui faciet, et cuidam pauperi homini per præfatum abbatem et successores suos juxta orationem Humfridi Stafford militis, fundatoris cujusdam missæ ibidem, vulgariter Staffords-Masse nuncupatæ electo, sex solidos et octo denarios, ad festa Paschæ et sancti Michaelis archangeli annuatim æquis portionibus persolvat imperpetuum, ut idem pauper, ut præmittitur, per abbates illos solomodo et non per aliquos hæredes ipsius Alianoræ electus, tam prædictæ missæ cotidianæ ipsius Humfridi, quam ipsius Alianoræ, si commodè fieri poterit, adesse, et sacerdotes missas illas dicentes adjuvet, et ministret, si literatus existet.

Et ulterius idem abbas et conventus et successores sui imperpetuum, de tempore in tempus, omnimoda vestimenta, missalia, calices, corporalia, et cætera omnia necessaria in singulis hujusmodi missis ibidem dicendis, et omnia alia prædicto altari incumbencia et oportuna invenient. Volunt insuper et concedunt præfati abbas et conventus pro se et successoribus suis, quod bene liceat episcopo loci illius diocesano pro tempore existenti, in qualibet visitatione sua ordinaria, necnon aliis temporibus congruis, per se aut per alium sufficientem deputatum suum vel deputatos suos absque onere tamen ipsorum abbatis et conventus, auscultare et inquirere quotiens sibi videbitur oportunum, an præmissa omnia et singula modo et forma sicuti præmittitur, in omnibus et per omnia continuè sint facta, dicta, impleta, et fideliter observata.

Et si defectum in præmissis vel in aliquo præmissorum per culpam sive negligentiam dictorum abbatis et conventus, aut eorum successorum vel alicujus eorundem reperiri contigerit, ipsi abbas et conventus obligant se et successores suos per præsentem eidem episcopo loci prædicti diocesano, et ejus successoribus, necnon præfatis executoribus et ipsius Alianoræ hæredibus, ad solvendum pro qualibet missa hujusmodi ommissa, eidem episcopo diocesano pro tempore existenti, tres solidos et quatuor denarios sterlingorum, statim et immediatè post hujusmodi omissionem solvendo, et de terris et tenementis dictorum abbatis et conventus ibidem levandos, et tres solidos et quatuor denarios præfatis executoribus, et post eorum decessum, præfatis hæredibus solvendo et, ut præfertur, levandos. Ita tamen et proviso, quòd abbas et conventus prædicti et eorum successores, propter culpam, negligentiam, defectum, vel pœnam hujusmodi, extra monasterium suum prædictum non vocentur, trahantur, vel turbentur, dummodo culpa aut negligentia illa non sit nimium multiplicata aut continuata.

Proviso semper, quod si monachorum monasterii de Abbotsbury prædicti numerum per mortem, infirmitatem, infortunium, aliamve justam et rationabilem causam, imposterum minui contigerit, ita quod plures quam octo monachi presbyteri non sint in monasterio prædicto, idonei et potentes ad missas dietim celebrandas, quod tunc ipsi abbas et conventus et successores sui, à celebratione hujusmodi cotidianæ missæ vocatæ Strangways Masse exonerentur, quousque numerus monachorum ibidem presbyterorum creverit et auctus fuerit usque ad numerum novem monachorum, missas legere valentium, et ydoneorum. Et in hoc casu, ac pro tempore quo numerus monachorum, ut præfertur, defecerit, quilibet monachus ipsorum monachorum presbyterorum infra numerum novem monachorum presbyterorum, ut prædicatur, pro tempore deficientium, dicet quolibet die in missa sua per eum dicenda specialem memoriam pro bono statu prædictorum viventium, inter vivos videlicet collectas sive orationes prædictas pro vivis prænotatas, et pro animabus defunctorum, inter mortuos, videlicet, orationes et collectas suprascriptas pro eis ut decet superiùs ordinatas: et pro speciali memoria illa per eosdem monachos sic dicenda quilibet eorundem octo monachorum easdem orationes et collectas in missis suis sic cotidiè dicentium, percipiet in fine cujuslibet septimanæ toto tempore quo numerus prædictorum novem monachorum defecerit, duos denarios per manus abbatis vel receptoris sui pro tempore existentis, fideliter persolvendo.

Abbey of St. Bennet of Hulme,

IN NORFOLK.

HIS solitary place among the marshes, says Bishop Tanner, then known by the name of Cowholm and Calvescroft, was given by a little prince called Horn to a society of religious heremites, under the government of one SUNEMAN, about the year 800, who (with the chapel of St. Benedict by them here built) were all destroyed in the general devastation of this country by the Danes under Hinguar and Hubba, A. D. 870. In the next century a holy man called WOLFRIC gathered seven companions hither, and rebuilt the chapel and houses; they had lived here sixty years when King Canute thought fit to found and endow this place for an abbey of black monks to the honour of St. Benedict, before A. D. 1020.^a date the building of this monastery as subsequent to Canute's return from Rome in the year 1031: but Bishop Tanner justly observes, that it should rather be placed in the very beginning of his reign; otherwise, how could a colony of thirteen monks, with books, ornaments, &c. have been sent hence to St. Edmundsbury A. D. 1020, or 1021. Archbishop Wlstan is also one of the witnesses to Canute's charter, who died in 1023.^d Canute's charter bestows upon the monastery the manors of Horning, Ludham, and Neteshird;^e in the first of which, about fourteen miles from Norwich, the abbey was situated.

The next charter to the monastery upon record is that of King Edward the Confessor. Among the possessions which it enumerates we find the vill and church of Horning; the hundred of Turnstede; the churches and vill of Neteshird; the churches of Hovetone and Belhae, with the vill of Hovetone; lands in Suthwalsham which had belonged to Ralph Stalre; the church and vill of Withestede; the church of Hanninge, with the land in Hanninge which had belonged to Edric the stiresman (or admiral to K. Edward the Confessor); the churches and vills of Thurgartun and Thweyt; the church of Calethorp, with the land in that vill which had belonged to Egelwin the alderman; the churches of Erpingham and Antingham, with the land in those vills which had been Edric Stiresman's; the church and vill of Northwalsham; the church of Swaneton, with the land in the vill of the same which had been Saxy's; the churches of Scothowe and Lammesse, with the land in those vills, and in Estone and Hobbesse, which had been Egelwin's; the church and vill of Ludham; the church of Bestone, with the land there which had been Egelwin's; the church of Stalham, with the land which had been Odulf's; the church of Waxtonesham, with the land which had been Edric Stiresman's; the churches of Winterton and Sumerton, with the land which had been Godric's; the churches of Thirne and Askeby, with the land in those vills and in Rollesby which had been Egelwin's; the church of Castre, with the land in that vill which had belonged to Grimolf the Dane; the land at Redham and Nortune which had been Egelwin's; the church of Bastwick, and the land in that vill which had been Egelwin's; the church of Randewrthe, with the land which had belonged to Egelward the priest; the church of St. Martin at Shotesham, with the land there and in Grenesvill which had belonged to Brictrith; and, lastly, the land in Tybenham which had been Egelwin's. Among the privileges we find sac, soc, tol, theam, infangenthef, grithbriche, forestal, wreck of sea, hamsocne, blodewite, flithwite, ferdwite, flemmenfirthe, haverpeni, and wardpeni, with freedom from toll throughout England.^a

Blomefield says this abbey was fortified by the monks with strong walls, and that it resembled more a castle than a cloister, and, as tradition says, held out some time against King William the First, till betrayed by the treachery of one of the monks, on condition of his being made abbat, who on his promotion was ordered to be hanged directly.^b No historical evidence, however, appears to support this tradition.

The extended enumeration of the abbey property (which laid entirely in Norfolk), as preserved in the Domesday Survey will be found in the Appendix of Instruments.^c The money-value of the different estates appears to have increased greatly between the time of King Edward the Confessor and the period of taking the Conqueror's inquests. As is usual in the second volume of Domesday, the live stock upon the manors is frequently enumerated.

A confirmatory charter from King William the Second, relating to a hundred acres of arable land and six of meadow in Burgh, with a reference to the Domesday Survey as then preserved at Winchester, will also be found in the Appendix:^d together with three charters of King Henry the First; one relating to the churches of Scothowe and Lammesse,^e one granting free-warren on the lands of the monks in Swantone and Bastwyk,^f and one respecting a quit-claim of land in Hardele.^g

K. Stephen and the Empress Maud both confirmed the liberties of this monastery in their fullest extent. King Stephen's charter is dated at Norwich;^h the Empress Matilda's at Oxford, in 1140.ⁱ From King Stephen, also, the monks of St. Bennets afterwards received the two hundreds of Fleg, and Happinge hundred, with their respective rents and customs;^k together with a grant of a small portion of land in Yarmouth.^l

It is singular that the Register of Hulme, from which these several charters have been copied, should, among the royal charters to the monastery, contain a copy of the Instrument by which Stephen ensured the succession of the crown of England to King Henry the Second.

The charters of liberties granted to the monks by King Henry the Second and King Richard the First^m were couched as near as possible in the same terms with those of King Stephen and the Empress Maud. The charters of King Edward the Confessor, the Empress Matilda, King Henry the Second, and King Richard the First were recited and confirmed by King Edward the First in his fourteenth year.ⁿ

From King Henry the Second the monks of St. Bennet received an express charter of confirmation of their general exemption from toll.^o An Instrument, in the name of Eleanor his queen, relating to the manor of Ouby, will also be found in the Appendix; framed, in all probability, while the king was absent in foreign parts.^p

From King Henry the Third the monks received a license to hold two fairs annually at Grabbardesferie, dated in the thirty-first year of his reign;^q and a grant of free-warren made in his thirty-seventh year.^r

Among the Papal privileges to this monastery the most important appear to have been those of Pope Eugenius and Pope Lucius the Second.^s

The gradual erection of the buildings of this abbey will be best noticed in the accounts of the respective abbats, according to whose care or negligence in the management of the revenues the various structures which composed it rose or were dilapidated.

Our most important information upon this head is derived from an imperfect folio leaf, written in small columns, prefixed to a Chronicle by a monk of Hulme, preserved in the Cottonian library, and compiled at the close of the thirteenth century.^t

ABBATS OF ST. BENNET OF HULME.

WOLFRIC, according to Brompton, was adopted as the first abbat upon Canute's foundation.^u He was succeeded by

ELSINUS, or ALFINUS, who is expressly stated to have detached the colony from this monastery in 1020, when the secular priests were expelled from Bury St. Edmund.^x To this abbat, it appears, the monks of St. Bennet Hulme were first indebted for a church of stone.^y The names of the persons more immediately concerned in the construction of the building are probably preserved among the "Nomina eorum qui debent habere mandata in cœna Domini cum monachis viventibus:"^z among whom we find "Thuru'dus et Edwardus ædificatores hujus ecclesiæ." Elsinus was abbat in 1046, when Edward the Confessor gave his charter.^a

THURSTAN, who is also called THURSTANUS DE LUDHAM, was the next abbat: the leaf prefixed to John of Oxenede's Chronicle calls him "operis incepti promotor sollicitus, et officinorum monasterii sui ædificator indefessus."^b

^a See Num. III. Sir William Dugdale's copies of this and Canute's charter have been collated with the Cottonian MS. Galba E. II., whence they were transcribed, with great advantage.

^b Hist. Norf. ut supr. So strong, however, was the abbey considered at a later period, that in 1382, we are told, certain insurgents who endeavoured to raise a rebellion in Norfolk contemplated the occupation of it as a fortress, if driven from Norwich. ^a Willis, Mit. Abb. vol. i. p. 119, by some strange mistake dates abbat Wolfric's death in 1046.

^b MS. Cotton. Nero D. II. ut supr.

William of Worcestre ascribes the construction of the dormitory to his time.^a Abbat Thurstan died on the nones of October, 1064.^b He is said to have been interred before the altar of St. Michael, with the following verses on his tomb:

"Abbas mausoleo Thurstanus pausat in isto,
Qui fuit egregius pastor gregis ipse secundus.
Hujus cenobii decus, sibi gaudia cœli
Det, cujus exequias celebravimus æque dolentes, Nonis Octobris cui Christus misereatur."

ALWOLD, or ETHELWOLD, succeeded Thurstan. Blomefield, on the authority of William of Worcester, states, that King Harold gave Alwold the custody of the county of Norfolk; but that on the Conquest he fled into Denmark through fear of William, and never returned.^d The testimony of the fragment prefixed to John of Oxenede's Chronicle, however, is more to be relied on: it states him to have been Harold's admiral, to have been persecuted by the Conqueror, but to have continued in his abbacy till his death, which happened on the 18th of the kalends of December, 1089.^e

RALPH, a Norman by descent, is considered in the fragment just noticed as the fourth abbat. He died on the 2d of the nones of October, 1101.^f

RICHERUS, or, as Willis calls him, RICHARDUS, another Norman, succeeded Ralph. He is stated to have completed the western bell-tower, which abbat Alwold had begun: but he is also stated to have done much mischief to the revenues of the monastery in granting out the abbey lands to his relations.^g He died on the 14th of the kalends of February, A. D. 1125.

CONRAD, a monk and sacrist of the church of the Holy Trinity at Canterbury, succeeded Richerus. He brought with him to St. Bennet of Hulme several relics of St. Dunstan; and among others, a cup fabricated by the saint's own hands, which appears to have been long preserved in the monastery.^h A charter from this abbat, which he offered upon the altar of his church, appropriating certain lands in Houetone and North Walsham to the table of the monks, will be found in the Appendix of Instruments.ⁱ William of Worcester calls him King Henry the First's confessor.^k He died on the 13th of the kalends of March, A. D. 1127.^l

WILLIAM BASSET, of whom William of Worcester speaks as "de alta progenie,"^m was the next abbat. Blomefield, without sufficient reason, suspects him to have held the office at least as early as 1124.ⁿ According to the author of Neustria Pia, his name was Bassus; and he was originally a monk of Utica in Normandy. The leaf prefixed to John of Oxenede's Chronicle says, "Willielmus cognomento Basset, substantiæ monasterii sui aliquantulum dilapidator. Feoffavit antecessorem Petri de Alto bosco, et fecit eum de feodo Senescallum; et terram de Waxtonesham cuidam, ac terram de Karleton Fourhowe alteri hæreditarie dedit."^o He died, according to the same authority, in 1134. William of Worcester says in 1133.^p

ANSELM, prior of Dover, succeeded William Basset. He died on the 5th of the ides of December, 1140.^q

DANIEL, from various circumstances, as well as from the express statement of the entry already quoted in the account of Richerus^r from the Cottonian Register of Hulme, appears to have been twice abbat. The first time he seems to have been removed by King Stephen, and

HUGH, the nephew of that monarch, substituted in his room. William of Worcester says, "HUGO, nepos Stephani regis, miles regis nobilis, qui factus monachus loco Danielis per regem, viriliter defendit jura sancti Benedicti."^s

The leaf in the Cottonian volume Nero D. II. states his assumption of the monastic garb to have originated in the sufferings arising from a wound.^t It also details an anecdote of his subsequent life, which the reader will have ^a "Dormitorium fuit constructum circa suum tempus." Itin. Will. de Worcestre, edit. Nasm. p. 348. The dormitory is ascribed on clearer authority to abbat Daniel.

^b Willis, again by mistake, makes Thurstan to have been abbat from 1064 to 1089. Mit. Ab. ut supr.

^c The writer considering Thurstan as the second abbat, and excluding Wolfrie from the list.

^d Hist. Norf. vol. v. p. 1429. William of Worcester says, "1089. Ethelwoldus, habuit custodiam patriæ Norf. sub Haroldo rege, et fecit . . . sed ex timore Willelmi Conquestoris fugiebat in Daniam, nec revenit." edit. Nasm. ut supr.

^e "Huic etiam a rege Haraldo marina committebatur custodia; qua de causa a Willielmo Conquestore non parva sustinuit discrimina. Hic per quatuor regum tempora in sua vixit abbatia, sancti scilicet Edwardi, Haraldus proditoris, Willielmi Conquestoris, et Willielmi Rufi filii ejus. In cujus regni anno iij^o. mense Decembri xvij^o. kal. ejusdem anno incarnationis Dominicæ Mlxxxix. vitæ term. fecit." MS. Cott. Nero D. II. ut supr.

^g The fragment so often quoted says, "Hic constituit famulos cenobii, prioris, et obedientiariorum, liberationes et stipendia ab abbate percipere. Hic etiam campanarium occidentale quod abbas Alwoldus imperfectum reliquit ad finem perfectum perduxit. Insuper et duas majores fundi fecit campanas. Hic ad neptem suam cuidam nobili maritanda, terra de Rollesby cum pertinentiis ab ecclesia S. Benedicti alienavit. Qui postquam abbatiam suam ut voluit disposuerat." Ibid.

The Register of Hulme in the Cottonian library is still more particular in regard to the alienations made by Richerus and some of his successors: viz.

"Tempore gloriosi regis Henrici primi fuerunt abbates in Anglia, quorum alii ædificabant, alii vero destruebant ecclesias suas, sed non per eum neque per preceptum ejus. Ex quibus fuit abbas Richerus, de Holm, qui ecclesiam nostram vastavit donando terras et possessiones parentibus suis, fratribus, nepotibus, neptis, quæ reddebant firmam ad victum monachorum et ad hospitalitatem illius loci manutenendam, et ad opera Ecclesiæ sustinenda. Istæ sunt terræ quas prædictus abbas Richerus foras de dominio posuit. Bertæ nepti suæ dedit terram apud Castrum in maritagium, quæ inveniebat corredium abbatiae xv. diebus. Matildæ nepti suæ dedit in maritagium terram de Wintertona et de Sumertona quæ valet x. marc. per annum pro xxv. sol. ad coquinam abbatibus et monachorum. Terram illam habet injuste Johannes filius ejus qui vi disforciat abbati et monachis etiam illos xxv. solidos et homines de feudo illo destruit, et de terra projecit et miserabiliter pauperes facit. Roberto fratri suo dedit terram de Stalham et de Ingham et de Besetona quæ per unum mensem victum reddebat ecclesiæ. Terram de Roluesby dedit foras de dominio quæ inveniebat abbatiae victum xv. diebus. Terram de Grenesvilla et de Hardelee posuit foras de dominio et terram de Parva Hobossa quæ per viij. dies pascit abbatiam. Sed quia longum est omnia dinumerare tantum dedit ille Richerus et successores ejus abbates de Hulmo foris de dominiis et terris et possessionibus quod non remanserunt nobis plusquam quindecim carucatæ terræ postquam bonæ memoriæ rex Henricus suscepit coronam. Post obitum vero ejus Anselmus abbas foras dedit Tybenham, quæ inveniebat omni abbatiae corredium xv. diebus. Et terras et pasturas apud Basingham et Turgarton quas Ricardus filius Bondæ tenet. Et terram de Ouby quam Willielmus tenet. Et terram de Tueyt et de Pastone quas Osbernus presbiter tenet. Hæc ipse et alia multa. Abbas autem Daniel, prima vice, quando fuit primitus abbas ibi dedit Grenesvillam Roberto Picot. Et Hugoni filio Elurici dedit Waxtonesham quæ pertinet ad coquinam monachorum. Et Willielmo de Hasting dedit molendinum de Westwyc et Wicherefeld. Abbas etiam Hugo dedit Nicholao clerico terram de Walesham cum mariscis ovium salinis, et alium mariscum cum salinis et ovibus quem homines abbatiae mercati sunt de Philippo fratre Gaufridi Ridel pro l. marcis argenti. Et Roberto fratri Symonis dedit terram de Ling in North Walsham. Et Rogero Blenc dedit terram apud Hecham. Iste Hugo abbas fuit nepos Stephani regis. Et quando Daniel fuit secundo abbas dedit Nicholao clerico terram et homines apud Yrsted, et Nicholao de Burewelle dedit terram apud Antingham. Et homines de Houetone quos invenit in dominio dedit Petro de Houetone. Hæc et alia multa foras dederint quæ modo ad memoriam non recurrunt." Reg. S. Bened. de Hulmo, Cott. Galba E. II. fol. 53 b.

^h "Hic casulam sancti Dunstani et benedictionarium ejusdem, et aliam casulam rubeam, cum CALICE quam ipse sanctus propriis manibus fabricavit, secum apud S. Benedictum detulit, qui hactenus cum honore ibidem conservantur." MS. Cotton. Nero D. II. fol. 214.

DANIEL was again restored. William of Worcester says, "1153. Daniel fuit vitriarius et laicus, sed sapiens; rex Stephanus, si scivisset cantare missam, faceret ipsum archiepiscopum Cantuariæ. Habuit uxorem et filium nomine Henricum."^b The Cottonian fragment in the manuscript Nero D. II. says, "qui ante conversionem suam uxorem habuit et filium H."^c Abbat Daniel is recorded to have built the chapter-house and dormitory of the monastery, as well as the hospital of St. James at Horning, at the head of the causey going down to St. Bennet's abbey.^d He died on the 6th of the ides of November, A. D. 1153.

WILLIAM, the second abbat of the name, who succeeded Daniel, died on the 6th of the ides of February, 1168.^e

THOMAS, whom William of Worcester calls the good abbat, is the next upon the list. He built the Refectory and the middle portion of the cloister.^f His death is placed on the 3d of the ides of Sept. 1186.^g

RALPH, prior of the monastery, was elected abbat upon Thomas's death. The Cottonian fragment, so often quoted, enlarges much upon the benefits which the abbey derived from him. "Hic alteram Claustri partem, dimidiam Infirmariam cum capella et claustro ejusdem a fundamentis construxit. Ecclesiam, refectorium, dormitorium, capitulum, infirmariam, et cæteras officinas plumbo cooperiri fecit. Ecclesias vero de Houetone quas in usus proprios adquisierat in utilitatem diversarum monasterii sui officinarum per portiones sagaciter prout cuque sibi videbatur expedire divisit." He died on the 11th of the nones of February, 1210, during the Interdict; when, in consequence, he was buried without the cemetery. One of his successors, however, abbat Reginald, removed his body at a subsequent period into the conventual church.^h

JOHN, a monk of St. Edmundsbury, who, according to William of Worcester, was also called JOHN LE CHAMIEL, and, according to Blomefield, JOHN LE CHAUNCEL, or, CHAMONT, Willis says CHAMANT, was the next abbat. The Cottonian fragment merely says of him, "Hic susceptam a rege S. Benedicti Baroniam, per dimidium annum et amplius gubernabat, et lampadem ante altare sanctæ Mariæ jugiter nocte dieque ardere constituit."ⁱ The shortness of his rule proves what Blomefield asserts, that during the greater part of the Interdict the abbey of St. Bennet of Hulme was in the king's hands.^k Abbat John died in 1213; when suscepit habitum. Qui convalescens de infirmitate stetit per aliquod tempus in eadem religione et postea rege avunculo suo agente factus est abbas sancti Benedicti de Hulmo."

^a "Qui jura et libertates ecclesiæ suæ viriliter ac strenue defendebat; maxime eo quod de nobili genere esset tota illum metuebat patria. Unde vicecomes quidam nomine Wymerus Caperun eum exosum habebat, per quem quædam muliercula latenter lectuli abbatis ignorantis et dormientis introducta ab insidiatoribus inventa, apud manerium suum de Syleby, clamore levato, ipsum abbatem innocentem testiculis privavit. Qui tanti confratris scandali pudore patriam ac provinciam relinquens cessit abbatie suæ et loco. Qui postea agente rege Stephano avunculo suo abbatiam Certeseye ubi vitæ terminum fecit adeptus est."

It is not, at first sight, easy, perhaps, to reconcile this statement with the notice which has been already taken of abbat Hugh in the account of Chertsey in the first volume of the present work. (See vol. i. p. 423.) The attainable memoranda respecting the abbats of that monastery in the earlier period of its history are few and indistinct. The HUGH who became abbat there in 1107 was decidedly a different person from the nephew of King Stephen, who must now be added to the list between abbat DANIEL, who occurs in 1149, and AYMER, who is noticed in the Liber Niger Scaccarii, about the year 1175.

REGINALD was elected abbat. The Cottonian fragment says that Reginald built the hall for strangers.¹ William of Worcester calls him "præclarissimus in ædificiis maneriorum in quampluribus villis suis."^m He died in 1229.ⁿ

SAMPSON, prior of St. Bennet's, received the royal assent to his election as abbat in the month of June that year.^o The Cottonian fragment speaks of him as a painter: "operi picturæ, in quo peritus erat, se totum dedit." He died on the 6th of the kalends of June, 1237.^p

ROBERT DE THORKES, or TORKEYS, whom Blomefield calls Robert de Thirkeby, received the king's assent to his election as abbat here June 15th, 1237. He had previously been prior of Ramsey.^q The Cottonian fragment calls him "vir prudens, in negotiis sæcularibus dapsilis, et pomposus." After enumerating certain gifts from him of vestments, it adds, "hic etiam Cameram lapideam ad orientalem partem ecclesiæ cum capella construxit, ac pistrinum a fundamentis fabricavit." He died on the second of the ides of August, 1251. A licence for a fresh election was granted on the 20th of the same month: but his successor,

WILLIAM DE RINGFELD, did not receive the royal assent to his election till October the 15th following. William de Ringfeld was precentor of the monastery.^r He died on the 11th of the kalends of May, 1256.

ADAM DE NETESHIRD, NOTTISHERD, or NETELHURDE, received the royal assent to his election May 8th, 1256.^s Among other benefactions to his monastery, he laid the foundation of a new presbytery or choir, to the church; and procured the appropriation of the churches of Felmingham, Neteshyrde, and Bastwyk, for the keeping up of hospitality.^t He died on the 14th of the kalends of September, 1268.^u

RICHARD DE BUKEHAM, or BUKENHAM, prior of the monastery, obtained the royal assent to his election as abbat Oct. 3d, and received the temporalities of the monastery Oct. 24th, 1268.^x He appears to have finished the new presbytery.^y He died on the 6th of the ides of June, 1275.

NICHOLAS DE WALESHAM, whom the Cottonian fragment calls NICHOLAS DE SWTH WALESHAM, was the next abbat. He had previously been prior of the monastery. The royal assent to his election was given June 15th, and the temporalities of the monastery restored to him July 4th, 1275.^z He died Nov. 15th, 1302. On the 23d of the same month a licence for a fresh election was granted; and on the 15th of December the royal assent was given to the election of

HENRY DE BROKE, to whom the temporalities were delivered on January the 8th following.^a Prynne says, that at this time the king's escheator distrained the abbat of St. Benedict de Hulmo for the palfrey and cup of his predecessor, pretended to be anciently due to the king by his prerogative, and received from the predecessors of the abbat upon every occasion; whereas there was never any received by the king before. A writ of enquiry was in consequence issued to the king's escheator, upon which an inquisition was found for the abbat against the king.^b There was likewise, he adds, another writ of enquiry issued, and inquisition made about the same time, at the suit of the prior and convent of the said abbey, touching certain lands and tenements which they held and enjoyed for their sustentation, divided from the rest of the temporalities time out of mind, which neither the abbats during the plenarty nor the king's escheators during the vacancy ever inter-meddled with in any king's reign; which the king's escheator seized into his hands upon the last vacation to their prejudice, as they suggested; which was found for the prior and convent.^c Upon the death of Henry de Broke, which happened Dec. 14th, 1325,^d

WILLIAM REPPES, or REPPYS, alias RUGGE, D.D., received the temporalities July 14th, 1530.^a Willis says, “William Rugge, alias Repse or Reppes, D. D. and fellow of Gonvill-hall in Cambridge, and son of William Rugge of North Reppes co. Norfolk, was made abbat on the 26th of April, 1530. Six years after which, being promoted by King Henry the Eighth to the see of Norwich, he the said Rugge, by virtue of a private act of parliament, parted with all the lands of his bishoprick (except the site of his episcopal palace in Norwich) to the king, by way of exchange, for the revenues belonging to the abbey of Hulme and priory of Hickling; which last being soon after alienated by him, the whole income since his time appertaining to the see of Norwich has been only the estate of Hulme monastery, which his successors have enjoyed to this present, according to the purport of the said act; which, continuing unrepealed, gave occasion to the late worthy Bishop Richard Montague, tempore Caroli primi, to subscribe himself in his leases executed a little before the great rebellion, ‘Richard by divine permission Lord Bishop of Norwich, and Lord Abbat of St. Benedicts de Hulm.’ But to return to Bishop Rugge, alias Repse; he died an. 1550, Sept. 21st, and was buried in the middle of the cathedral church of Norwich, having been deprived by order of K. Edward the Sixth on the 31st of January preceding, notwithstanding he had been a zealous stickler for the king's supremacy, and influenced his convent twenty one in number to subscribe to the same an. 1534.”^b with those of St. Bennet's Holme and Hickling was made in February, 27 Hen. VIII., at which time abbat Repps was nominated to the see of Norwich, though not elected till May.

Dr. afterwards Bishop Tanner, in a communication printed in the second volume of Willis's Mitred Abbeys, makes the following correction of this account:

"The said Bishop Repps, alias Rugge, alienated from the bishoprick not only the priory of Hickling, but many good manors belonging to the abbey, some by absolute gift, others upon trifling exchanges, and made long leases, so that he was at last unable to maintain the state of the bishoprick, and forced to resign, with a pension of two hundred marks (as I have somewhere met with). 'Tis certain he was not deprived, because in the patent of commission of John Hopton the bishoprick is said to be void by the resignation of William the last bishop. The porter or some servant of the bishoprick is said to have made a copy of verses beginning thus,

Poor Will, thou rugged art and ragged all,
Thy abbey cannot bless thee in such fame
To keep a palace, state, and lordly hall,
When gone is thence what should maintain the same.

First pay thy debts, and hence return to cell,
And pray the blessed saint whom thou dost serve,
That others may maintaine the pallace well,
For if thou stay'st we all are like to starve."^a

"Bishop Reppes lived," Dr. Tanner continues, "at St. Bennet's, for I have seen processes or citations to call persons before him, or his auditor causarum, in Capellâ sancti Salvatoris infra manerium nostrum de Hulmo; and sometimes in Capellâ sanctæ Mariæ infra manerium nostrum de Hulmo, 1542. However, in his, or the succeeding bishop's time, the abbey was suffered to fall entirely to ruin. Bishop Jegon sued the administratrix of Bishop Redman for 3161*l.* dilapidations about the monastery; but it had been none so long that he recovered nothing.—

"Bishop Freake repair'd a handsome hall or grange called Ludham Hall, built by abbat Martin, an. 1450, about a mile from the abbey, in a better situation, which was the country seat and indeed chief place of residence of all the succeeding bishops, who had here round them 300*l.* or 400*l.* per annum domains, and all sorts of meats, venison, wild fowl, rabbits, and fish in great plenty of their own; and thereby were enabled to live honourably and hospitably till Bishop Montague came, who leased it out upon lives to provide for his family; since which the bishops have been forced to live at Norwich, with nothing to supply their tables but what they buy by the penny at market."^b

The revenues of St. Bennet's abbey were valued in the 26th of Henry the Eighth, according to Dugdale, at 583*l.* 17*s.* 0*d.* per annum; according to Speed, at 677*l.* 9*s.* 8*d.*^c

A bull of Pope Clement, relating to the proposed annexation of the monastery of St. Bennet of Hulme, as early as the 20th of Henry the Eighth, will be found in the Appendix copied from Rymer;^d together with the act of the 27th of Henry the Eighth arranging the exchange with the crown during the vacancy of the bishoprick, in which it will be observed that the bishop was enjoined, exclusive of a prior who was to be always "datyve or removable" at his will, to "kepe contynually, within the said monastery of Seynt Benett, at the lest xij. monkes, for the mayntenance and kepyng of dyvyne servyce there."^e

Leland, in his Collectanea, vol. iii. p. 29, notices the following manuscripts in the LIBRARY of this house:

"Alexander Nequam de Utensilibus.

R. Lincolnienis doctissimi Commentarii super libros Dionysii de Hierarchia.

Summa, alias Speculum Sacerdotum, Richardi de Leycestria.

Henricus Huntingdunensis de Herbarum virtute, carmine."

The ARMS engraved in the initial Letter of this Account of the monastery of St. Bennet, are those assigned to it by Reyner and Bishop Tanner. The Continuator of Blomefield, also, describes the same coat as having formerly at least existed in Thurgarton church, and on the porch of North Walsham church in Norfolk, both formerly belonging to the abbey.^b According to Tanner, Blomefield says these Arms want "a hand from a cloud, issuing sometimes from the dexter chief corner, and sometimes from the sinister; for in all the old stone carving, the hand is always inserted in one of those places."^c Mr. Cole, in one of his manuscripts now preserved in the British Museum, from a Procession Roll of the Lords to Parliament, in 1512, gives these Arms a little different, viz. Sa. a Crosier in Pale O. having two ribbons or tassels entwined about it A. inter four Crowns O.^d

Two SEALS of this abbey are extant. One, of a round form, but smaller than the usual seals of mitred abbies. It represents a figure full-faced, sitting, with a glory round the head, probably of St. Benedict, holding a crosier in the right hand and a book in the left. From two or three mutilated impressions, the legend appears to have been, SIGILLVM ABBATIE DE HVLMO. The other, attached to an instrument printed in Rymer, of the 22d of Hen. VIII. entitled "Ad Papam super causa Regis," represents St. Benedict under a Gothic canopy. The legend is, SIGILLVM DOMINI ECCLESIE S̄CI BENEDICTI DE HVLMO. At the bottom of the Seal, under the figure, are the Arms of the abbey, a Crosier, with a ribbon entwined, between two Crowns.^e

The EDIFICE of the CHURCH of St. Bennet of Hulme is said to have been magnificent. The south aisle was built about the middle of the fifteenth century by Sir John Fastolf,^f who also built the Lady chapel, on the side of the chancel or presbytery where he was interred.^g ^e Blomefield, Hist. Norf. vol. v. p. 1431, or rather his continuator Parkin, says, "In a grant of the manor of Heyham by Norwich, by William Basset, abbat, and the convent sans date, to Richard Basset; we find this remarkable seal.

A person in a close vest, or tunic, and a gown, part of it to be seen hanging behind him, with a lofty cap issuing out of a coronet, and holding a great broad sword in his right hand, wherewith he has pierced the nostrils of a great dragon segreant (holding in his mouth by the waist a young man) and ready to seize on the person with the sword, and an oblong shield before him and near the rim of this seal is in capital letters, the word — CARDIBAS.

All which is to represent the miraculous rescue of an idle young monk (by St. Bennet as the Roman legends say) who fled from his convent, and was forthwith seized on by the Devil, (represented by the dragon) and returned safe to his convent."

^f Itin. Will. de Worcestre.

From the inscription it might be inferred that this seal rather belonged to Richard Basset the grantee, than to William Basset the abbat.

^g Blomef. Hist. Norf. vol. v. p. 1428. In Mr. Gough's time the foundations of the church, built of flints with stone coins, remained for the most part all round, about a yard high. See Camd. Brit. edit. 1789, vol. ii. p. 110. The following are the dimensions of the church, as noticed by William of Worcestre in different pages of his Itinerary:

"Ecclesia de Halmo.

In abbatia sancti Benedicti novum opus ex parte meridionali chori continet in longitudine 41 virgas et 2 pedes.

Latitudo ejus continet 7 virgas et quartam partem virgæ.

Latitudo navis ecclesiæ continet 10 virgas.

The chief remain of the monastery of St. Bennet of Hulme, at present, is a part of the gate-house, over which a draining-mill has been erected. Three views, engraved for the Society of Antiquaries in the first volume of the Vetusta Monumenta, exhibit it when more perfect. The Continuator of Blomefield says, that over the arch on the west side were the arms of De la Pole earl of Suffolk, Beauchamp earl of Warwick, the earl of Clare, Valence earl of Pembroke, the earl of Arundel, &c. On the east side, at the sides of the arch, the arms of England and of France, and above it those of Arundel, Erpingham, Hastings, &c.^a

Some foundations of walls, which enclosed altogether an area of at least five and thirty acres,^b are yet traceable.

A view of what remains of the gate-house, with the mill in its present state, has been recently etched by the elegant hand of Mrs. Dawson Turner of Yarmouth.

ROMBURG, or RUMBURGH, in Suffolk, was anciently a CELL to St. Bennet of Hulme.

The HOSPITALS of HORNING and GREAT HOBESSE, in the neighbourhood of the abbey, were also subordinate to it.

NUM. I.

EODEM anno [anno ultimo sc. regni sui,] Kanutus rex de Roma rediens, Malcolmum regem Scotiæ sibi rebellantem sicut et prius fuerat subiecit, ac alios duos reges Melbeache et Jermare in deditionem recepit. Circa idem tempus Egelnotus Cantuariensis archiepiscopus, basilicam sancti Edmundi consecravat. Iste rex Kanutus, postquam de Roma regressus fuerat, vitam suam in humilitate et devotione ducens, in honore sancti Benedicti (quem ultra omnes confessores spiritualiter dilexerat) duo monasteria fundavit, unum in Norwegia, et aliud in Anglia, in partibus Norfolkiciæ, quod in solo palustri infra aquas quasi in insula, in quodam loco qui olim Couholm et Calvescroft vocabatur, situm est, ad quem locum antiquis temporibus ante adventum Danorum in Angliam, quidam heremita, nomine Sune-man, adire et illum inhabitare per angelum monitus est in sompnis. Qui licet dictum locum sibi prædestinatum penitus ignorabat, gratiâ tamen divinâ per diversa tunc deserta transiens, ad quoddam mansum cujusdam reguli, nomine Horn, quod Hornyng vocabatur, prope eundem locum advenit, ubi a bubulcis et pastoribus Calvescroft et Couholm nominantibus de dicto loco doctus, et per eosdem lætus ibidem perductus, unam capellam in honore sancti Benedicti infra paludes loco prædicto erigere incepit, ad quem alii heremitæ pro pœnitentia secum agenda confluxerunt, quos ipse benignè in socios recepit, et secum cohabitare permisit. Quod dictus regulus sive dominus percipiens, Couholm et Calvescroft sibi et fratribus suis dedit pro perpetuo, et concessit: ubi plusquam l. annis vixit.

Postmodum, non modico tempore transacto, pagani Inguar et Hubbe de Dacia manu forti in Angliam applicantes, Northumbriâ primo gravi depopulatione pervagatâ, et eis subjectâ, in Est Angliam, id est, Northfolchiam venerunt, ubi sancto Edmundo rege tunc ibidem regnante ab eis capto et interfecto, totam patriam prædaverunt, ac dictam capellam sancti Benedicti, heremitis omnibus occisis, funditus destruxerunt. Post hæc, quidam vir Deo devotus, Wolfricus nomine, divinâ inspiratione ad dictum locum veniens, dictam capellam sancti Benedicti de novo incepit ædificare, et congregatis sibi septem sociis, ædificia eis necessaria construxit, quos usque ad tempus regis Kanuti per lx. annos rexit. Tempore autem illo, quidam præpositus regis Kanuti, Maynard nomine, in partibus illis erat, qui dictum Wolfricum et socios suos odio habens, eos erga regem Kanutum tunc propè apud Hornyng existentem, nequiter diffamando accusavit. Unde rex erga eos iratus, solus cum simplici familia, quasi rex non esset, ad eos pervenit, omnes usque ad mortem in mente minans, si illud quod Maynard de eis dixerat verax esset. Quod Wolfricus in spiritu comperiens, contra eum cum sociis suis accessit dicens, "Salve rex Kanute;" cui rex, "Qualiter pro rege Canuto me noscis, cum ipsum nunquam agnovi?" Cui Wolfricus. "Angelus Dei regem huc adventurum et nos et locum istum plurimum ditaturum nobis infra tres dies præteritos nunciavit." Quod rex audiens et eos penes se maliciosè accusatos percipiens, omnes ad dictum mansum suum de Hornyng invitavit: quod illis illuc venientibus rex, una cum villis de Ludham et Netesherde, cum omnibus appendentibus, per cartam suam imperpetuum à se et hæredibus suis dedit, quam citò post in parlamento suo apud Wintoniam (versus quod dictus Maynard regis præpositus colulum suum fregerat) coram omnibus regni sui magnatibus confirmavit, et sic rex Kanutus monasterium sancti Benedicti, monachis per dictum Wolfricum introductis, fundavit.

Dicto vero Wolfrico citò postea viam universæ carnis ingresso quidam Alfinus in abbatem sibi successit. Qui de duobus monachorum conventibus tunc ibidem congregatis medietatem usque Bury ad ecclesiam sancti Edmundi regis et martyris mittens, unum eorum, Uvium nomine, primum abbatem ibidem rege Kanuto annuente, et ipsos monachos introducente, statuit et ornivit; et sic primus abbas et monachi abbathiæ de Bury, primò de abbathia sancti Benedicti venerunt, quos rex Kanutus quam plurimum ditavit et magnis privilegiis ditavit sive decoravit.

Lecta coram nobis vestra petitio, continebat quod nonnunquam metropolitanus vester et loci diocesanus, cum in monasterio vestro visitationis exercetur officium, sæculares clericos introducunt. Propter quod nobis humiliter supplicastis ut nobis super hoc paterna diligentia curaremus. Nos itaque attendentes quod indecens est ut prædictis in eodem monasterio visitationis officium exercentibus sæculares intersint, per quos possit in claustrum dissolutionis materia provenire, firmiter inhibemus ut nullos de cætero sæculares in capitulum vestrum nisi duo vel tres de canonicis ecclesiarum suarum in decenti habitu aliis quot expedire viderint religiosis adjunctis secum in præfato monasterio visitationis tempore introducant. Nulli igitur omnino hominum liceat hanc paginam nostræ inhibitionis infringere vel ei ausu temerario contraire. Compositio inter Priorem Norwic. et Abbatem de wrecco Maris, Anno 18 Hen. III.

OMNIBUS litteras præsentēs inspecturis, Willielmus prior Norwic. et ejusdem loci conventus salutem in Domino. Noverit universitas vestra quod cum mota esset controversia inter nos ex una parte, et Sampsonem abbatem et conventum sancti Benedicti de Hulmo ex altera, coram domino Roberto de Lexington et suis sociis justiciariis itinerantibus domini regis in Northf. anno regni regis Henrici filii regis Johannis xvijº. super wrecco maris pro tempore proveniente inter crucem de Pallingge et crucem de Gernemuta, quod quidem wreccum ad ecclesiam suam de Hulmo dicti abbas et conventus dicebant integre pertinere. Ita convenit inter nos sub forma perpetuæ pacis quod quotiescumque wreccum in dictas cruces contigerit evenire, ubicumque terræ nostræ vel feodum nostrum abuttant super mare dicti abbas et conventus duas partes illius wrecci in perpetuum percipient, et nos tertiam partem dicti wrecci similiter percipiemus in perpetuum. Ita videlicet quod si ballivus noster primo dictum wreccum inveniat, illud salvo et integre in eodem loco faciet custodiri, usque ad adventum ballivi dictorum abbatis et conventus de Hulmo, et idem faciet ballivus dictorum abbatis et conventus si primo wreccum inveniat; et in præsentia utriusque ballivi secundum prædictam formam dictum wreccum dividetur. In hujus rei testimonium præsentī scripto sigillum capituli nostri apposuimus.

Abbas autem prædicti loci, dominus scilicet Anselmus, et monachi, dederunt Waltero sex marcas argenti per manum Simonis cognati sui. Quoddam etiam pratum pro quo Walterus reddebat ipsis xvj. denarios per annum dederunt illi suisque hæredibus sole et quiete in perpetuum. Convenit etiam inter eos quod ipse Walterus haberet annuatim unam pelliciam et unas^a crepitās a camerario quales unus monachorum habere consuevit. Præterea susceptus est Walterus cum suis plenarie in fraternitatem loci; ita ut si ibidem monachus fieri voluerit suscipietur: ubicumque autem defunctus fuerit tantumdem illi quantum uni ex ipsis a cunctis persolvetur in missis, et psalmis, et orationibus. Hæc est finalis concordia facta in curia domini regis apud Westmonasterium a die Paschæ in tres septimanas anno regni regis Henrici filii regis Johannis vicesimo secundo, coram Roberto de Laxinton, Willielmo de Ebor, Adam fil. Willielmi, et Willielmo de Culewith, justiciariis, et aliis domini regis fidelibus tunc ibi præsentibus, inter Agnetem priorissam de Carrhoe quærentem et Robertum abbatem sancti Benedicti de Hulmo deforciantem, per Johannem de Horford clericum positum loco suo ad lucrandum vel perdendum de Piscaria aquæ de Wroxham, Belag', et Houeton. Unde eadem priorissa quæsita fuit quod prædictus abbas non permisit ipsam priorissam piscari in eadem aqua sicut debuit et consuevit ut dixit. Et unde placitum fuit inter eos in eadem curia, scilicet quod prædicta priorissa recognovit et concessit pro se et aliis priorissis quæ ei succedent et ecclesia sua de Karho quantum ad ipsas pertinet, quod prædictus abbas et successores sui de cætero habeant totam aquam a ponte de Wroxham usque ad Bromhill, cum piscatione ejusdem aquæ sine omnimoda piscatione quam eadem priorissa vel aliæ priorissæ quæ ei succedent in dicta aqua habere possunt vel debeant, excepta piscaria de Fleggeredam et excepta medietate aquæ de subtus pontem versus Wroxham quæ eidem priorissæ vel aliis priorissis quæ ei succedent, vel ecclesiæ suæ de Karho remanent quiete sine piscatione aliqua puam idem abbas vel successores sui ibidem habere possint vel debeant. Et altera medietas quæ subtus pontem versus Houeton remanet dicto abbati et successoribus suis et ecclesiæ suæ de Hulmo quiete in perpetuum, sine piscatione aliqua quum eadem priorissa vel aliæ priorissæ quæ ei succedent ibidem habere possint vel debeant. Ita quod retia dictæ priorissæ vel alicujus priorissæ quæ ei succedent non extenduntur in aquam dicti abbatis vel successorum suorum, nec retia dicti abbatis vel successorum suorum extenduntur in aquam dictæ priorissæ vel alicujus priorissæ quæ ei succedet. Et pro hac recognitione, concessione, fine, et concordia idem abbas remisit et quiete clamavit de se et successoribus suis et ecclesia sua de Hulmo eidem priorissæ et aliis priorissis quæ eidem succedent, et ecclesiæ sui prædictæ, totum jus et clamium quod habuit in tota piscaria prædictæ aquæ a ponte de Wroxham usque ad caput parci de Wroxham in perpetuum, sine omnimoda piscatione, quam idem abbas vel successores sui ibidem habere possint vel debeant. Salvo eidem abbati, et successoribus suis et ecclesiæ suæ prædictæ, et similiter prædictæ priorissæ et aliis priorissis quæ ei succedent et ecclesiæ suæ prædictæ, libero transitu per pontem de Wroxham et per totam aquam prædictam. Et præterea idem abbas recognovit et concessit pro se et successoribus suis et ecclesia sua prædicta quod ipsi reddent eidem priorissæ et aliis priorissis quæ ei succedent et ecclesiæ suæ de Karho duo milliaria allecis competentis singulis annis apud sanctum Benedictum in principio quadragesimæ, sicut antiquitus reddere debuerunt et consueverunt, sine contradictione aliqua et cavillatione.

Et unde recognitio magnæ assisæ summonita fuit inter eos in eadem curia; scilicet quod prædictus Robertus Hauteyn concessit pro se et hæredibus suis quod idem abbas et successores sui de cætero libere et sine impedimento ipsius Roberti vel hæredum suorum possint piscari per totam prædictam aquam a capite prædicti stangni usque ad Kelbesacre ex utraque

FORMERLY

Bedericsworthe,^a or Edmundestow,

IN SUFFOLK.

IGEBERT, king of the East Angles, says Bishop Tanner,^b about the year 633, quitted his crown, and took upon him a religious life in a monastery, which he had founded here:^c but after the death of that prince we have no certain account of the state of this place, though probably (as far as the interruptions of the Danish wars would permit) some sort of religious persons continued to live together, and to officiate in the church: for hither, as to a place of some note, the body of St. Edmund the king was translated from the obscure wooden chapel at Hoxne, A. D. 903.^d Immediately whereupon, the town changed its name, and several secular priests, settling here, built a new church to the honour of that royal martyr. Leofric, Alfric, Bomfield, and Edmund are said to have been the names of four of the priests; and Leofric and Kenelm the names of two of the deacons who administered to them. The members of this community were, at first, not above seven or eight in number, but increased in a few years to be nineteen, viz. fourteen priests and five deacons, all having their several prebends; and became a perfect college about A. D. 925, when King Ethel-

^a The etymology of Bedericsworthe is variously given. Several of our antiquaries formerly thought that the surname of some Roman was discernible in it: and Duchesne ascribed it to Bericus, who is mentioned in the account of the emperor Claudius by Suetonius. Battely, however, says, "Si monachorum registris et monumentis fidem malimus adhibere non tam altè repetenda est nominis hujus origo. Quid ergo dicant, saltem audire non pigeat. 'Dominus Beodricus, dominus villulæ, quæ nunc dicitur villa S. Edmundi, S. Edmundum hæredem suum constituit.' (Codex MS. in Bibl. Coll. Trin. Cantabr. et Reg. rubr. B. fol. 1.)—'Cellerarius habebat messuagium cum horto adjacente, quem nunc infirmarius tenet, fuit mansio Beodrici qui fuit antiquitus dominus villæ istius, unde et villa dicta fuit Beodricesworth.' (Reg. in Officio Registrarii Buriensis, et Reg. Pinchbeck, fol. 160.)—Item, 'Bury contulit S. Edmundo dominus Beodricus sive Beodricius, ex cujus nomine Beodrichesworth nuncupatur, i. e. Beodrici villa.' Reg. Pinchbeck.)—Et alibi in eodem registro 'Sciendum quod quædam terræ cellerarii in campis S. Edmundi sunt de antiquo dominico quondam Beodrici, quædam vero de post adquisitis, unde varius decimandi modus.' Ibid. fol. 167.)—Ejusdem filii est inspectio chartarum hujus cænobii facta regnantibus Philippo et Maria et sigillo eorundem munita, in qua legimus, 'quod abbas S. Edmundi fuerit seiscitus de Burgo prædicto in dominico suo ut de feodo in jure monasterii de Bury S. Edmundi à toto tempore prædicto. Eo quod dominus Beodricus, ante Conquestum Angliæ dominus prædictæ villæ, fuit seiscitus de eadem villa in dominico suo ut de feodo, et sic inde seiscitus diù ante eundem Conquestum, et ante mortem et martyrium constituit eundem Edmundum hæredem suum, et obiit; post cujus mortem S. Edmundus rex fuit seiscitus in dominico suo ut de feodo, &c." (In archivis Buriensibus.) Antiq. S. Edm. Burgi, 4to. Oxon. 1745, pp. 3, 4. Dr. Yates, in his Hist. of the Town and Abbey of St. Edmund's Bury, part i. 4to. Lond. 1085, p. 6, thinks Bedericsworthe may be satisfactorily derived from the Saxon words Bede, pīc or pīce, and ponð or ponð as designating the superior distinction and peculiar appropriation of the place to religious worship.

^c "Sigisbertus, rex Orientalium Anglorum, monasterium, quod in Betrichesword sibi fecerat, intravit; unde invitum ad certamen contra Pendam regem Merciorum eruerunt subditi, in quo occubuit." Lib. Eliens. MS. et Tho. Eliens. in vita S. Etheldredæ inter Acta Bened. vol. ii. p. 739. This, Bishop Tanner observes, is reconcileable enough with Bede, if we look upon, as we well enough may, the monastery wherein Sigebert last was (Hist. Eccl. lib. iii. c. 18) as a different one from that given to Fursæus by this king, ibid. lib. iii. c. 19. Besides, it is said in one of the Registers which will be quoted in the Appendix of Instruments, that the new church of St. Edmund was begun to be built A. D. 1021, on the same place where K. Sigebert had founded a monastery.

We may here, once for all, notice the destroyed Monastery of BURGH CASTLE, formerly CNOBHERESBURG. Bishop Tanner says, "Upon the first preaching of Christianity to the East Angles, about A. D. 630, King Sigebert gave to Fursæus, (a holy man who came out of Ireland,) a place near this Castle or city, whereon to found a monastery, which was augmented both in buildings and revenues by King Anna:" vide Bedæ Hist. Eccl. lib. iii. cap. 19. Lelandi Collect. tom. i. p. 47; ii. p. 139. Stevens's Supplem. vol. i. p. 216. "Several historians, ancient and modern," he adds, "have confounded this monastery, where Fursæus lived, with another monastery founded by this same K. Sigebert, wherein he turned monk, and whence he was fetched out to that fatal battle, wherein he lost his life. Some have thought that Cnobersburg was the same with Betrichesword or Bury St. Edmund (Notes on Bishop Gibson's edit. of Camden): but to this last place Bede's description, viz. that it was 'maris vicinitate amœnum,' will by no means agree. By that situation, and the notice taken of it by K. Anna, it might more probably be fixed at Blithburgh, where that King was buried; but Blithburgh is mentioned under its present name by the Ely historian, who in a page or two before mentions also this religious house at Cnobheresburgh. So that these also seem to be different places." See Notit. Mon. ut supr. Note ^b.

^d St. Edmund is said by some writers to have been the son of Alcmund, a prince of Saxony, and his wife Siware, and to have been stan is said to have been their founder.^a The minster of St. Edmund's Bury was subsequently augmented in privileges and revenues by King Edmund, the son of Edward the elder,^b by Theodred bishop of London, and other benefactors.^c King Edwy is recorded to have bestowed upon it the manors of Beccles and Elmswell, between the years 956 and 959; the deed of grant of which is however lost.

Swein, king of Denmark, is stated in Sir James Burrough's Collectanea Buriensia to have destroyed Bury in 978. Dr. Yates says this seems too early. Swein's first invasion was made about A. D. 1004. He defeated Ulfketel, and conquered all East Anglia, A. D. 1010.^d

Upon pretence that the seculars, who had the charge of the body of St. Edmund, were careless in their duty, King Canute removed them, and A. D. 1020, placed in the monastery of St. Edmund's Bury a convent of Benedictine monks, partly brought from St. Bennet's of Hulme in Norfolk, and partly from Ely in Cambridgeshire.^e This was in the fourth year of Canute; under whose direction, Ailwin bishop of Elmham, in the same year, pulled down the wooden church which was first built for the reception of St. Edmund's body, and laid the foundation of another, which bore the name of the saint. This church was finished in about twelve years; the inhabitants of Norfolk and Suffolk paying four pence yearly for every carucate of land, towards the expense. It was consecrated on St. Luke's day, A. D. 1032, by Egelnth archbishop of Canterbury, and dedicated to Christ, St. Mary, and St. Edmund.^f

Canute's charter of privileges will be found in the Appendix of Instruments. Exclusive of the king's gifts, it grants a licence to his queen Algife, or Elgiva, to bestow annually upon the monastery four thousands eels, from Lakyngtheth.^g

In addition to his grants, K. Canute also honoured the church with his personal devotions. He offered his own crown at the tomb of the martyr, whose body had been deposited in a rich shrine. His example upon this occasion is said, in after ages, to have been followed by succeeding monarchs.^h

Ailwin, or Agelwin, bishop of Elmham, who has been already mentioned in the note relating to St. Edmund, is stated to have diminished his own privileges to augment the power and authority of the new abbat and convent of St. Edmund's Bury: he granted that the monastery and the town, as given by King Edmund, with the extent of a mile round it, should be no longer subject to the episcopal authority, or jurisdiction of the bishop of the diocese.ⁱ The monks, it is added, erected four crosses, one at each extremity of the town, to define accurately the boundary and extent of their exempt jurisdiction; and within which the abbat was himself to exercise episcopal authority. These crosses are noticed in a papal bull of the year 1172.^k Ailfric the second, the successor of Ailwin as bishop of Elmham, is also stated to have been a benefactor.^l

Hardicnut, the son and successor of Canute, confirmed and ratified the exemption of the abbat and convent from episcopal jurisdiction.^m

Uvius, who had been prior of St. Bennet's of Hulme, born at Nurembergh, A. D. 841. He succeeded Offa as king of the East Angles, A. D. 855; fifteen years after which, A. D. 870, after having had numerous cruelties exercised upon him, being beaten cruelly with bats and shot at as a mark with arrows, he was beheaded, during the invasion of Hinguar and Hubba. To offer the utmost indignity, the Danes are stated to have thrown the severed head and body into the thickest part of the woods of Eglesdene. After their departure, the East Anglians, having discovered the body, buried it at Hoxne: but the head could not be found. Seeking after the head in the woods, however, some of them, who had lost their companions, cried, "Where are you?" when a voice was heard to answer "Here, here, here:" and in the place whence the voice proceeded the long sought head was found in a thicket of thorns, guarded by a wolf. This, which was considered as one of the principal miracles of St. Edmund, was a favourite subject of representation with the monks; and occurs both in sculptures and on one or two of the conventual seals. (See Yates's Hist. St. Edmund's Bury, part i. pp. 43, 44.) The remains of St. Edmund were translated from Hoxne to St. Edmund's Bury about A. D. 903. During Turchill's invasion, A. D. 1010, the body of St. Edmund was conveyed for safety to London, under the care of Agelwin, or Ailwin, a monk, afterwards bishop of Elmham; where, after remaining three years in the church of St. Gregory, near St. Paul's, or, according to other accounts, at Christ Church, it was again translated, with honours, to St. Edmund's Bury. The ancient little church of Grinstead in Essex, near Chipping Ongar, the nave of which is composed of the trunks of large oaks, split and roughly hewed, is supposed to have been the chapel alluded to in the Register quoted in the App. of Instruments, Num. IX. in which St. Edmund's body is said to have rested while on its return. "Idem apud Aungre hospitabatur, ubi in ejus memoria lignea capella permanet usque hodie." The ancient road from London lay at that time through Grinstead. Compare the Account given in the Vetusta Monumenta of the Soc. of Antiquaries, vol. ii. pl. 7.

The earliest life of St. Edmund was written A. D. 985, by Abbo Floriacensis, or of Fleury, then a monk of Canterbury, chiefly from the relation of St. Dunstan, learned from one who was the sword-bearer of the saint, and an eye-witness of his sufferings, who detailed them in Dunstan's presence to King Æthelstan. A manuscript of this life, as old as the eleventh century, is preserved in the Cottonian collection Tib. B. 1. together with an account of the miracles of the saint, by Herman the archdeacon, written about the year 1070. This last work contains numerous particulars relating to the monastery in the time of abbat Baldwin. A manuscript of Abbo's Life of St. Edmund, preserved in the library of Jesus college Oxford, is called "Liber feretrariorum S. Edmundi," the book of the keepers of St. Edmund's shrine. In the Cottonian MS. Tit. A. viii. fol. 67, another Life of St. Edmund occurs, written by Osbert de Clare, prior of Westminster, A. D. 1136: and an imperfect copy of another, in French verse is preserved in the same collection, marked Domit. xi. 1.

The circumstances of St. Edmund's life previously to his obtaining the crown of East Anglia, are recorded by Galfridus de Fontibus, in a little work, "De Pueritiâ Sancti Edmundi," supposed to have been written about A. D. 1150; a manuscript of which is preserved in the public library at Cambridge.

A poetical Life of this saint, written at the command of William Curteys abbat of St. Edmund's Bury by John Lydgate, and compiled in consequence of the long visit which King Henry the Sixth paid to this monastery in 1433, is also extant. Bishop Tanner, Bibl. Brit. Hib. p. 490, refers to three manuscripts of it: MS. Norwic. More, 161, now in the public library at Cambridge; MS. C. C. C. Oxon. 61; and MS. Howard. class. 1. 3. He however omits to notice the Harleian copy, now in the British Museum, MS. Harl. 2278, being the original book presented by Lydgate to King Henry the Sixth; written on vellum, and ornamented with no fewer than one hundred and twenty limnings. It is unquestionably one of the most beautiful English manuscripts of that or any other period. Lydgate's compilation contains also the Life of St. Fremund, the cousin of St. Edmund, to which the legend of St. Edmund's miracles is appended. The following is the concluding stanza of the manuscript addressed to the king:

"Souereyn lord plesse to your goodly heed
And to your gracious royal magnificence
To make this tretys, which atwen hope and dreed
Presentyd ys to your hyh excellence,
And for Kyng Edmundis notable reuerence,
Both to his chyrche dyffence and champion,
Be cause yt ys off your fundacion."

Lydgate makes his Saint Edmund to have been a most comely man; but Joscelin de Brakelond, a monk of the abbey, writes, that when, in the year 1198, abbat Sampson made a new shrine for this saint, and had his head in his hands—"et procedens, tetigit oculos, et nasum valde grossum et valde eminentem."

Among the more ancient accounts of St. Edmund's life, the reader may be referred to the Decem Scriptores, Sim. Dunelm. coll. 124, 143, 170; Jo. Brompt. coll. 804, 805, 806; also to Will. Malmesb. de Gestis Pontif. Script. post Bedam, fol. 136.

^a Compare Battely, Antiq. S. Edm. Burgi, pp. 27, 28, e Registr. Pinchbeck. Dr. Yates says, "From the observations of some of the monastic registers, it may be supposed that Bederic" (see p. 98, Note ^a) "was at this time chief lord of the town; that from him it had received the name of Bedericheswyth; and that he presented the site of the new church, and some lands around it, for the use of the clergy now incorporated." Hist. of Bury, p. 50.

^b See Num. IV. The extract from Marianus Scotus quoted in this number by Sir William Dugdale speaks of the privilege as granted in 945. But the date in the charter itself is 942.

^m Battely says,—"cum favore laudeque ecclesiasticorum, videlicet Agelnodi Dorobernensis nunc Cantuariensis, et Alfriici Eboracensis was the first abbat of St. Edmund's Bury.^a He is represented to have been a humble, modest man. He received consecration from the bishop of London: and died in 1044.

LEOFSTAN, or LEFSTAN, one of the monks who had accompanied Uvius from Hulme, was the second abbat of St. Edmund's Bury. He succeeded immediately upon Uvius's death, and was consecrated by the bishop of Winchester. He was abbat during the greater part of the reign of King Edward the Confessor.

When King Edward the Confessor visited Bury, so great is said to have been his veneration for the royal saint and martyr, that he was accustomed to perform the last mile of his journey on foot, as a common pilgrim; giving, on his approach to the holy place, this open testimony of his humility and devotion.^b

Upon one of his visits, the king is said to have found the young monks of the monastery eating barley bread; and enquiring of the abbat why these, whom he called the young men of his kinsmen, were no better fed, was answered that the possessions of the monastery were too weak to maintain them with stronger food. "Ask what you will," said the king, "and I will give it you, that they may be better provided for, and better enabled to perform the service of God." The abbat, having consulted with his monks, is stated to have asked of the king the manor of

Mildenhall, with its appurtenances, and the jurisdiction of the eight hundreds and a half, with all the royalties, afterwards called the Franchise. The king is stated to have observed that the request was indiscreet, because the grant of these liberties was likely to involve the abbat and his successors in continual trouble; that he would willingly have granted him three or four manors, if he had required them; and would, out of respect to his kinsman, grant this request, however indiscreet.^c

The abbat, whatever credit may be given to the story, was certainly constituted lord of the franchise. King Edward the Confessor's Charter granting the eight Hundreds and a half, together with the manor of Mildenhall, will be found in the Appendix,^d as likewise his general charter of privileges to the abbey.^e

Egelmar, or Almare, Bishop of Elmham, was a benefactor to the monastery during Leofstan's abbacy. He bequeathed to it several valuable manors.^f

Abbat Leofstan died on the kalends of August, A. D. 1065.

BALDWIN, a monk of St. Denis at Paris, then prior of Deerhurst, in Gloucestershire, a cell to St. Denis, was the next abbat. Lydgate says he was "gretly expert in crafft off medycyne."^g King Edward the Confessor granted to him, for his monastery, the privilege of a mint.^h He was archiepiscoporum, aliorumque episcoporum, suorum suffraganeorum nec non cunctorum regni sui mundanorum principum consilio, descriptum constituit roboravitque præceptum, ut nullus archiepiscoporum aut episcoporum, vel aliqua secundi ordinis eorum disciplinam adhaerentium personarum audens quoquo modo suæ constitutionis violare iudicium præsumeret; quicquam consuetudinis sive dominationis in prædicto monasterio, et villa antedicta, sive super monachos, clericos, aut laicos, proclamare, usurpare, justitiam aliquam facere, aut missas celebrare, nisi à præfati loci abbate specialiter fuerit invitatus; poenam nimium formidabilem sub verborum serie subsequentem firmiter injungendo: 'Si quis,' videlicet 'posterorum' Hardecanut 'præceptum aggressus fuerit temere calumpniari, decretumve infringere supradictorum ecclesiasticorum prælatorum, prolata excommunicationi subiaceat, et cum Juda traditore ignis Tartarei poenas indesinenter luat et sustineat: ac insuper regis fisco xxx. auri talenta persolvat:' (quæ in pecunia numerata reddunt, et in se continent librarum x. millia) in qua pecuniæ summa quidam Norwicensis episcopus, prædictorum præcepti et decreti violator temerarius, suis exigentibus demeritis quondam per placitum diuturnum, ac tandem per iudicium fuerit condemnatus: prout per chartam regiam eadem placitum et iudicium seriōse exemplificantem patet manifeste." Append. ad Antiq. S. Edm. Burgi, pp. 128, 129, ex Registro Curteys.

^a He carried with him to St. Edmund's Bury not only half the monks of St. Bennet's Hulme, but half the furniture; books, vestments, vessels, ecclesiastical ornaments, and, in short, all that could be divided. See Num. II. In the Decem Scriptores, coll. 892, 914, he is, evidently by mistake, called Unius.

^d Num. VII. This charter was afterwards confirmed by King William II., and, again, by King Henry II. Among the charters in the Registrum Sacristæ is one from King Richard I., confirming the manor of Mildenhall, dated in the first year of his reign. It was recited and re-sealed in the ninth year of his reign, with the following addition: "Is erat tenor cartæ nostræ in primo sigillo nostro, quod quia aliquando perditum fuit, et dum capti fuimus in Alemannia in aliena potestate constitutum, mutatum est. Innovationis autem hi sunt testes J. com. Moriton. frater noster, R. com. Cestrie, Will. com. Sarum, Warinus fil. Geroldi, Rob. fil. Walteri, Rob. de Harecourt, Petrus de Pratellis. Dat. per manum E. Elyensis episcopi cancellarii nostri apud Rupem Andel. xviii. die Julii anno regni nostri nono." Some other particulars respecting the confirmation of Mildenhall by King Richard I. will be detailed in the account of abbat Sampson de Botington.

^g In the Annals of the monastery, MS. Harl. 447, as well as in other documents of the monastery, he is called "medicus Ædwardi regis."

^h See the Charter, Num. VIII. The subsequent history of the abbat's Mint at St. Edmundsbury cannot be better detailed than in the words of Mr. Ruding in the Annals of the Coinage of Britain, 8vo. 1819, vol. iv. p. 384. By the grant above referred to, "which was afterwards confirmed by William II., Henry I., Richard I., John, and Henry III., (Reg. Kempe, Harl. MS. 645, fol. 133 b.) the Abbat had the privilege of one moneyer.

ⁱ That privilege he continued to exercise during the reign of William I., and also during that of his son, William Rufus, as appears from a writ directed by Henry I. to Herebert Losinga, bishop of Norwich, to Roger Bigot, R. Pusselawe, and Otho Goldsmith of London; in which it was stated, that the king granted that St. Edmund should have his moneyer within his vill, with all the privileges of a mint, in like manner as he had it in the time of the king's father, and in like manner as the king's brother had granted it to him by his writ. (E Registro Sacristæ, MSS. vol. xlv. p. 35, from Sir James Burrough's collections.)

which had been granted in former times; and to these two he afterwards added a third. (Id. p. 36.)

^k When King Henry II. confirmed the liberties of this church, he granted that it should have one moneyer, with all the privileges it had been accustomed to exercise. (Confirmatio Hen. II. de Libert. Harl. MS. 743, fol. 10.)

^l Richard I. confirmed this, in the same words. (Id. fol. 11.) It was also recited in a charter of King John, (Id. fol. 11 b.) and again in the 32d year of Henry III. 1247; (Commun. in Scaccario, 32 Hen. III. Mr. North's MS.) at which time the king commanded, by writ, William de Haverhull treasurer, Edward de Westminster, and William Hardell (the warden of the mint in the Tower of London) to deliver to the monks of St. Edmundsbury a die of the new engraving for the making of their money, in like manner as of right it used and ought to be done. Saving to the king all the privileges and dignities of his crown respecting coinage. (Claus. 32 H. III. m. 16.) This was on account of the change which was made in the type of his coins, by extending the cross on the reverse to the outer circle.

^m According to Kempe's Register of the abbey the monks received at this time not only a new die, but also an exchange, which is the only instance in which I have met with the mention of an exchange in this place. The exchanger, however, occurs in the list of officers of this mint. The dies were to be used as in London and other places. (Harl. MS. 645, fol. 134.)

ⁿ 1265. In the 49th year of the same king, the sacrist of this church presented at the Exchequer a moneyer, an assayer, and a keeper of the die (custos cunei), who were sworn into their offices. (Hil. Commun. 49 H. III. Madox. Hist. Exch. vol. ii. p. 89.) And again, in his 52d year, 1268, William le Shrub was sworn as keeper of the die in the town of St. Edmund, on the presentation, likewise of the sacrist. (Memor. 52 H. III. rot. 2 b. Madox, ubi supra.)

^o Jocee the goldsmith was sworn, in the Exchequer, for the same office, for the abbat, in the fourth and fifth years of Edward I., 1276, or 1277. (Mich. Commun. 4 and 5 E. I. rot. 1 b. Madox, Hist. Exch. vol. ii. p. 90.) And in the latter of those years Richard de Bentley took the usual oath as assayer of the money in this mint. (Pas. Commun. 5 E. I. rot. 5 a. Madox, ut supr.)

^p When the money was changed, in 1279, the king granted to the abbey its die, viz. one standard of iron with two trussels. (Reg. Kempe, Harl. MS. 645, fol. 133.)

^q 1280. Robert de Hadleye was presented as moneyer, and John de Rede as assayer in the court of Exchequer, and were admitted accordingly. (Id. fol. 117.)

^r In the 25th year of Edward I., 1297, Roger de Rede was admitted by the said court as moneyer, and Hugh Houton as assayer, in this mint. (Id.) At the same time it was pleaded before the barons that the die had been so much used that it was no longer workable, and therefore it was prayed that another might be given. Peter de Leicester, warden of the mint of London, was therefore ordered to destroy that die, and deliver a new one to the abbat's attorney (the sacristan) who appeared for him. (Id. fol. 134 b.)

^s Roger de Rede was again admitted as moneyer in the third year of Edward II., 1309. (Id. fol. 117.)

^t 1318. In the 12th year of the same king an order was made for a trial of the monies which had been coined in this mint, from the beginning of the reign of King Edward I. to that time; during which period, it seems, no assay had been made. (Hil. Brevia, 12 E. II. rot. 79. Madox, Hist. Exch. vol. i. p. 292.) Accordingly, the abbat was commanded, by writ from the barons of the Exchequer, to cause the officers of his mint within the liberties of St. Edmund to appear at the Exchequer, in the octave of Candlemas, and to bring with them all the pixes of assays made of the money coined in the said mint, together with the money in the said pixes, as well of the time of King Edward I. as of the present king, and not yet assayed, to the intent that an assay might be made thereof. In compliance with the writ, the abbat sent, also in great favour with King William the Conqueror; under a charter from whom he made considerable acquisitions for his monastery.^a

The church of the monastery, consecrated in 1032, having been, at least for the most part, like its predecessor, built of wood; though not perished, was still unworthy both of Saint Edmund and of an establishment endowed with such magnificent revenues as St. Edmund's Bury: accordingly, under the auspices of abbat Baldwin, the sacrist Thurstan and Tolin demolished the church which had been so recently constructed. King William the Conqueror, upon this occasion, issued his precept to the abbat of Peterborough, commanding that the abbat and convent of St. Edmund should be permitted to take sufficient stone for the erection of their church from the quarries of Barnack in Northamptonshire, granting at the same time an exemption from the usual tolls chargeable upon its carriage from that place to Bury.^b

Other instances of favour occur, as will hereafter appear, from the Conqueror. The Registrum Nigrum says, "Rex Gulielmus dedit manerium de Brok Sancto Edmundo, et prono corde cultellum complicatum paululum coram ex suis melioribus plurimis posuit super altare sancti."^c

It was during the time of abbat Baldwin that the first confirmation of the privileges of the monastery from the popes appears to have been obtained, A.D. 1071, from Pope Alexander the Second: subsequent renewals were obtained from Gregory, Eugenius, Urban the Second, Calixtus the Second, Alexander the Third, and many other of the Roman pontiffs. In fact, about sixty papal bulls were granted at different times to confirm and enlarge the privileges of the place. Dr. Yates says, the precise nature and extent of these privileges cannot be easily ascertained: they seem to have consisted chiefly in an exemption from episcopal visitation, and the consequent and usual designations of subordination and submission. A bull of Pope Calixtus declares that the monks shall receive from a catholic bishop the chrism, the holy oil, the consecration of altars, churches, tables, the ordination of monks, and other episcopal duties. The bulls of Pope Gregory the Ninth explain the exemptions more at large. One ordains that no person, except the Roman pontiff or his legate, shall, in the town of Saint Edmund, or within the four crosses, claim to himself any power or right, or celebrate any public mass, or build any convent, oratory, or chapel, or hold any synod, or exercise any episcopal office. The privilege of exemption from the effect of a general Interdict upon the country was also granted by a bull from Pope Alexander the Third, who, upon such occasion, permitted the abbat and convent, with doors shut, the interdicted and excommunicated excluded, without ringing the bells, and with a low voice, to celebrate divine offices.^d

Abbat Baldwin procured the first of these bulls at Rome in person, where Pope Alexander the Second received him with distinguished honour; gave him a pastoral staff and ring; delegated to him the cure of souls; and presented to him a porphyry altar, accompanied by a privilege not altogether unlike that granted by his successor Pope Alexander the Third. The solemnity of the mass was not to cease in the monastery while that altar remained there, on any prohibition whatever, unless the pope should interdict it expressly by name.^e

Abbat Baldwin's journey, however, was made with the primary intention of opposing Herfastus, who having been elevated, A.D. 1070, to the bishoprick of Elmham, removed the see from that village to the town of Thetford, and in the following year declared his intention of finally establishing it at Bury. A miracle attributed to St. Edmund is represented to have checked the bishop for a time; who, however, renewed the contest, and continued it for several years. Nor was it terminated till King William upon that day, brother William de Stowe, sacrist of the abbey, and warden of the mint, as his attorney (constituted in that behalf by his letters directed to the treasurer and barons of the Exchequer), and Roger de Rede, the master of his mint, with two pixes, containing the money taken out to make assays withal, for the whole time since the money was last assayed, together with the three keys belonging to the same; and two assays were then made at the Exchequer." An account of this trial is still extant in the Register Kempe.

"In consequence of Rede's resignation on account of age and infirmity, the abbat presented in the Exchequer, by William de Stowe the sacristan, Alan de Cove to succeed him, who was admitted and sworn into his office. (Reg. Werketone, Harl. MS. 638, fol. 11 b.) See the Append. of Instr. Num. XXXVI.

"In the year 1320, on the 3d of January, the presentation of Hugh de Houton, late assayer of this mint, to be master in the place of Alan de Cove, deceased, and also that of John de Redgrave to succeed the said Hugh in the office of assayer, were signed, and directed to the treasurer and barons of the Exchequer. (Reg. Thomæ Abb. Harl. MS. 230, fol. 102 b.) When they were presented in the Exchequer the records were examined, and the admissions stated above, in the 4th, 8th, and 25th years of Edward I. and in the 3d year of Edward II. being proved, the said Hugh and John were admitted, and sworn into their respective offices. (Harl. MS. 645, fol. 117.)

"1321. On the 9th of July, in the 15th year of the king, William de Hausted, warden of the mint of London, was ordered to deliver to the abbey one new money die, viz. one stapell and two punzones, to strike money as often as might be necessary; and the abbat was to return the old die before the new one was delivered. (Id. fol. 134.)

"In 1324, John de Prestone, moneyer, and Thomas Dunworthy, assayer, in the room of Redgrave, were admitted in the court of Exchequer. (Id. ibid.)

"1327. In the first year of Edward III. the inhabitants of Bury besieged the abbey, burnt the gates, &c. &c. bore out of the abbey the Assay of their coin (i. e. I presume, the boxes which held the pieces to be assayed), the stamps, and all other things pertaining to their mint. On the 22d of January in the same year the king ordered a new die and assay for the mint to be made, to replace those which were forcibly taken away. (Reg. Kempe, Harl. MS. 645, fol. 134.)

"From the Sacristan's Register it appears that the abbat had in his mint the following officers: Monetarius; Cambiator; duo Custodes; duo Assaiatores; Custos Cunei. (E Registro Sacristæ.) Cole's MSS. vol. xlv. p. 35, from Sir James Burrough's Collections. The date is not mentioned."

From the "Inquirenda de hiis qui administrationem habent in Monetaria, cum Responsis," given in the Appendix to the present Account, (Append. Num. XXXIV.) the persons employed in this mint, at least at one period, appear to have been, "Monetarius; Eschambiator; Assaiator; Custodes; Operarii Magistri; et Garciones eorundem."

convoked a council at Winchester, A. D. 1081, in which the subject was fully discussed, and a decision finally made in favour of the monastery.^a

It was during this abbat's time, also, that the Conqueror made his Survey of the kingdom.

The statement of the property of St. Edmund's Bury abbey in Domesday is voluminous. In Cambridgeshire, in the two hundreds of Ely, the abbat is recorded to have held sixteen acres in Merche. In Wisbece, a fisherman belonging to the abbat paid a rent of five thousand eels. Six acres of land in Saham are also stated to have belonged to the monastery, together with another fisherman. In Bedfordshire, the lands of St. Edmund consisted of half a hide in Biddenham, three hides and three virgates in Chene-mondewiche, and three hides and a virgate in Blunham. In Northamptonshire, a hide in Boctone, a hide and a virgate in Gadintone, half a virgate in Erniwade, a hide and three virgates in Scadewelle, a hide and half a virgate in Hohtone, a virgate and a bovat in Langeport, half a virgate in Badebroc, half a hide and the third part of a virgate in Ferendone, three virgates and a half in Udetorp, two virgates and a half in Clipestone, half a hide in Calme, the third part of a virgate in Medewelle, and three hides and a half in Werchintone. The possessions of the monastery entered in Norfolk are still more numerous, under the titles of Bresingham, Broc, Brodise, Brom, Buccham, Buchanaham, Castrum, Derham, Dicclesburc, Freuse, Frichtuna, Frietuna, Gadesthorp, Gessinga, Guidenham, Hals, Herlinga, Heroluestuna, Hersam, Hidlingeia, Hou, Ilsinghetuna, Isinghetuna, Kechinga, Kercheby, Kerchestuna, Langhala, Lena, Lodnam, Marthingeforda, Menham, Middeltuna, Mundhala, Nortuna, Phincham, Porringelant, Ragheduna, Regadona, Runghetuna, Sceluagra, Scotessa, Semere, Simplinga, Snareshull, Sterestuna, Stratuna, Sutreia, Teueteshala, Thorp, Tibham, Topecroft, Torp, and Wenlinga: beside two or three entries under the head of "Invasiones in Nordfulc." In Suffolk, lands and jurisdictions belonging to the monastery occur under Acle, Adbura, Adixewrd, Anhus, Becles, Bedingefelda, Benagra, Beordewella, Berningham, Bernham, Bertuna, Bitelbeornastuna, Blalsega, Bosemera, Bradefelda, Bradeleia, Bretenhama, Brocfort, Broclega, Caldecota, Cebbenhala, Cerleswrda, Ceuentuna, Chenetuna, Cornerda, Corsforde, Cothefelda, Cotituna, Culeforda, Cunegestuna, Cybenhalla, Drencestuna, Dunham, Ealdham, in Villa ubi quescit Sanctus Eadmundus, Eascefelda, Elmeswella, Eluedena, Eteseca, Euestuna, Fachenham, Fealsham, Finingeham, Flemingtuna, Fornham, Frandes-tuna, Geldinga, Genonefa Forham, Gislingeham, Gliemham, Gnedeshalla, Grotena, Haldsteda, Hametuna, Heme-gretham, Hepworda, Heroluestuna, Hespalea, Hetetuna, Hilderclea, Hopetuna, Horant, Horningesworda, Hvel-

Three hides at Bichelesuade in Bedfordshire are stated to have been given to the monastery by Earl Wallef and his wife in alms, in the time of William the Conqueror.

A hide and three virgates of land at Scadewelle in Northamptonshire are said to have been given to Saint Edmund by King William "pro anima reginae Mathildæ." Porringelant in Norfolk, with Prestetune, Sumerledetuna, and lands at Anhus in Suffolk, are also entered as of his gift. The land at Anhus had previously been bestowed upon the monastery by King Edward the Confessor.

Of sixty acres at Stanham in Suffolk it is said, "Hanc terram habet abbas in vadimonio pro duobus marcis auri, concessu Engelrici quando redimebant Anglici terras suas."

Gislincham, one of the lands held in capite at the formation of the Survey by Gilbert Balistarius, is stated to have belonged, in King Edward's time, to the monastery of St. Edmund, when it was granted on lease, by abbat Leofstan, for the joint lives of one Alsus and his wife. Alsus, at the time of the Survey, was still living, and the under-tenant of Gilbert Balistarius.^b

The edifice of the new church of St. Edmund's Bury was completed in 1095. In 1096, the body of St. Edmund was removed into it.^c This is the last recorded removal of the martyr.

Abbat Baldwin died in 1097;^d or, according to the Annals in the Harleian manuscript 447, as well as the Saxon Chronicle, A. D. 1098. The abbacy remained vacant till A. D. 1100.

King Henry the First, immediately upon his accession, appointed

ROBERT, the son of Hugh earl of Chester, a monk of St. Ebrulf, to the abbacy: though not without resistance on the part of the monks. He was deposed in 1102, by Archbishop Anselm, in a council held at London: the Register Lakingheth, and the Harleian Annals just quoted, say, because he had presumed to accept the church without the canonical election of the monks.^e After a vacancy of five years, a second abbat, of the name of

It was during the short period of this abbat's rule that the favourite project of Herfastus, for the removal of the see of Elmham or Thetford to the monastery of Bury was revived. Dr. Yates says:

"On account of the differences between King Henry the First and Anselm archbishop of Canterbury, Herbert Losinga, bishop of Hulme, went to Rome, A. D. 1101, and endeavoured to avail himself of the advantageous opportunity afforded by a residence at the holy see, to recover to his own diocese the episcopal authority and jurisdiction over the monastery of Bury: but an accident deprived the bishop of his essential and eloquent advocate. Being imprisoned by Guy of Lyons, he was reduced to the necessity of purchasing his release by the pay-

ROBERT was elected August 15th, A. D. 1107.^a He had been previously prior of Westminster. Battely says it was during the time of this abbat that the ancient stone church of St. Mary in Bury was pulled down, to extend the foundation of the right wing of the new monastery; being rebuilt by Geoffrey, the then sacrist, at the south-west corner of the cemetery.^b This same Geoffrey is stated, also, to have built the refectory, the chapter-house, the infirmary, and the abbat's hall.^c

It was in the time of this second abbat Robert that the separation took place of the revenues of the abbat from those of the convent. King Henry the First's charter relating to this division will be found in the Appendix of Instruments.^d

He died A. D. 1112: after which the abbey remained vacant two years.^e

ALBOLD, a native of Jerusalem, and monk of Bec, in Normandy, was the next abbat. He was consecrated on the kalends of November, 1114, by Ralph, archbishop of Canterbury. His death is placed by Ordericus Vitalis in the year 1120.^f

ANSELM, abbat of St. Saba at Rome, and nephew of Archbishop Anselm, accepted the abbacy of Bury upon the death of Albold. He was confirmed in 1121.^g According to the Saxon Chronicle, he accompanied the archbishop of Canterbury to Rome in 1123.^h In or about the year 1135 King Henry the First granted to him, for his monastery, the privilege of a fair at St. Edmundsbury, to last six days; three days before the feast of St. James, on the festival itself, and two days after.ⁱ

In 1136 Anselm was nominated to the see of London; though he appears not to have been succeeded in the abbacy till 1138: when

ORDINGUS, or ORDING, the prior of the monastery, was elected abbat.^k Anselm's election to the see of London,

ment of forty marks. This money the bishop had purposed to have employed at the court of Rome in support of his claims upon the convent of Bury: but having thus lost his auxiliary force, the contest terminated against him; and the monks remained masters of the field. This attack upon the monastery having proved unsuccessful, the bishop had recourse to the more temperate measure of negotiation. On his return from Rome he came to Bury, and having made the abbat and convent acquainted with his intention of removing the see from Thetford to Norwich, he requested their assistance to enable him to erect in that city a magnificent cathedral, as the mother church of the diocese; and observing that the monasterial church of St. Edmund was nearly completed, he desired the convent to lend him their annual carucage, carucagium, or carvage, towards defraying the expence, and that he might be permitted to hold it till his building was finished. The Registers say this request was 'incautiously' complied with: except as far as the liberty of St. Edmund was concerned, the hundred of Stowe in Suffolk, and the deanery of Bilihowe in Norfolk; the carucage of these districts being reserved by the monks to finish their own church at Bury.

"The carvage of Stowe and Bilihowe (Dr. Yates continues) were farmed by the sacrist of Norwich at an annual rent of ten shillings; and the sacrist of Bury sent yearly a bull as a present; but upon this being discontinued, the sacrist of Norwich refused to pay the rent; and thus withheld the carvage of those two districts.

"When the cathedral at Norwich was completed, the bishop refused to fulfil the promises by which he stood engaged to the monks of Bury. Instead of returning the annual carvage to the monastery, he affixed it to the see of Norwich, as a part of the episcopal revenue." Hist. St. Edm. Bury, part i. p. 105.

Notwithstanding this account, however, Dr. Yates thinks there is some reason to suppose that the carvage was actually given to the bishop as a compromise, and to encourage him to persevere in the plan of fixing his see at Norwich. The monks of Bury being thus relieved from the apprehension of any future claims similar to those which had occasioned them so much cost and anxiety.

The idea that Bury might one day or other be erected into an episcopal see was entertained at subsequent periods. Pope Calixtus, in one of his bulls, A. D. 1133, has this passage: "Sane sive locus vester in episcopatum fuerit commutatus, et episcopalis ibi constituatur sedes, nullus ibi ullo tempore nisi monachus in episcopum ordinetur." The design was afterwards in the thought of Henry the VIIIth and Charles I.

however, not obtaining confirmation,^l he returned again to Bury, where he also experienced considerable difficulty before he could resume the government of the monastery. Ordning finally yielded to him the office; in which Anselm remained till his death, upon the third of the nones of January, A. D. 1148; when Ordning was re-elected abbat.

In 1140, according to Battely, who quotes the Chronicon Eliense in the Lambeth library for his authority, a dreadful fire took place at Bury.^m Another fire, if the same is not intended, took place, according to the Annals in the Harleian MS. 447, in 1150, when all the offices of the monastery were destroyed.ⁿ Dr. Yates places this fire four years after Ordning's re-election, that is, in 1152, and says, it consumed the abbat's palace, the refectory, the dormitory, the infirmary, and other buildings.

Previous to abbat Anselm's death, A. D. 1147, Pope Eugenius the Third confirmed, by bull, the appropriation of certain possessions which Anselm had made over for the uses of the convent.^o

Between 1151 and 1154 abbat Ordning procured the chapel of St. Giles within the abbey church to be consecrated by Geoffrey, bishop of St. Asaph.^p

It was in the time of this abbat, also, A. D. 1153, that Prince Eustace came to St. Edmund's Bury. Stow, noticing the peace relating to the succession which had been made between Henry and Stephen in 1153, upon the authority of different writers, says, "Eustace, the king's son, was angry with his father for agreeing to this peace, and therefore, in a rage, departed from the court towards Cambridge, to destroy that country. Coming to St Edmundsbury, he was there honourably received and feasted; but when he could not have such money as he demanded, to bestow among his men of war, he went away in a rage, spoiling the corn in the fields belonging to the abbey, and carried it into castles thereby: but, as he sate down to Andreæ apostoli in cœmeterio fratrum, et capellam S. Sabæ in urbe Roma, et ideo memoratum altare ei construere, et desuper pingere fecit.

"Capellam S. "Capella S. Margaretæ ab Alboldo sacerdote, uti supra vidimus, constructa tempore Anselmi dejecta est, et præmissa ecclesia eidem virgini ædificata.

"Altare S. Crucis retro chorum dedicavit Albericus Hostiensis episcopus, qui functus est legatione totius Angliæ tempore Stephani regis, et hæc dedicatio in vigilia S. Edmundi facta est. Anselmus abbas tunc Romam iverat.

ⁱ See the charter in Battely, p. 69. Four years before this, A. D. 1132, King Henry I. returning to England from his interview with Pope Innocent III. was overtaken by a violent storm; when, making solemn vows of reformation and amendment, immediately upon his landing, he is said to have come in pilgrimage to St. Edmundsbury.

^k Ralph de Diceto, Script. X. col. 506.

^l Ralph de Diceto ut sup. says, that in 1138, when abbat Anselm was proposed for the see of London, Thurstan, archbishop of York, wrote to the Pope in these words:

"Significavit nobis paternitatis vestræ dilectio de vita et opinione Anselmi abbatis sancti Edmundi aliquid inquirere, et vobis renuntiare. Ad quod vobis rescribimus, quod si vitam et opinionem ejus sequamur, multo tutius est eum ab abbacia removere quam in Londoniensi ecclesia promovere. Cum igitur dominus papa super questione proposita longum cum cardinalibus habuisset tractatum, Albericus Hostiensis episcopus quod sequitur pronunciavit in publicum: 'Quoniam electio canonicorum Londoniensium citra conscientiam et assensum Decani facta fuit, cujus est officium in eligendo pastore suo de jure primam vocem habere, nos eam auctoritate beati Petri devocamus in irritum.'

dinner, he fell mad upon receiving the first morsel, and miserably died, and was buried at Feversham."^a

Abbat Ording died in 1156, on the second of the nones of February.^b

HUGH, prior of Westminster, was elected abbat in 1157, receiving confirmation from Henry bishop of Winchester, the pope's legate. In 1163 he was at the council of Tours, where he usurped the seat of the abbat of St. Albans.^c It was under his abbacy, in 1173, when King Henry the Second's forces gained a victory over Robert de Bossu, earl of Leicester, and his army of Flemings, near Fornham, that the banner of St. Edmund is said to have been carried before the king's army.^d In 1175 abbat Hugh was at the council of Westminster. He died in 1180, of a fall from his horse.^e Upon his death the abbey remained vacant, according to the Chronicle of Joceline de Brokelond, two years and three months; according to the Register Lakyngheth, a year and three months.^f

SAMPSON DE BOTINGTON, a native of Norfolk, was consecrated abbat on the 2d of the kalends of March, 1182, at Bishops Waltham, in Hampshire, by the bishops of Winchester and Waterford.^g He had previously been a monk and subsacrist of the abbey, and confessor to King Henry the Second. The improvements in the abbey buildings and offices during his time, under the particular care of the sacrists Hugh, Walter de Banham, and Robert de Gravele, will be found enumerated in the account of the sacrists in the Appendix.^h

Soon after abbat Sampson's election, we find him granting a charter to the townsmen, or burgesses, of Bury, explanatory of their customary services and liberties.ⁱ Some of the abbats, in earlier times, Dr. Yates observes, had made concessions, upon the authority of which the townsmen were anxious to erect themselves into an independent guild, or corporation: and, as the subsequent history of the abbats will show, the contests, on the part of the burgesses, to do away the jurisdiction of the superior lord, were, century after century, incessant, and sometimes attended by consequences of a very serious nature to the monastery.

In 1184 abbat Sampson founded the hospital of St. Saviour without the north gate of the town.^k

From the Annals of St. Edmundsbury in the Harleian manuscript Num. 447, it appears that the massacre of the Jews who came to the coronation of King Richard the First was in some degree imitated at Bury. "A. D. MCLXXXIX. Ad coronationem Ricardi regis Anglorum—Judæi occisi sunt apud London."—"A. D. MCXC. Hoc anno Judæi etiam occisi sunt apud Sanctum Ædmondum dominica in ramis palmarum. Qui vero remanserunt procuratore SAMSONIS abbatis ejecti sunt eodem anno circa festum sancti Dionysii."^l The Jews, it should seem, had previously lived upon good terms with the monks. They had even deposited their money in the treasury of the monastery as in a bank.^m The remains of their synagogue at the present day bespeak it to have been a building of consequence, as well as of considerable antiquity.

Brompton says, in 1189 abbat Sampson bought of the king, for a thousand marks, the manor of Mildenhale, which had of old belonged to the abbey.ⁿ This was a large sum, if it was the fine of a charter of confirmation.

King Richard the First is stated to have paid a visit of devotion to the shrine of St. Edmund previous to his setting out on the crusade.^o He also gave lands in Aylesham, to maintain a light constantly burning before it.^p Sir James ^d In the MS. of Lydgate's Life of St. Edmund, which formerly belonged to King Henry VI. (see p. 99), are representations of two BANNERS, feigned by the poet to have been borne by St. Edmund in his war against the Danes. The first represents Adam and Eve by the tree of life, about to eat the forbidden fruit, which is reached to the woman by the serpent, who appears, down to the middle, with a human shape. Above is the Holy Lamb, within a gold circle, and a glory about its head; its right foot bearing up a golden cross fleurée fitchée. The red ground of this banner within the circle which contains the Lamb is powdered with crescents, and without with stars, all of gold, as is the tree itself. The figures of the woman, serpent, and man, the apples, and the Lamb, are all of silver. The second banner represents the coat of arms belonging to the abbey, Az. three crowns Or.: the crowns, according to the poet, signifying royal dignity, virginity, and martyrdom. Lydgate represents St. Edmund to have used this banner "at Geynesburihe." Compare MS. Harl. 2278, foll. 2, 4, 103 b, 104.

Apud Eboracum D. mutuis se vulneribus appetunt xvij. kal. Apr. Apud SANCTUM EDMUNDUM occiduntur Judei xv. kal. Aprilis, scilicet in die Palmarum. Qui vero remanserunt procurante abbate Sampson de prædicta villa perpetuo sunt ejecti."

^m Joceline de Brakelond, in his Chronicle, (MS. Harl. 1005, fol. 123,) noticing the vacancy of St. Edmund's Bury abbey after the death of abbat Hugh, gives a character of the three principal persons who stood foremost in the opinion of the convent. From the particulars which he states then, and in a subsequent passage which will be quoted, Sampson should seem to have been known to the convent for his dislike of the Jews.

"SAMPSON SUBSACRISTA, magister super operarios, nihil fractum, nihil rimatum, nihil fissum, nihil inemendatum reliquit pro posse suo: unde conventum et maxime claustrales conciliavit in gratiam. In diebus illis Chorus noster fuit erectus Sampson procurante. Historias picturæ ordinante, et versus elegiacos dictante. Attractum fecit magnum de lapidibus et sabulo ad magnam turrim ecclesiæ construendam. Et interrogatus unde denarios haberet ad hoc faciendum, respondit quosdam burgenses dedisse ei occulte pecuniam ad turrim edificandam et perficiendam. Dicebant tamen quidam fratres nostri quod Warinus monachus noster custos feretri et Sampson subsacrista communi concilio surripuerunt quasi furtive portionem aliquam de oblationibus feretri, ut eam in usus necessarios ecclesiæ et nominatim ad edificationem turris expendere, hac ratione ducti quia videbant quod oblationes in usus extraordinarios expendebantur ab aliis, qui ut verius dicam eas furabantur. Et ut tam felicitis furti sui suspicionem tollerent prænominati duo viri truncum quendam fecerunt concavum et perforatum in medio vel in summo, et obseratum sera ferrea, et erigi fecerunt in magna ecclesia juxta hostium extra chorum in communi transitu vulgi, ut ibi ponerent homines elemosinam suam ad edificationem turris. WILLELMUS vero SACRISTA socium suum Sampsonem suspectum habuit et multi alii qui partem ejusdem Willielmi fovebant, tam Christiani quam Judei.

"JUDEI inquam quibus sacrista pater et patronus dicebatur. De cuius protectione gaudebant, et liberum ingressum et egressum habebant et passim ibant per monasterium, vagantes per altaria et circa feretrum dum missarum celebrarentur solempnia, ET DENARIJ EORUM IN THESAURO NOSTRO SUB CUSTODIA SACRISTÆ REPONEBANTUR, et quod abscondi essent uxores eorum cum parvis suis in pitanceria nostra tempore guerræ hospitabantur."

After Sampson's election and confirmation as abbat, the historian continues,

"DOMINUS ABBAS petiit a rege literas ut Judei ejicerentur a villa Sancti Ædmundi, allegans quod quicumque est in villa Sancti Ædmundi vel infra bannam leucam de jure Sancti Ædmundi est. Igitur vel Judei debent esse homines Sancti Ædmundi, vel de villa sunt ejiciendi. Data est igitur licentia ut eos ejiceret, ita tamen quod haberent omnia catalla, scilicet et pretia domorum suarum et terrarum, et cum emissi essent et armata manu conducti ad diversa oppida abbas jussit solemniter excommunicari per omnes ecclesias, et ad omnia altaria omnes illos qui de cetero receptarent Judeos vel in hospitio reciperent in villa Sancti Ædmundi. Quod tamen postea dispensatum est per Justitios regis; scilicet ut si Judei venerunt ad magna placita abbatis ad exigendum debita sua a debitoribus suis, sub hac occasione poterunt duobus diebus et ij. noctibus hospitari in villa, tertio autem die libere discedent." Ibid. fol. 133.

ⁿ Script. X. Twysd. col. 1162. "A. D. 1189. Sampson etiam abbas de sancto Ædmondo emit a rege pro mille marcis manerium de Mildenhale, quod antiquo jure ad abbatiam suam ut dictum fuerat pertinebat." This was a large sum, if it was for a charter of confirmation.

"Joceline de Brakelond, Harl. MS. 1005, ut supr. says, "Abbas optulit regi Ricardo quingentas marcas pro manerio de Mildenhale, dicens illud manerium lx. libr. et decem et pro tanto esse rollatum in magna Rolla de Wincestr. Et cum ita spem voti sui concepisset, cepit res dilationem usque in crastinum. Interim venit aliquis dicens regi manerium illud bene valere c. libr. In crastino igitur, abbate petitioni suæ instante, dixit rex 'Nihil est domine abbas quod queris, vel mille marcas dabis vel manerium non habebis.'"

^o Yates, Hist. of St. Edm. Bury, part i. p. 144. Abbat Sampson is stated to have offered his services in accompanying the king upon the expedition; but they were declined, in consequence of the bishop of Norwich telling the king that it was neither expedient for the state, nor safe for the counties of Norfolk and Suffolk, that the bishop of Norwich and the abbat of St. Edmund's Bury should be both absent at the same time.

^p "Richardus, &c. dat confirmatque abbati Sampsoni x. libratas terræ in Aylesham ad inveniendum bonum et competentem luminarium ante corpus gloriosi martyris Edmundi." Registr. Sacristæ. The Register Pinchebeck says, "iiij. cereorum continue ardentium circa feretrum beati Edmundi." The illuminations representing St. Edmund's shrine in Lydgate's poetical life of the saint, preserved among the Harleian manuscripts, uniformly exhibit a light at each of the four corners.

Burrough's Collections say that, in 1191, that monarch gave to the church of St. Edmund the standard of Isaac, king of Cyprus.^a

It was in this king's reign that Eleanor, queen consort of Henry II., remitted to the convent a fine of ten marks of gold, due to her for queen gold; giving also a gold cup in alms, in honour of St. Edmund, which the convent, on account of their poverty, had presented to her in lieu of the fine.^b

Battely says, "A. D. MCXCVIII. Feretrum S. Edmundi comburitur."^c

King John confirmed the liberties of the monastery in the first year of his reign. He was here in 1201.^d In 1203, he came again to Bury, paid his adorations at the shrine of St. Edmund, and made some valuable offerings; but, says Dr. Yates, that the motives which conferred on the royal saint and martyr the honour of this visit were purely religious, admits of doubt; as the monarch prevailed upon the abbat and convent to grant him, during his life, the use of the valuable jewels which his mother Queen Eleanor had presented to St. Edmund.^e In 1205, the earls and barons in opposition to King John held a general assembly here.^f In 1208, at the promulgation of the interdict, when John seized many of the ecclesiastical revenues, he made an especial reservation in favour of St. Edmund's Bury.^g

In 1210, the tower of St. Edmund's church was blown down.^h

Abbat Sampson died, according to Battely, on the 3d of the kalends of January, 1211.ⁱ The Harleian MS. 447, says in 1212. The seal of this abbat, now or formerly remaining appendant to a deed in the archives of Christ-Church Canterbury, represented him mitred, with a crozier in the right and a book in the left hand, with this inscription, "SIGILLUM SAMPSONIS DEI GRATIA ABBATIS SANCTI EDMUNDI:" on the reverse of the impression was the holy lamb bearing a cross, circumscribed "SECRETUM SAMPSONIS ABBATIS."^k Abbat Sampson, it is said, was accustomed to preach sometimes in the Northern dialect.^l

Upon the death of abbat Sampson, the custody of the monastery, which remained vacant two years, was given by the king to Nicholas bishop of Tusculum.^m A contest appears to have arisen in the convent respecting the election of a successor; some of the monks giving their votes for Hugh de Northwold, and some for Robert de Gravele the sacrist. This contest was finally determined by delegates from the pope: when

HUGH DE NORTHWOLD, or NORWOLDE, was declared abbat. He was confirmed in his office by Benedict bishop of Rochester, on the 8th of the ides of March, 1215.ⁿ He had been admitted a monk of this monastery in 1202. In 1228, he was translated to the bishopric of Ely,^o where the legend of St. Edmund's martyrdom afterwards adorned his tomb.

In 1214, after King John's French expedition, under colour of devotion, the chief earls and barons of the kingdom met at St. Edmund's Bury, where they swore upon the high altar to demand of the king the confirmation of the charter of King Henry the First, which Cardinal Langton had before presented to the prelates at St. Paul's in London. Matthew Paris is minute as to the distinct nature of the oath which was taken by the barons.^p It was, probably, in consequence of this, or of some other encouragement received by the barons at St. Edmund's Bury, that, in 1215, King John ordered the prior and sacrist to desist from the fortification of the town, and to drive his enemies from it.^q

A. D. 1216, Lewis, the dauphin of France, who had been invited over by the insurgent barons, according to the French biographer of St. Edmund,^r plundered the monastery of Bury, and carried away with him into France the body of the royal saint and martyr.^s

In 1223, abbat Northwold attended King Henry the Third, with the military force required of him, at the siege of Bedford castle.^t

RICHARD DE INSULA, or ELY, who had been first sacrist, or, according to the Annals of Burton, prior of St. Edmund's and afterwards prior of Burton, was elected abbat of St. Edmund's Bury on the nones of June, 1229. He was installed on St. Edmund's day, in the presence of Richard archbishop of Canterbury, Hugh bishop of Ely (his predecessor as abbat), and many other bishops and peers of England.^u He died on the 6th of the kalends of September, 1234.^x

^b See the Instrument, Num. XVII. Joceline de Brakelond relates this benefaction differently: he says, "Cum autem regina Ellienor secundum consuetudinem regni deberet accipere c. marcas ubi rex cepit mille, accepit a nobis calicem magnum aureum in pretium C. marcarum, et eundem calicem nobis reddidit pro anima domini sui regis Henrici qui eum primo dederat Sancto Edmundo. Alia quoque vice cum thesaurus ecclesie nostrae portaretur Lundonias ad redemptionem regis Ricardi eadem regina eundem calicem adquisivit pro c. marcis et nobis reddidit accipiens cartam nostram a nobis in testimonium promissionis nostrae factae in verbo veritatis quod calicem illum nunquam pro aliquo casu ab ecclesia nostra alienabimus."

^c Antiq. S. Edm. Burgi, p. 85. Mr. Carlisle, in his Description of the endowed Grammar Schools of England and Wales, 8vo. Lond. 1818, vol. ii. p. 513, says, the town of St. Edmund's Bury seems very early to have enjoyed the advantages of a free school. For abbat Sampson, in the year 1198, built a school-house here, and settled a stipend on the master; directing that forty poor boys should be exempt from every demand from the master, with respect to their learning. This building was near the present shire-house, the street still retaining the name of School Hall Street. It is, probably, to this foundation, if something higher is not intended, that Joceline de Brakelond, the contemporary of Sampson, alludes in his Chronicle. "In villa S. Edmundi domos lapideas emit abbas, et eas scholarum regimini assignavit, hac occasione, ut pauperes clerici imperpetuum ibi quieti essent de conductione domus. Ad quam conducendam denarium vel obolum singuli scholares tam impotentes quam potentes bis in anno conferre cogebantur." (Harl. MS. 1005, fol. 133.) That the school supported here by the abbey continued to flourish in the time of King Henry the Sixth is evident from a deed transcribed in the Appendix, Num. XXXVIII., from the Register of Instruments relating to the Monastery, of the time of abbat Curteys, now in the possession of Craven Ord, Esq.

Thorn, in his Chronicle, Script. X. col. 1843, says, "A. D. MCC. Confederatio inter monachos S. Augustini Cantuar. et capitulum S. Edmundi Regis."

The abbat and convent appear in early times also to have maintained schools in their manors of Mildenhale and Beccles. See the 'Traditiones Patrum.' Harl. MS. 1005, fol. 97 b.

the feasts of St. Cosmus and St. Damianus, A. D. 1234, receiving the benediction from Hugh bishop of Ely at Hatfield. King Henry the Third granted to this abbat the privilege of holding two fairs at Bury annually, of three days each, at the north and south gates of the town; also, by another charter, a market and fair at Meleford.^a Abbat Henry died on the 13th of the kalends of July, 1248.

EDMUND DE WALPOLE, or WALPOOLE, LL.D., a monk of St. Edmund's, was elected abbat on the nones of July, 1248, and received the benediction from Hugh bishop of Ely on the 5th of the kalends of October. He had made his profession as a monk of the monastery but two years before.^b

It was either immediately before, or very soon after abbat Walpole's election, that Boniface archbishop of Canterbury was desirous of subjecting the monastery to visitation. The bull of Pope Innocent the Fourth, however, continuing the exemption, except where the visitor was deputed by the holy see, is preserved at Lambeth, from the archives of which place it was printed by Mr. Battely.^c

The convent, at abbat Walpole's election, sent three monks to Rome, to obtain the confirmation of the pope; who is stated at first to have refused the application, although the election was unopposed: but afterwards to have confirmed the choice, upon condition that eight hundred marks should be paid to a certain merchant, to whom the pope stood indebted.^d

During abbat Walpole's rule, Richard earl of Gloucester appears to have been an implacable and constant enemy to the convent. Pope Innocent the Fourth, by a bull, dated in the eleventh year of his pontificate, directs the archbishop of Canterbury to pronounce ecclesiastical censure against this nobleman, who was charged not only with endeavouring by harassment to make the abbat and convent relinquish certain rights, and putting them to great expenses, but even with driving the cattle both of the convent and the abbey tenants to his castles.^e

Abbat Walpole died on the 11th of the kalends of January, 1256.

SIMON DE LUTON, LUTENE, or LUYTON, prior of the monastery (to which office he had succeeded in 1252), was elected abbat on the 19th of the kalends of February, 1257.^f Two monks were immediately deputed to Rome, to obtain the papal confirmation: they returned, however, without success, a constitution having been recently made that all exempt abbats should apply personally for their confirmations to the apostolic see. Abbat Simon, therefore, immediately undertook the journey to Rome, and received confirmation from Pope Alexander the Fourth, at Viterbo, on the 11th of the kalends of November following: being the first of the exempt abbats of England who went to Rome for this purpose.^g

It was during the vacancy in the abbacy after abbat Walpole's death, that the Friars Minors, Grey, or Franciscan Friars, made their appearance at Bury, where they remained some time without any settled habitation; but, at length, having obtained a grant from Pope Alexander, which permitted them to occupy any land they might be able to obtain, and relying upon this authority, they procured a situation in the North part of the town, and presumed, during the night, and in an unconsecrated place, to perform divine service, and celebrate mass. The monks, astonished at this intrusion, were much troubled; and the more so, as the church having lately lost its abbat, was destitute of the advice of a pastor. Some of the officers of the monastery, therefore, undertook to admonish the brethren; but this failing of the desired effect, the dependants of the monks proceeded to demolish the buildings, and expelled the friars from the town. The friars now applied to the court of Rome for redress: when the pope not only reproved the monks with severity by letter, but directed the archbishop of Canterbury and the dean of Lincoln to put the friars in possession of a plot of ground in the West part of the town. The archbishop, by his commissary the treasurer of Hereford, and the dean of Lincoln in person, on meeting the monks in their chapter, endeavoured in vain to prevail upon them to admit the friars: they then adjourned to the parish church of St. Mary, where a long discussion was held, and whence they proceeded to the plot of ground already mentioned; when the dean, pulling up a little twig, gave the friars livery of seisin, that is, put them in possession of the premises. The monks not assenting to this act of delegated authority, both parties mutually harassed each other by vexatious proceedings at law. The friars, who, as Matthew Paris informs us, were supported by the Earl of Gloucester, the old enemy of the convent, at length obtained the favour of King Henry the Third. The king, by his letters, endeavoured to intercede for the friars, and was seconded in his intercession not only by the queen and Prince Edward, but by a great many of the chief nobility. The monks, however, continuing firm, the king sent his chief justice to Bury, and by an exertion of royal power placed the friars in possession of the plot of ground already alluded to, on the eve of the Translation of St. Edmund, 1256. They immediately commenced the construction of a suitable edifice, and retained their residence in it for six years. Matthew Paris says it was a matter of general surprise that such holy men as the friars were, who had voluntarily chosen a life of poverty, should, in despite of the fear of God and of the revered Martyr, and in disparagement of the peace and privileges of others, violently disturb a noble church of such acknowledged dignity and antiquity. On the decease of Pope Alexander, and the succession of Urban IVth to the papacy, the monks made another application to the see of Rome. Urban revoked the bulls of his predecessor, and peremptorily commanded not only that the buildings erected by the friars should be demolished, but that they should also quit the town within a month. The friars, finding the victory of the monks complete, deputed certain of their brethren to make submission; who, in the presence of the abbat and the whole convent, upon the eve of the Martyrdom of St. Edmund, A. D. 1263, publicly renounced their right to the spot which they had occupied. Peace being restored, the abbat and convent generously granted to the friars a small plot of pasture ground at Babbewell, now called Toll-gate, without the bounds and jurisdiction of the town, upon which they constructed another house, and where they remained till the Dissolution.^h

^h The following is the original statement of this affair, as transcribed by Battely, pp. 102—105, from the Register WERKETONE, now preserved in the Harleian collection of manuscripts at the British Museum, num. 638.

In 1259 the pope granted to the king the tenth of the goods of the barony, or fee of St. Edmund for five years.^a

In 1264, an association of some of the younger burgesses, calling themselves a Guild, occasioned so much dissension respecting the keepers of the town gates, that the abbat applied for redress to the king, who granted a writ of enquiry; but some of the elder and more discreet townsmen, apprehending that the event of this action might prove injurious to the liberties they already enjoyed under the monastery, deputed certain of their own body to entreat the abbat to desist from the prosecution, expressing a desire that he would appoint proper judges, or that he would himself, either in a civil or ecclesiastical court, enquire into all the injuries the convent had received; that whoever were found to be guilty should make a competent satisfaction, which, if they refused to do, their goods and chattels should be distrained; that the Guild should be annulled; and that all who refused to comply with these terms should be expelled the town. Upon the Inquisition being held, it was found that the burgesses had shut the north gate against the abbat, and the south gate against the sacrist and cellarer; that they had made an assault upon the great gate of the abbey; that they had broken the gate of the church-yard; that they had pursued the servants of the monks even to the altar; and formed themselves into a Guild, contrary to ancient custom. The Guild, therefore, was decreed to be dissolved, and, in consideration of the grievances complained of by the abbat, forty pounds of silver were ordered to be paid to him; the abbat reserving the liberty of proceeding against any of the offenders. To insure the faithful performance of this decree, twenty-four of the senior burgesses bound themselves and their heirs by a solemn oath, and by a written engagement under their seals.^b

In 1266, when the barons plundered Norwich, Roger de Skerning, the bishop of that see, fled to the monastery of St. Edmund's Bury, where he was protected.^c

Henry the Third, Dr. Yates observes, several times visited the convent of St. Edmund.^d A royal mandate was issued, dated from Bury, 1st Sept. 36 Henry III., commanding that bakers should not impress their bread intended for sale with the sign of the cross, Agnus Dei, or the name of Jesus Christ; a practice derogatory to the honour of those sacred emblems.^e When civil commotions distracted the kingdom, at a subsequent period of his reign, that monarch appointed a general rendezvous of his friends and supporters to be held at Bury, and summoned the barons who owed military service to the crown to meet him there. They accordingly assembled, equipped with horses and arms, and were joined at Bury by the king early in February, 1267. Ottobon the legate, attended by the chief prelates and peers of the realm, came the following day to the monastery, and held there a solemn council; in which he, in the presence of the king, pronounced sentence of excommunication upon the insurgents who had posted themselves in the isle of Ely, unless they returned to their duty and allegiance. The legate then returned to London, and the king marched toward Cambridge.^f

A few years after this, A. D. 1272, King Henry the Third held a parliament at Bury, whence he proceeded to quell an insurrection at Norwich. During his stay at this monastery upon his return, A. D. 1273, he was seized with the disorder which terminated his life.^g

Abbat Simon de Luton died in 1279.^h Upon his death King Edward the First seized both the abbat's portion and the barony; and the possessions of the convent could not be rescued from him either by entreaty or money: but all things were disposed of by the direction of John de Berwick, the king's attorney. He made an exhibition of

The following are the passages relating to this transaction in Matthew Paris:

A. D. 1258. "Sub eorundem temporum voluminibus, Fratres Minores auctoritate Papali sese ingesserunt et intruserunt in civitate sancti Edmundi regis et martyris, invitis et contradicentibus ejusdem loci abbate et conventu. Et introducti sunt, et instituti violenter per laicorum manum, videlicet comitis Gloverniæ, quem constat esse dictorum abbatis et conventus adversarium, et Gileberti de Præstona. Paucis autem præcedentibus diebus, venerat abbas a curia, qui sibi præcavens in futurum, contra impetum dictorum Fratrum, scripto Papali præmunierat, sed illic postea impetrarunt Fratres in contrarium, per hanc adjectionem; Non obstante. Unde hoc audientes universi non poterant satis admirari, quòd tam sancti viri, qui spontaneam paupertatem elegerunt; contempo Dei timore, et tam reverendi martyris et hominum oblocutione, et privilegiorum ac conservatorum tuitione, violenter illius nobilis ecclesiæ statum perturbarent; quam certum est esse magnæ dignitatis et antiquitatis. Nec sic angebat abbatem totus labor transalpinus, vel debita quibus involvebatur inæstimabilia: et ad cumulum angustiarum suarum arctatus, placito comitis Gloverniæ, languoris elegit dilationes." Mat. Par. edit. 1684, p. 830.

"Diebus vero eisdem, abbas S. Edmundi regis et martyris, morosa dilatione et sumptuosa in curia Romana protracta rediit domum in debitis expensarum non minimis obligatus. Fratres insuper Minores, ut præfactum est, abbate et conventu reclamantibus, sibi mansionem ædificabant. Abbas tamen cum extitit nuper Romæ, impetraverat privilegium, ne Fratres hoc aliquatenus attemptarent. Sed ipsi, adjecta hac clausula: Non obstante, &c. omnia impetrata infirmabant." Ibid. p. 832.

JOHN DE NORWOLD, who held the office of hostilar in the monastery, was elected abbat May 5th, 1279.^b The temporalities of the abbey were restored to him by the king on Nov. 14th following.^c

A. D. 1289, during the time of this abbat, King Edward the First and Queen Eleanor honoured this town and monastery with a visit in the month of August.^d In the next year, 1290, this abbat obtained a licence from the king to make a will, to dispose of his goods and chattels.^e

In 1292 a renewal took place of the disputes between the abbey and the town, chiefly relative to the election of the alderman and the keepers of the gates. They were thus adjusted by an inquisition taken at Bury by John de Mettingham, William de Giselham, and Hugh de Cressingham. On Michaelmas-day, every year, the townsmen were to come to the abbat, or, in his absence, to the prior, in the church of St. Edmund, and desire leave to elect an alderman. This was to be immediately granted to them. Then they were to elect a person proper for the office of alderman; for whose behaviour they were to be responsible to the abbat and convent, and who was to be admitted as such by the abbat, unless some reasonable objection were made to him: and, if such objection were made, then another was to be chosen, to be approved as before. In regard to the gate-keepers, the alderman, at the first portemmannemot after his admission, was, with the rest of the inhabitants of the town, to present to the sacrist, or his bailiffs, four persons proper for keeping the four gates; for whose behaviour the alderman and other inhabitants were to be answerable to the abbat and convent. The fifth gate, that is, the east gate, was to remain in the custody of the abbat. Such was stated to have been the established custom from the time of King Edward the Confessor.^f

In 1296, the day after the commemoration of All Souls, the king held a parliament at St. Edmund's Bury, designing especially to ask an aid of the clergy and the people. The archbishop of Canterbury held his council with the clergy at the same time at Bury, where he published the new papal constitution, which forbade all ecclesiastics from contributing to the secular power. The clergy obeying the pope's injunction, and refusing the king's request, the parliament was prorogued, and afterwards removed to London.^g Robert, archbishop of Canterbury, at this time made a declaration, dated Nov. 6th, 1296, in the presence of a notary public and other witnesses, that, by his entry into the town and monastery of St. Edmund, and by his stay there to attend his duty in parliament, it was not his intention to make any infringement upon the privileges and immunities of the abbat and convent.^h

Abbat Norwold died on the 4th of the kalends of November, 1301.ⁱ

The licence for a fresh election was granted on Nov. 30;^k and on Jan. 30th following the royal assent was given to the election of

THOMAS DE TOTYNGTON; to whom, after he had received the pope's confirmation, the temporalities were restored Aug. 10th, 1302.

Wanley's Notes, as quoted by Dr. Yates, are minute as to the homage and profession of allegiance made to this abbat on the eve of St. Matthew, 1302, by the alderman and burgesses of the town: nevertheless, in 1305, a commission was held to make enquiry into no less than seventeen charges made by the abbat and convent against the townsmen, for infringing the rights of the monastery, resisting the officers, and ill-treating the bailiff and servants and the workmen employed upon the buildings of the place. Several of the townsmen were punished upon this occasion with fine and imprisonment.^l

Thomas de Totyngton, previous to his election as abbat, had been sub-prior of the monastery. He was summoned to the parliament at Carlisle in 1307, but sent John de Everesdon as his proxy.^m He died on the 7th of the ides of Jan. 1312. On the 18th of the same month the king issued his licence for a new election,ⁿ when the choice fell on

THOMAS DE DRAUGHTON, or DRAGHTON, to whom the king gave his assent on March the 4th, and restored the temporalities on May 17th.^o

Stowe says, in 1326 "King Edward kept his Christmas at S. Edmundsbury, sore afraid of the queene's returne and of those exiled persons that were with her, lest they should with a power of aliens put him downe from his kingly dignitie."^p His queen, Isabella, who landed on the coast of Suffolk, afterwards marched her troops to the town, where numerous adherents joined her.^q

In the very next year, A. D. 1327, abbat Draughton had the great mortification to see his abbey reduced almost to a heap of ruins. The great mass of the townsmen, headed by their alderman and chief burgesses, and joined by an immense force collected from the neighbouring towns and villages, made three several attacks upon the monastery and its possessions; sacking and burning the edifices of the Abbey, robbing it of its ornaments, charters, and treasure, and extending their depredations to a great number of the manors which belonged to it. Several of the townsmen, taking Peter de Clopton the prior, and about twenty monks, to the chapter-house, compelled them to execute, under seal, several deeds injurious to the rights and privileges of the monastery; particularly a deed or grant from the convent to the town of Bury, to constitute and continue the burgesses as a Guild or Corporation, with a common seal, having the custody of the town gates, and the wardship of orphans; and also to bind themselves in a bond, or obligation, for the payment of ten thousand pounds to Oliver Kemp and certain of the townsmen named in the said bond; to discharge them from all debts owing to the convent; and to promise not to proceed against them at law for the recovery of any damages done to the monastery.

Large portions of several of the Chartularies of St. Edmund's Bury are filled with the commissions, writs, and pleas issued upon this occasion, the abbat and convent having instituted a number of distinct legal processes. Dr. Yates, in his History of St. Edmund's Bury, gives the substance of no fewer than eleven commissions and writs, most of them of the same date, but with some difference in the names of the monks injured, different names of culprits, and different assessments of damages. The townsmen, he says, had collected together about twenty thousand men and women; and, as the parochial clergy had generally a great antipathy to the monks, many of the curates and ministers of the towns and villages joined the rioters, and abetted the outrageous attacks upon the possessions of the monks.^r Abbat

The following are abstracts of those parts of the principal pleadings on this occasion, which enumerate the precise losses of the monks: they are copied from the Register WERKETONE, MS. Harl. 638.

Draughton was at this time in London; but, upon his application to the king, a military force was sent down to quell the riot. Twenty-four of the chief burgesses were apprehended and imprisoned, thirty carts full of the rioters were taken prisoners to Norwich, and nineteen or twenty of the most notorious offenders were executed. Thirty-two clerici (parochial clergymen) were convicted as aiders and abettors.

The enquiries and discussions, Dr. Yates continues, which arose out of this violent and injurious affair appear to have occupied almost the five following years. The final decision was given in a decree, or 'Concordia,' between the abbat and convent on the one part, and the townsmen on the other part, by King Edward the Third and his council, on Thursday after the feast of the Holy Trinity, in the fifth year of his reign, A. D. 1332.^a The justices awarded a hundred and forty thousand pounds damages; but, at the instance of the king himself, the whole was remitted, except two thousand marks; the payment of which was to be made within twenty years, by disbursements of a hundred marks a year.^b

Fox states, that J. Berton the alderman, William Herling, thirty-two priests, thirteen women, and a hundred and thirty-eight others of the said town, were outlawed; of whom, divers, after grudging at the abbat for breaking promise with them at London, conspired against him, and invaded the manor of Chevington, where he then lay. They robbed and bound him: they then shaved him, and carried him away to London; where they removed him from street to street, till they could convey him over the Thames into Kent, and over sea to Dist, in Brabant, where they kept him in much misery and slavery. At length, they were all excommunicated by the archbishop of Canterbury, and afterwards by the pope. At last, it being known where the abbat was, he was rescued by his friends, and brought home with procession.^c

Abbat Draughton died on the 5th of the nones of May, 1335.^a

WILLIAM DE BERNHAM, sub-prior of the monastery, received the royal assent to his election as abbat on May 31st, the same year.^b

During abbat Bernham's rule, in 1345, William Bate-man, bishop of Norwich, entered into a sharp contest with the abbat and convent, in the hope of subjecting the monastery to his visitation. The abbat pleaded the total exemption of his house, by charter, from all episcopal jurisdiction whatsoever. The king also, by his letters patent, dated August 6th, 1346, confirmed to the monastery its ancient privileges and immunities, commanding the bishop to desist from any attempt to infringe them. The bishop, however, appealed to the courts of law; but a verdict was found for the abbat, and the bishop declared to have incurred a præmunire, subjecting himself, under the charter of King Hardicnute, to the payment into the king's exchequer of thirty talents of gold. The temporalities of the see of Norwich were, in consequence, seized by the sheriffs till the payment of the fine; while the king's attorney-general moved an enquiry to ascertain the value in money of the talents, which is said, in one authority, to have amounted to three thousand, according to others, to ten thousand pounds. A subsequent appeal from the bishop, in 1347, to a council held at St. Paul's, produced a fresh arrangement, the details of which do not appear in any of the Abbey Registers. The bishop, no doubt, finally relinquished his claim of visitation.^c Abbat Bernham died in 1361. On 18th of March that year the royal assent was given to the election of his journey to Rome for confirmation, but died, before he had received it, at Avignon.

JOHN DE BRINKELE, LL.B., was appointed abbat by papal provision August 4th, 1361:^d on November the 12th in which year the temporalities of the monastery were restored to him.^e No event of particular importance to the abbey appears to have occurred during his time.^f He died, according to the continuator of Higden, in 1378: or, as is more generally stated, in the month of January, 1379.

EDMUND BROMFIELD, or DE BRUMFIELD, D.D., a monk of a litigious temper, whom the convent, to place him at a distance, had made their agent at Rome, now received the pope's appointment to the abbacy. Immediately upon abbat Brinkele's death, the convent had agreed unanimously to the election of John de Tymworth, their sub-prior; and two monks were sent to Rome with the king's letters, as well as those of the monastery, in hope of having this choice confirmed. But the pope still adhered to his former appointment. Bromfield now came to Bury, where, taking possession of the abbey, he installed himself, having induced about eighteen of the monks to join his cause. The king, considering this as being done upon the pope's authority only, and contrary to the laws of England, sent an armed force to arrest the self-installed abbat, as well as the monks who had joined him. Bromfield, having been brought before the king's chancellor at Westminster, was first sent a prisoner to the Tower of London, whence he was afterwards removed to Nottingham castle. The details of this contention, which kept the abbey vacant six years, are given in the Note below, from Walsingham's History.^g

^h "Per idem tempus venit a curia Romana Edmundus Brumfield monachus ecclesiæ Sancti Edmundi de Burgo, afferens secum bullas, in quibus dono et provisione domini papæ asseveravit se abbatem et pastorem ipsius ecclesiæ confirmatum. Iste siquidem Edmundus promotus ex substantia illius monasterii usque ad summum gradum, quotiens a studio revocabatur ad monasterium, semper contentiosus et seminator discordiarum et odii concitator extiterat inter fratres, unde fratres ipsius loci fatigati sæpe per ipsum, cum consilio domini Johannis Bryuele, (sc. Brinkele) patris tunc et pastoris eorum, decreverunt quovis pacto aut per fas aut per nefas deliberari a persona sua, ne videlicet una ovis morbida totum gregem ipsius monasterii contaminaret, et ut illorum propositum cautius et secretius ac sine fratrum, vel loci aut ipsius Edmundi scandalo sortiri valeret effectum, offerunt sibi officium procuratoris domus illorum, ut vadens ad Romanam curiam, ibidem pro ecclesiæ necessitatibus jugiter moraretur, ac sic per consequens domus illa sua præsentia vacuaretur, et fraterna quies suis simultatibus imposterum minimè turbaretur. Sed antequam hoc negotium eum exequi, aut ab eis recedere permiserunt, cogitantes plerunque quod cæli diversa facies vel externa regio non mutant conditiones quorundam, nec potest Aethiops mutare pellem suam, exegerunt ab illo juramentum de non acquirendo aliquo beneficio ipsius domus, et de non procurando, quod in ipsius ecclesiæ cederet præjudicium quovismodo. Quod et juravit, facto coram eis publico sacramento. Postea verò præsentibus capituli generalis totius nigri ordinis, et ut favorabilius acceptaretur a summo Pontifice, litteras commendatorias (quanquam aliquantulum contra conscientias) tam præsentium, quàm suæ domus, accepit ad Papam, quæ postea magno detrimento domus suæ fuere, ut inferius declarabo. Cum ergo Romam venisset, et ibidem longam moram traxisset, nec assecutus ab apostolico ullum fuisset beneficium, tandem audit D. Johannem Brivole (sc. Brinkele) quondam abbatem suum diem clausit supremum, et putans jam tempus opportunum arrisisse sibi fit ad procurandum et consequendum quod diu mente conceperat, accessit ac quendam advocatum, sed filium qui tamen morabatur in curia, et vocabatur magister Johannes Shipdam, et promisit ei magnam summam pecuniæ annuè si id efficeret, ut abbas de Burgo quoquo pacto creari posset. Et si contingeret eum in hoc negotio minimè expedire, procuraret sibi aliquem ex vacantibus episcopatibus, aut si hoc non posset assequi, prioratum de Derhirst obtinere laboraret eidem, habiturus pro labore suo pro quolibet annuatim unam summam ex eis. Dictus verò Johannes, quosdam è cardinalibus qui nunquam aurum respuunt ad partem traxit, ut ipsorum interventu, et favore Edmundi prædicti negotia efficacius expediret, securus ergo de ipsorum cardinalium adjutorio, proponit coram domino papa causam Edmundi, asserens eum verum electum capituli et omnium fratrum vocis optatum ad ecclesiæ eidem præessendum. Dominus verò papa considerans malitiam ipsius temporis, et sui adversarii antipapæ quotidianum incrementum, et sperans Edmundum magno adjutorio sibi adfuturum, si abbas efficeretur ibidem, de facili inclinatus ad confirmandum, vel si electio ritè celebrata non fuisset, ad gratis dandum ipsi Edmundo beneficium supradictum. Quid multa? consequitur Edmundo dono et favore papæ imaginarium appetitum, et ad repatriandum cum bullis suis se præparat toto nisu.

"Fratres verò de Bury post mortem statim abbatis sui ad electionem convenerunt, et unanimi consensu elegerunt in abbatem dominum Johannem virum idoneum de Tymworth, domus suæ suppriorum et ordinis zelatorem. Qui audientes Edmundum eos taliter prævenisse, mox festinarunt duos monachos ad Romanam transmittere curiam, ad certificandum dominum papam de falsa suggestionem Edmundi, et ad petendam confirmationem ipsorum electi. Deferunt ergo secum Litteras regias, et plurimorum dominorum supplicatorias pro confirmatione electi, et Edmundi depositione. Sed Papa pro tunc plus favens Edmundo quam monachis, permisit eosdem ibi damnosam trahere diu moram. Interea Edmundus cogitans quòd mora trahit periculum, et semper nocuit differre peractis, properat ad burgum Sancti Edmundi, et ibidem aliciens sibi vicinos de patria, in brevi magnum exercitum in partem suam traxit. Stipatus igitur multis assentatoribus publicari fecit in parochialibus ecclesiis suas bullas, ut fieri solet in talibus. Plebs avida semper ac cupida novorum, suis credit assertionibus; et favet honori, maxime quia patriota fuerat et vicinis eis. Videns autem Edmundus principia sibi cessisse pro votis, sperat celos miscere teris, et spiritum carni conjungere, et claustrum foro, monachos scilicet, conflare laicis, et unum serere in utrisque. Intrat ergo capitulum cum turba multa, mittens notarios qui invitarent monachos ad capitulum, ex parte domini Papæ, ad audiendum sub pœna inobedientiæ ejusdem mandata. Simpliciores vero fratres timentes hanc notam, capitulum intraverunt. Alii quoque qui pericula mente libraverunt et incommoda quæ monasterio possent emergere per talem provisionem, a turba se et capitulo subtraxerunt. Edmundus igitur in capitulo residens, de facili traxit in partem suam fratres qui aderant, partim timore censure, partim affectione, partim dominandi cupidine, præcipue quos amor administrationum temporalium detinebat. Erant idcirco post expressata negotia sua, et postquam vidit partem favere, novos obedientiarum statuit, et deponit antiquos, sed et electum eorum dominum Johannem de Tymworth restituit officio supprioris, si tamen idem electus putet ceditur electioni et mandatis ejus parendum. Dehinc cum illa parte leader who assumed the name of Jack Straw, made a simultaneous movement with the Kentish insurgents under Wat Tyler, in the hope of effecting a general rebellion. Their numbers are stated to have amounted to fifty thousand. Having seized Sir John Cavendish, the lord chief justice of the King's Bench, at his country seat, they brought him to Bury, where they beheaded him. They next attacked the monastery of St. Edmund. John de Cambridge, the prior, was seized at the manor of Mildenhale; his head was struck off, and his body left naked in the fields for five days, none presuming to bury it for fear of the rioters. His head was placed upon the pillory, by that of Sir John Cavendish. John de Lakyngthithe, the keeper of the barony of St. Edmund, was seized in the abbey-cloister, whence having been dragged to the market-place of Bury, his head was taken off with eight strokes, and placed with those of his friends. They then plundered the abbey; taking away a cross of gold, a rich chalice, and jewels and ornaments to the value of a thousand pounds. Some of the townsmen at this time joined the rioters; and, re-asserting their former claims, compelled the monks to execute a renunciation of their privileges, and to place the entire government of the town in the hands of the alderman and burgesses.^a The dispersion of the rioters, conventus quæ convenerat ad capitulum, et ejus suasioni acquieverat, intrat ecclesiam, et arreptis pontificalibus ornamentis, missam solemniter celebrat more abbatis loci, agens diem solennem in condensis, non tamen usque ad cornu altaris, sed usque ad ipsas mensas et convivium, magna utique sexus utriusque frequentia atque plausu, sed non diu istud gaudium durat, quin perturbatio atque luctus ejus extrema occupat. Nam paulò post regales tam milites quàm armigeri cum lictoribus ad burgum conveniunt, et Edmundum sine magna difficultate secum ducunt ad respondendum regi super præmissis. Egressus autem cum illo Edmundo pars conventus quæ sibi favebat, secuti sunt illum monachi circa decem et octo, cumquæ ad Westmonasterium pervenisset, requisitus est a cancellario domino Richardo Scrob milite, cur sine licentia regia Abbatiam de Burgo Sancti Edmundi intrare, et vicè ibidem agere præsumpsisset. Quo respondente se tanquam legitimum pastorem intrasse ovile proprium, ut et ovibus suis infectis peste præstaret solatia, et morbidis salutifera procuraret remedia. Subintulit cancellarius, Puto te (inquit) in ipso loco nec ægras oves, nec sanas possidere, præsertim cum sine conniventia regia, imò contra jus regium, et approbatas regni consuetudines, non ut pastor, sed nec ut mercenarius tantum, sed ut lupus potius subintrasti. Et ideo scire te debes, et omnes tui similes, læsæ majestatis regie tanquam proditores arcendos et carceribus mancipandos, præcipuè propter statutum parlamentale æditum xxij. anno Edwardi regis ultimi, quod docet omnes tales vel decapitandos vel carceribus detrudendos. Decernimus ergo te ad Turrim Londoniarum mittendum et ibidem conservandum, donec voluntatem regiam et decretum parlamenti futuri super isto negotio plenius cognoscamus. Nec mora, cum verbum et decretum perficiebatur. Deducti enim sunt ad Turrim unà cum eo qui consentientes aderant, et proclamatum est Londoniis, ut committerentur pari custodiæ si inveniri possent hujus viæ monachi non præsentis. Factumque est, ut qui quietem claustralem sponte deseruerunt, inviti commendarentur iniquitadini carcerali. Exposit tamen vel propter regales expensas minorandas, vel propter zelum religionis, consilium regale decrevit, ut monachi qui Edmundum secuti fuerant, diversis monasteriis mitterentur, cum mandato regio super eisdem, ut videlicet abbates vel priores quibus directi fuerant eorum custodiam agerent, responsuri pro corporibus eorundem domino regi in parlamento sequenti." Tho. Walsingh. Hist. Angl. edit. 1574, pp. 236, 237, 288.

A. D. 1380. "Isto anno post octa. Epiphaniæ coactum est parliamentum Londini."—"Ad istud etiam parliamentum venerunt quidam à Romana curia, non directè missi a papa, sed à cardinali de Agapito, ferentes secum ejusdem cardinalis litteras. In quibus idem cardinalis fatebatur dominum papam sibi mandasse, ut archiepiscopo Cantuariensi, capitulo sancti Edmundi regis de Bury, et domini papæ collectorio scriberet, et mandaret universis et singulis, ut visis ejus litteris et intellectis, sine dilatione rescriberent singulas litteras certificantes eum de statu domini Edmundi de Brumfield si videlicet acceptus in gratiam regiam admissus fuisset ad possessionem pacificam abbatie de Bury. Causa autem hujus missionis ista dicitur extitisse. Postquam dictus Edmundus de Brumfield recessisset a curia, ut dominus papa audivit et vidit tot litteras supplicatorias pro confirmatione electi de Bury, ac regi regni que magnatibus displicere provisionem suam quam fecerat, conferendo ei dictam abbatiam, mente turbatus est vehementer. Et revolvens in animo quantum auxilium rex cum magnatibus contra adversarium suum antipapam conferre valeret, si eorum frueretur amicitia, et quanto detrimento foret eidem, si adversarentur, statuit carnaliter, non quidem dictum Edmundum deponere, sed quia clericus, et ejus creatura fuerat, ad quandam episcopatum in Hibernia tunc vacantem transferre. Quod audiens supranominatus falsidicus magister Johannes Shipdam, confestim in crastino cum procuratores electi de Bury in consistorio adfuissent coram papa, et petiissent confirmationem electi prædicti, adfuit ipse, allegans hoc nequaquam debere fieri, maxime quia dictus Edmundus jam receptus esset in gratiam regiam, et suis temporalibus investitus. Quod ut probaret ita esse, introduxit quandam monachum Cisterciensem, et quandam presbyterum, qui paulo ante de Anglia venerant, quos et conduxit, ut jurarent coram papa, se pro certo scire dominum Edmundum admissum in regis gratiam: et non solum in gratiam, sed et attractum ad ejus familiare consilium, et suis temporalibus investitum. Ac ut majorem fidem facerent in præmissis, juraverunt se oculis suis vidisse eum ante eorum egressum de Anglia Londinum nobiliter incedentem, ut tantum abbatem decuit, stipatum magna catterva præeuntibus eum bis senis armigeris in una secta. Quæ omnia procuratores electi constanter refellebant, asserentes hoc nullatenus ita esse. Quapropter dominus papa distulit in causa procedere, donec alia certiora nova de ista materia cepisset. Et hæc (ut dixi) fuit causa quare dictus cardinalis præfatus dicto modo scripsit.

apostolicam reverentiam instetisse penes regem et proceres pro Edmundi prædicti deliberatione, et ut Edmundum ecclesiam papali sibi provisione collatam pacificè ingredi paterentur. Sed post pauca in progressu asseverat pro firmo se ex responso regali ac regni procerum intellexisse, nunquam eos passuros ingressum Edmundi in abbatiam de Burgo, sed nec egressum ejus a carcere timore vel interventu alicujus personæ, nisi solummodo contingat eos flecti per ipsius domini papæ preces sollicitas et instantes. Explicat præterea eum jus regium et regni consuetudines ab initio talibus provisoriis contravenisse. Et inter cætera deprecatur, ut temporis præsentis considerata malitia, condescendant voluntati regie intuitu undecunque periculorum emergentium, electum de Bury juxta regis et magnatum regni desiderium confirmando hortatur præterea humilitate, qua condecet, ut nullius credat literis, nullius fidem det sermonibus qui aliter scripto vel verbo suæ significabunt reverentiæ, quam ipse propriis litteris commendavit." Ibid. pp. 243, 244.

A. D. 1382. "Dominus papa sub istis temporibus postquam distulisset per amplius quam biennium electionem factam de Johanne Tymworthe apud Bury confirmare, tandem regalibus et procerum litteris pulsatus frequentibus, Edmundum Bromfield (cui contulerat abbatiam de Bury) transtulit ad abbatiam ejusdem monasterii in Vasconia: si tamen regi placuerit eundem Edmundum à diutina quam pertulerat carceris custodia liberare. Johanni vero Tymworth non confirmando electionem de ipso factam, sed per provisionem concessit abbatiam, ita duntaxat ut solveret Romanæ curiæ duplicis vacationis censum, videlicet pro Johanne Brinle et Edmundo Bromfield, et ita videbatur novissimus error esse pejor priore. Fratres tamen monasterii tamdiu paterno destituti solatio, ad hanc formam consenserunt, non considerantes quòd eundem Edmundum prius provisionaliter eis datum abegerant, et quanta pro tuitione causæ suæ profuderant, ne videlicet electio facta per eosdem locum non haberet. Regi vero regioque consilio non placuit ista forma papalis collationis, tum quia credebant electiones in futurum faciendas per eandem si admitteretur periclitari, tum quia turpe videbatur eis flecti de causa, quam tam diu dictante conscientia defenderant studio pertinaci." Ibid. pp. 310, 311.

A. D. 1385. "Causa monasterii S. Edmundi de Bury, pro qua multociens multi versus curiam Romanam laboraverant, hujusmodi finem cepit. Papa laudabili instantia ambassiatorum concessit et permisit, ut ad novam procedentes electionem, satagerent eligere monasterio dignum patrem, quamquam jamdudum Johannes de Tymworth per provisionem sibi factam abbatia aliquanto tempore fuisset gavisus. Misit ergo fratribus, movens ut eundem Johannem Tymworth (si posset fieri) præ cæteris eligerent in pastorem, cujus condiciones per ante papæ commendaverant in immensum. Cassavitque papa tam benedictionem quam perceperat ab episcopo Landavensi, quam electiones et provisiones de eo vel sibi factas, ut electio juxta postulata posset esse libera et quæta: delegationem verò ad ratificandum quæ in hac parte secundum jura fierent, et munus benedictionis impendendum electo commisit magistro Roberto Braybrok episcopo Londoniensi, qui accedens ad locum implevit officium, et ejusdem Johannis Tymworth quem iterum conventus elegerat in Abbatem, ratificavit electionem, et benedixit eundem in eadem ecclesia cum solennitate magna in die S. Albani Anglorum prothomartyris." Ibid. p. 341.

^a The following is Walsingham's account of the insurrection:

"Hii autem juxta majorem eorum qui Londoniis furuerunt, in universis furentes, domos et prædia magnorum virorum legis peritorum prostraverunt, legis apprenticios occiderunt, et dominum Johannem Cavendish justiciarium regni principalem interceptum decollaverunt, et super collistrigium, in foro villæ Sancti Edmundi de Bury, dominum Johannem de Cantebrigia, virum industrem et solertem, Orpheum Tracem, Neronem Romanum, Belgabred Britannum vocis dulcedine pariter et cantus scientia superantem, dum à facie eorum fugere nitentur repente captum, crudeliter capitis truncatione peremerunt. Causa mortis ejus satis nota est, quia cum esset circumspectus et prudens, causas domus suæ suscepit tuendas. Et quia fideliter decertavit contra villanos de Bury pro jure monasterii, accepit (ut diximus) sententiam capitalem prope villam de Mildenhale, quæ ad jus ejusdem monasterii pertinere dinoscitur, non tam villanorum prædictæ villæ de Bury suorum adversariorum, sed propriorum servorum et nativorum arbitrio simul et judicio addictus morti. Corpus ejus fuit usque ad staminum nudatum et femoralia, in aperto campo subdio jacuit inhumatum quinque diebus, nemine præsumente illud vel auferre, vel naturæ debitum illi minus impendere, propter sententiam rusticorum.

"Perpetrato prædicto piaculo, proceres perfidiæ cum plebe perfida, dictus scilicet Johannes Straw, cum præfata turba ad villam de Bury properant, et nemine resistente subintrant, caputque prioris præ-nominati in conspectu villarum tanquam processionaliter circumeundo inditum super lanceam perferentes, donec ad collistrigium pervenirent:

of itself, put an end to an obligation so illegally procured.

It has been already mentioned in a Note, from Walsingham, that in 1382 the pope having transferred abbat Bromfield to an abbey in Gascony, conferred St. Edmund's Bury by papal provision upon John de Tymworth. But this was objected to by the English court. A fresh election was then recommended, and

JOHN DE TYMORTH, or TYNWORTH, was again chosen abbat, as well by the recommendation of the pope as by the unanimous determination both of the court and the convent. He received the king's assent to his election on June 20th, and had the temporalities of the monastery restored to him June 28th, 1385.^a

Previous to this, in 1383, King Richard the Second and his queen were entertained at Bury for ten days: a visit which is said to have cost the monastery eight hundred marks.^b

Abbat Tymworth died in 1389. A licence for the election of a new abbat was obtained on Jan. 20th, and on Feb. 1st, 1389, the royal assent was signified to the election of

WILLIAM CRATFIELD;^c to whom the temporalities of the monastery were restored, after the pope had confirmed the election, on Oct. 8th, 1390.^d

Sir James Burrough, in his Collections from abbat Cratfield's Register, formerly accessible in the Cotton library, says, "Upon every vacancy the Court of Rome did not receive less than three thousand florins for the confirmation of the new abbat: besides the expenses of so long a journey. Abbat Cratfield obtained from the pope an exemption from this heavy imposition, on condition that he and his successors should pay yearly twenty marks to the Apostolic Chamber. The procuring this privilege cost the abbat himself 756*l.* 1*s.* 3½*d.* besides 30*l.* which he took from the shrine of St. Edmund. He obtained, likewise, of King Richard II., that, instead of twelve hundred marks, which, upon every vacancy, the convent paid to the king, whether the vacancy was longer or shorter than a year, his successors should yearly pay into the treasury forty marks. This cost him 149*l.* 3*s.* 4*d.*, beside 100*l.* which he received of the convent.^e

In 1400, Archbishop Arundel made a visitation of the dioceses of Ely and Norwich. He appears to have paid a visit, partly of devotion and partly of ceremony, at the abbey of St. Edmund; where he was received with great respect, and even sumptuous entertainment, by the abbat and convent, but still with sufficient caution that their exemption, so long enjoyed, should not be violated.^f

The latter part of abbat Cratfield's life is stated to have been much oppressed by sickness: so much so, that in 1414 the business of the abbacy was done by deputation. His proctors in the convocation at St. Paul's, for the suppression of the Lollard heresy, were William Barwe, B. D., sacrist of the monastery, John Jaworth, LL.D., and William Curteys.^g

In 1414, a general chapter of the Benedictine Order deputed the abbat of Hulme, as they were empowered to do, to visit St. Edmund's Bury monastery.^h

Abbat Cratfield died, according to the Patent Rolls, A. D. 1414: but the extracts from the Register quoted by Sir William Dugdale say he resigned four years before his death, which happened A. D. 1418.ⁱ

WILLIAM EXCETRE was the next abbat. He received quo cum accessissent, in signum antehabite victoriae, et amicitiae inter priorem et Johannem de Cavendish, et derisionem utriusque personae, capita modo velut ad auriculandum, jam quasi ad osculandum invicem super summities lancearum cum maxima amentia conjunxerunt. Postremo cum talibus saturati fuissent ludibriis, utriusque caput iterum super collistrigium posuerunt. Deinde mox in odium prioris quandam domum quam edificaverat, et a fundamentis de novo construxerat diruerunt, quibus perpetratis, claustra ingressi monasterii Johannem de Lakynghuythe custodem baroniae illis tradi jusserunt, comminantes in eundem monasterio nisi traderetur. Cumque staret inter illos (mirum dictu) nulli eorum noto fuit persona sua. Sed haec omnia perfecerunt instinctu villanorum, qui ad haec eos (ut facile erit probare ex sequentibus) occulte conduxerant, ipsis se à turba subtrahentibus, ut vel sic à tantis sceleribus esse viderentur immunes. Igitur praefatus Johannes cavens domus suae periculo, respondit se esse quem querebant, interrogans ad quid a communibus peteretur: ad quem illi, Ad mortem (inquiunt) proditor te modo querimus, non jam enim diutius vitam protelabis: quibus ille, Ad mortem quidem paratus sum, quam et libenter amplector, ita duntaxat ut istud monasterium nullum causa mei detrimentum patiat. Moxque tractus ab eis, cum ingenti vociferatione quod invenissent filium, monachum adduxissent proditorem, in foro publice decollatus est, octies percussus antequam caput esset a corpore separatum, cujus caput illico super collistrigium capiti prioris sociaverunt. Nec hiis contenti, quandam alium monachum, videlicet Walterum Todington ad consimilem mortis poenam quaesierunt: sed is occultatus diligentissime, cum non posset inveniri mortis periculum evitavit. Posthaec evocatis cunctis monachis, dixerunt eos jam diuturno tempore per potentiam oppressisse consocios eorum burgenses villae de Bury, quapropter voluerunt ut in conspectu communium modo redderent obligationes quibus obligati fuerant regi et monasterio, si contigisset eos aliqua temptasse contra Abbathiam, necnon et chartas libertatum Villae, quas Cnuto fundator monasterii quondam concesserat, et quas successores sui reges usque in praesens ad firmamentum Monasterii concesserunt. Monachi vero sibi et suae domui metuentes, si non parerent voluntati communium, omnia quae petebantur, quae scilicet vel villanorum firmamento vel illorum detrimento esse poterant, in forum coram omnibus protulerunt, jurantes inveniri non posse plures chartas (quae villanorum commodo cedere possint) apud eos. Communes autem fidem dictis eorum vix dare volebant, sed vocatis villanis qui simulabant in istis tristitiam, tanquam displicerent quae gesta sunt, praeeperunt eis ut diligenti scrutatione superviderent obligationes et chartas praefatas, et si ex hiis non possent consequi veteres libertates edicerent, quibus gaudere solebant. Et abbas qui in carcere tenebatur apud Nottingham, Edmundus Bromfeld, quem deliberare proposuerant (ut in sequenti festo Johannis Baptistae in suo monasterio solemniter divina celebrare deberet, post quadragesimum diem adventus ejus exinde confectam chartam sigillo suo muniret, et conventus idem facere sigillo suo communi non differret. Placuit haec oratio monachis extrema, metuentibus et compellentibus communibus, et ita faciendum esse dictantibus, jocalia domus maxima, quandam crucem auream, et unum calicem de fulvo metallo praetiosum, aliaque nonnulla jocalia elata de monasterio, quorum pretium excedebat mille libras monetae tradiderunt vice pignoris manibus villanorum, ea videlicet conditione, ut si Edmundus Bromfeld (ut praemittitur) deliberatus à carcere gauderet ibidem abbatis honore, sigillum apponeret proprium, una cum consensu communi et sigillo conventus infra tempus limitatum libertatibus eorundem. Quod si conditio praedicta non esset impleta, remanerent praedicta jocalia imperpetuum penes villanos. Et ita quidem apud Bury res se habebant mirum in modum, communibus petentibus pro villanis quae ad eos minime pertinebant. De quibus rebus etiam scire non poterant, qualia quoque facere non debebant, nisi informatione et instigatione villanorum. Quis unquam crederet communes quenquam ex monachis eis invisum, incognitum, innocentem, ad mortem, petisse, quem insuper eis astantem non cognoscebant, si ad haec minime inducti per alios extitissent? Quid ad eos pertinuit libertates exquirere pro villanis?"

the temporalities of the monastery July 13th, 1415.^a In 1417, he was at the council of Constance.^b A licence for a fresh election, upon his death, was granted Jan. 30th, 1429, when

WILLIAM CURTEYS was elected; to whom the temporalities were restored on February the 18th.^c

In 1433, King Henry the Sixth stayed at the abbey of St. Edmund's Bury from Christmas to St. George's day. Abbat Curteys made great preparations for the visit, and put the abbatial palace, which was at that time much out of repair, into complete readiness for the reception of his royal guest. The alderman and burgesses of Bury, dressed in scarlet, accompanied by the commons of the town, who also wore a red livery, met the king, to the number of five hundred, upon Newmarket heath: the royal retinue, before this extended a mile. They brought the king within the precinct of the Monastery by the south gate. Here he was received by the whole convent: the bishop of Norwich and the abbat appearing in full pontificals: the abbat sprinkling the king with holy water, and presenting a cross to his lips. Procession, with music, was next made to the high altar of the church, when the antiphon used in the service for St. Edmund, 'Ave rex gentis Anglorum,' was sung: after this, the king paid his devotions at St. Ed-mund's shrine, and then passed to the abbat's palace. He remained with the abbat till the Epiphany: but afterwards removed to the prior's lodging, where he stayed till the 23d of January: the vicinity of the water, and the vineyard, which led into the open country, and gave facility to the sports of the field, rendering this situation particularly agreeable. On the 23d of January, the king and the nobility in his train removed to the abbat's manor of Elmswell, where they were entertained in the most sumptuous manner, coming only to the monastery on the eve of the Purification to celebrate that festival: and thence again returning to the manor. The whole of Lent was passed by the king in the lodging of the prior: but he solemnized the festival of Easter in the palace of the abbat. When the time came for removing to London, the king, accompanied by his uncle the duke of Gloucester, and others of the nobility, met in the chapter-house of the monastery, where his majesty was solemnly admitted into the fraternity of the place, receiving the usual kiss from the abbat. Having taken the abbat by the hand, and returned thanks for his reception, the king took his leave, earnestly recommending himself and his train to God and St. Edmund, and to the prayers of the abbat and his brethren.^d

"De Adventu Regis Henrici VI. ad Monasterium de Sancto Edmundo."

"Regnante serenissimo principe, &c. Hen. VI. ac presidente in parlamento suo apud Westmonasterium anno regni et ætatis suæ xii. in festo Omnium Sanctorum, ut moris est domus regiæ, idem rex cum concilio finaliter definivit quod Natalis Domini solemnitas proxime tunc sequentis apud monasterium sancti Edmundi de Bury perageret et impleret (A. D. M.CCCC.XXXIII.) ac ibidem usque ad festum sancti Georgii continue resideret. Hujus ergo sumpti propositi W. Curteys abbati in manerio suo de Elmeswell personaliter existenti cum familiâ veritate patefactâ, idem abbas licet hujusmodi novitate percussus (cum in nullis chronicis reperiri poterat regem Angliæ, illo saltem tempore, moram suam ibidem edicto regio statuisset) nova tamen hujusmodi gratanter et hilariter admisit, ac versus monasterium prædictum infra paucos dies cum familiâ suâ et domicilio iter arripiens platium suum, quod tunc temporis gravis minabatur deformitas et ruina, variis structuris et ædificiis sumptuosius, invitatis et conductis ad opus hujusmodi finiendum per unius mensis spatium artificibus et laborariis octoginta, decenter ornavit; prout in qualibet parte dicti palatii constare poterit cuilibet intuenti. Centum insuper officarios cujuslibet gradus tempore prælibato adventus regii præcursores secum habuit convivantes; et ut tanti Principis adventus, qui duorum regnorum regimini præsidens jure hæreditario bifarie coronatur condigno reciperetur honore, idem abbas vocatis ad se aldermanno et potentioribus dictæ villæ, tractavit cum eis, quali veste et colore se induerent in obviam Principis antedicti: qui quamquam plures communitatis dictæ villæ in diversas sententias se dividerunt, demum tamen in unam præfati abbatis illecti consilio concorditer convenerunt, quod aldermannus et burgenses scarleto, inferiores panno rubeo cum capitiis coloris sanguinei sint contenti. Die ergo adventus regii lucente, aldermannus, burgenses, et communitas dictæ villæ numero quingentorum equitum, in apparatu prædicto, in vigilia Natalis Domini super planum Novi-Mercati ministrabant obviam placabilem dicto regi, qui strepitum regalem prævenientes et longo diametro per unius milliaris spatium patentes, præfatum regem usque in precinctum dicti Monasterii (quem propter fracti campanilis deformitatem, et lapidum infirmorum ruinam ex eâ parte processio recipere non est ausa) usque in mediam viam inter portam et ostium australe dicti Monasterii perduxerunt, ubi complexus brachiis comitis Warwici descendit a palefrido, et versus processionem ad locum pallio serico circumtectum se dirigens, ibidem pro adorandâ crucis imagine genuflexit, quem, cum omni solemnitate processionali receptum, astantibus in capis preciosis dicti monasterii confratribus universis, venerabiles patres episcopus Norwic. et abbas sæpedictus pontificalibus induti, solemniter incenserunt, ac aspersum aqua benedicta per manus abbatis, et cruce allatâ per eundem ori regio primitus osculandâ, processio ad summum altare procedens cum antiphonâ 'Ave rex gentis Anglorum' notas harmoniæ suaviter eructando, cantantibus organis introduxit: ubi finitis dictæ processionis solemnibus, et precibus ad feretrum Deo et sancto Edmundo porrectis (rex) abbati prædicto pro beneficiis et expensis circa familiam suam humanissime factis viscerales et speciales gratiarum retulit actiones: quibus expeditis, una cum nobilibus se transtulit in palatium: cujus palatii celebris apparatus, præstans cæteris materiam exemplarem, multum placuit universis. Ubi in festo Natalis Domini post magnam missam in monasterio celebratam, præhabita processione solemniter in quâ regalibus incedebat, inter convivantes in prandio tenuit aulam magnam, et inibi usque Epiphaniam explevit solemnitas dicti festi. nedum interim abbas prædictus contulit donaria præciosa, verum etiam nobiles, et ipsius familiares notabilibus auri summis visitavit inter eos juxta gradum cujuslibet dividendis: requisitis primitus per eundem abbatem prioris et confratrum suorum concilio et assensu, quibus modo et formâ præmissa fierent, et si reddere se voluerint adjuutores benevolos in hac parte. Qui quidem prior et conventus, ut præmittitur, requisiti discretioni abbatis, patris et pastoris sui, hujus rei dispositionem omnimodam contulerunt, penes eum obnixius insistentes, quatenus onus hujusmodi in se susciperet: in cujus relevamen et supportamen præfato abbati centum libras liberaliter concesserunt. Unde solventes immediate centum marcas, promiserunt quod quicquid ultra centum librarum summam idem abbas pro portione suâ superadderet in expensis, pro ratâ portione se redderent contrabutarios in solvendis. Sic ergo transcurso Natalis Domini tempore, rex petiit cameram Prioris, ubi remansit cum suis proceribus usque Januarii diem xxiii^m. propter aquarum ibidem adhærentium dulces meatus, aerem salubrem, et vineæ odorem delectabilem: per cujus vineæ portas patentes cum comitibus et baronibus spatiandi gratia et venandi, ad arborum planitiem, et virentia nemora frequenter se contulit, ubi canum venaticorum impetu fraus vulpina vindictam excepit, et leporum velocitas claudicavit. Et demum (ut solet humana conditio declinare ad varia, et appetere semper nova) rex præfatus auditio quod manerium de Elmeswell dicti abbatis fuit situm in loco amœno, ad modum competenter reparatum, piscium vivariis dotatum, necnon fossatis et nemoribus circumcinctum, ibidem moram trahere pro tempore in animo decrevit: qui versus dictum manerium dicto die Januarii xxiii^o. cum comitibus, et baronibus et aliis nobilibus in magno numero se direxit: ubi in piscium capturâ et volatiliis, quorum potestas aëria subitis ictibus avium impetu rapacium projicitur ad ima, quam plurimum lætabatur: quem abbas sæpedictus repetitis vicibus, variis et sumptuosius placavit exenniis, tum cygnorum, fesantium, perdicum, et aliorum volatiliis, tum luciorum, denticum, anguillarum, et aliorum piscium, in numero non mediocri. Cujus liberalitas in his et aliis, a rege et suis accepta fuerat laude digna: et tandem vigiliâ Purificationis beatæ Virginis lucente, ad palatium dicti monasterii rediit: cujus festi solemnitate peractâ, ad manerium prædictum iterum est reversus, solitis ibidem applaudens solatiis usque carniprivium, in quo reversus, toto quadragesimali tempore mansit in camera prioris, quousque supervenit festum Paschæ, cujus solemnitas tenuit in palatio prædicto. Tandem vero tempore remotionis suæ versus London occurrente, dux Gloucestræ, et alii nobiles una cum valentioribus curiæ regalis militibus, armigeris, et ministris, ob singularem et specialem affectionem quam habebant erga regem et martyrem sanctum Edmundum, perpendentes insuper puritatem et munditiem religionis, orationum suffragia, missas, et alia divina officia in Monasterio prædicto devotissime celebrata, factâ primitus in hac parte penes abbatem instantia sollicitâ, effecti participes omnium præmissorum, in fraternitatem dicti monasterii in perpetuum sunt admissi. Quamobrem rex præfatus in recessu suo, prostratus coram sancto Edmundo, Deo et beati martyri devotas et humiles exsolvit preces, et tandem surgens, sequace D. Glouc. et aliis nobilibus transiit in domum capitularem, ubi immediate accersito abbate (licet ibidem patronus et fundator extiterit) voluit tamen, ut asseruit, sicut cæteri nobiles, recipi in dicti Monasterii numero fraternali; quem abbas in conspectu circumstantium nobilium prædictorum, juxta petitionem regiam, mox pie et devote recipiens, datoque osculo in signum fraternitatis vinculi, in dictum numerum aggregavit, participem fieri omnium suffragiorum, missarum, et aliorum bonorum in perpetuum inibi complendorum. Et tunc paulo post, astantibus nobilibus supradictis dux Gloucestræ prostratus coram rege ipsum vicaliter imploravit, quatenus sæpedicto abbati propter humanitatem, quam erga se, et suos, in donariis et expensis indefessam reddiderat, regratiari dignaretur regia celsitudo: quem rex sine intervallo per manum hilariter recipiens, et gratias retulit multiformes, et valedicens omnibus, se et suos, Deo et beato Edmundo, dictique abbatis et confratrum suorum precibus intime commendavit."

Edmund, already noticed,^a among its numerous illuminations preserves one of King Henry the Sixth performing his devotions, at the very time of this visit, before St. Edmund's shrine; which is represented as of gold, standing upon a pedestal of gothic stone-work. The illumination has been thought sufficiently appropriate to be copied on the present occasion.^b The manuscript, it will be remembered, was the presentation copy to the king himself.

During the king's visit, an altercation once more arose between the bishop of Norwich and the abbat, respecting jurisdiction; producing ultimately a contest of considerable length, but which was finally settled in favour of the abbat by an arbitration, by the archbishop of Canterbury, and the bishops of Bangor and Winchester.^c

In a very fine and curious manuscript, in the possession of Craven Ord, Esq. of Grinstead Hall, in Essex, the use of which has been obligingly lent for the new Monasticon, and which will hereafter be more fully described, the Constitutions which this abbat made for the regulation of his monastery, partly in 1436 and partly in 1448, are preserved. They relate to the establishments for students from the monastery in the universities of Oxford and Cambridge; the oblations at St. Edmund's shrine and high altar of the church; the keeping of the evidence; the prohibition of the sale of wine within the precinct of the monastery; the low rents at which many of the lands were leased; the nature of the services and tithes on lands given in alms; the preservation of the books of the church; the improper removal of sepulchral monuments from the cemetery of the church, &c. &c. This same

^b Connected in some degree with this Visit, or at least with the time of abbat Curteys, are the shutters of the altar of St. Edmund's Bury abbey, now in the building called the Chapel at Strawberry Hill. Dr. Lort having given Mr. Horace Walpole (afterwards Lord Orford) a sight of abbat Curteys's Register, received a letter from him, dated June 4th, 1779, of which the following is an extract: "The sight of the MS. was particularly welcome to me, because the long visit of Henry VI. and his uncle Gloucester to St. Edmund's Bury accounts for those rare altar tablets, that I bought at Mr. Ives's sale, on which are incontestably the portraits of Duke Humphrey, Cardinal Beaufort, and the same archbishop that is in my Marriage of Henry VI. I know the house of Lancaster were patrons of St. Edmund's Bury: but so long a visit is demonstration. The fourth person on my pannels is unknown. Over his head is a coat of arms. It may be that of W. Curteys the abbat—or the alderman, as he is in scarlet. His figure, and the duke's, are far superior to the other two, and worthy of a good Italian master. The cardinal and the archbishop are in the dry hard manner of the age. I wish you would call and look at them: they are at Mr. Bonus's in Oxford road: the two prelates are much damaged. I peremptorily enjoined Bonus to repair only and not repaint them; and thus by putting him out of his way, I put him so much out of humour too, that he has kept them these two years, and not finished them yet. I design them for the four void spaces in my chapel, on the sides of the shrine. The duke of Gloucester's face is so like the younger, that it proves I guessed right at his figure in my marriage. The tablets came out of the abbey of Bury, were procured by old Peter Le Neve, Norroy, and came by his widow's marriage to Tom Martin, at whose sale Mr. Ives bought them. We have very few princely portraits so ancient, so authentic, and none so well painted as the duke and fourth person. These were the insides of the doors, which I had split into two, and value them extremely. This account, I think, will be more satisfactory to you than Notes. Pray tell me how you like the pictures when you have examined them. I shall search in Edmundson's new Vocabulary of Arms for the coat which contains three bull's heads on six pieces: but the colours are either white and black, or the latter is become so by time."

son Gregory, or the survivor of them, an annuity of ten pounds.^a

On November 4th, 1539, after having in vain endeavoured to avert the fatal blow by several concessions, abbat Melford was compelled to surrender his monastery into the hands of King Henry the Eighth.^b An annual pension of five hundred marks was granted to him;^c and he retired from the magnificence of the abbatial palace and dignity to a private station in a small house at the top of Crown-street in Bury. He is supposed to have fallen a victim, however, to the severity of the change, as he very soon sunk under the weight of disappointment and sorrow, and survived the degradation of his Order and the loss of his abbey but a few months. He died on the 31st of March, 1540, and was interred in the chancel of St. Mary's church.^d From his epitaph, imperfectly printed in Weever's Funeral Monuments,^e we learn that his family name was Reeve, and that he took that of Melford from the place of his birth.^f

The revenues of the monastery were valued, in the 26th of Hen. VIII., according to Dugdale, at 1659*l.* 13*s.* 11½*d.*; according to Speed, at 2336*l.* 16*s.* 6*d.* A manuscript in the bishop of Norwich's Registry says 1669*l.* Stevens, Suppl. p. 36, 1609*l.*

The site, circuit, and precinct of St. Edmund's Bury were granted, by letters patent of Queen Elizabeth, dated Feb. 14th, 1560, to John Eyer, Esq., in consideration of the sum of 412*l.* 19*s.* 4*d.* The grant enumerates a messuage or mansion-house within the site, the dorter court, two edifices called the garners, the abbat's stables, the hay-house, the gate-house, the great court containing four acres, the palace garden, and different lands adjoining. The same appears to have been transferred, on the first of March following, by deed-poll from the said John Eyer to Thomas Badby, gent., for a similar consideration.^g

^a See Num. XLIII.

^b From an original letter to Lord Cromwell given in the Appendix of Instruments, Num. XLV. it appears that the treasure taken hence by the king's commissioners was, for the period, of enormous value. They found St. Edmund's shrine "very cumbrous to deface." John ap Rice's letter, Num. XLIV. finds but little fault either with the abbat or convent. "As for th' abbott," he says, "we founde nothing suspect as touching his lyving." To the reliques mentioned in this letter, Weever, Fun. Mon. p. 724, adds, St. Edmund's shirt and sword; certain drops of St. Stephen's blood; "parings of the flesh of divers holy virgins, and a sinew of St. Edmund, laid up in boxes;" the skull "of St. Petronill, which the country people were taught to lay to their heads, thereby to be cured of all kinde of agues;" and a coffin wherein the bones of St. Botolph were enclosed, which was sometimes carried in processions. The monks, he continues, "had certaine wax candles, which ever and only they used to light in wheat-seeding; these they likewise carried about their wheat grounds, believing verily that hereby neither darnell, tares, nor any other noisome weeds would grow that year amongst the good corne."

Enough has been already incidentally said respecting the temporal rights of the abbat of St. Edmund's Bury within his franchise. He had also his "Decanus Christianitatis," or dean of his spiritual jurisdiction within the Four Crosses.^h The parochial clergy of the town were all of his appointment.ⁱ

From a list of the great officers and servants of this monastery made in the 14th of King Edward the First,^k it appears that the latter were arranged under the former in departments. Dr. Yates has taken considerable pains to give as complete a list as possible of all:^l but it appears from a careful examination of the abbey Registers, that, among the inferior officers, several existed at one period who are not found at another;^m and, in one or two instances, the same officer occurs in different Registers by a different name. A separate list is given in the Appendix of Instruments of such officers and servants as were in the peculiar collation of the abbat.ⁿ

Among the Tracts and Instruments contained in the Harleian manuscript, num. 1005, is the "Liber de Consuetudinibus Monasterii," otherwise entitled "Traditiones Patrum;" a formulary of the different customs and ceremonies of the monastery, as they had been handed from one generation to another. Among these are the rules for receiving strangers, with a specification of those whom the abbat and those whom the convent were bound to entertain; the time regulated for their stay; the celebrations of festivals and masses; the ceremonial for the abbat in the church of the convent; the infliction of punishments; the rule of conduct for the prior and monks, the pitancier, precentor, sub-prior, sacrist, &c.; the sacrist's duty upon any royal or legatine visit; the economy of the monastery, as to its domestic regulations, according to the season of the year; clothing; the infirmary; &c. The heads of the chapters of this Tract will be found in the Note.^o

^d Mr. Cole, who made his memorandum in 1746, speaking of St. Mary's church and abbat Reeve's monument, says, "Within these three or four years lay his grave-stone, bereaved indeed of its brasses, but by the inlet in the grey marble discoverable that it was an abbat, with his mitre and crozier, and four coats at the corners: since which time it has been forced to give place to one Sutton, a purser of a ship, and the abbat's stone removed into the porch of the church on the south side of the church-yard. This I was told on the spot by my friend Mr. Burrough, now Sir James Burrough, master of Caius College, being at Bury." MS. Cole, vol. xxxv. p. 22.

ⁱ After the Dissolution, the tithes of Bury St. Edmund, and the precincts of its lordship, remained for many years vested in the crown. They were granted to the corporation by King James I., when they were not given as a lay impropriation to be in common with their other revenues, but for the express purpose of maintaining the parochial clergy in the nature of a perpetual trust. Among the documents in the Appendix a very curious Statement will be found relating to the weekly expenditure of the Monastery through the year, written about the time of Edward the First.^a A document so definite in its information has not occurred before to the Editors of the Monasticon in the history of any abbey. The establishment at this time appears to have consisted of eighty monks, a hundred and eleven servants resident in the monastery, and eleven chaplains: the portion for the nuns of Thetford (who received a part of their maintenance from the monastery) and the ordinary reception of guests being likewise provided for in the calculation. The "Firma Sancti Edmundi," under which designation the abbat's portion, or accmpt, appears to be intended, was kept distinct. The weekly expenditure in the bakehouse and brewery of the convent, including servants' wages and fuel, amounted to 13*l.* 9½*d.*: the weekly expence in the "Firma Sancti Edmundi" for the same was 11*l.* 5*s.* 9*d.* In the kitchen ten pounds a week were expended in the purchase of flesh, fish, eggs, cheese, &c., exclusive of the cellarer's purveyance, which amounted in the year to 43*l.* 8*s.* 8*d.* The expence in the kitchen of the "Firma Sancti Edmundi" amounted to 4*l.* 15*s.* 7*d.* per week. The annual amount of payments for fuel in the kitchen of the abbat and convent generally, was 30*l.* The provender for the horses of the prior, cellarer, and hospitaller cost 60*l.* in the year: and the pietances and other miscellaneous expences of the cellarer 60*l.* more. The total domestic expenditure of the monastery, for the support of its regular inhabitants, and the maintenance of ordinary hospitality, thus amounted annually, toward the latter end of the thirteenth century, to 1407*l.* 11*s.* 2*d.*

Two manuscripts occur in the Harleian library, which are called "ANNALES ABBATILÆ S. EDMUNDI." The first is the Harl. MS. 447. It is upon vellum, of the latter end of the thirteenth or beginning of the fourteenth century; begins with the creation of the world, and comes down to 1212, where the manuscript is imperfect. The facts detailed in it are mostly those of general history. The few entries relating to St. Edmund's Bury monastery, where they seemed important, have been quoted in the present Account. Under the year 1146 it is said, in a rubric, "Robertus abbas scripsit huc usque." The other volume, Harl. MS. 1332, is also imperfect; coming no lower than the year 1193. It is likewise upon vellum, and is perhaps the oldest of the two manuscripts. The hand in which it is written is larger, and it was evidently compiled by a different person from the former. This MS. once belonged to John Fox the martyrologist, and was afterwards Mr. Peter Le Neve's.

The CHARTULARIES of the Abbey of St. EDMUNDSBURY still extant are probably more numerous than those of any other monastery in the kingdom.

Of two Registers formerly in the Cottonian Collection, one, marked Tib. B. ix., perished, all but some fragments, in the fire at Westminster, A. D. 1730. It was on vellum, apparently written about the close of the fourteenth century, and was the Register of abbat William CRATFIELD. The other, called "Registrum HOSTILARIÆ," is remaining. It forms a portion of the manuscript Claud. A. xii. on vellum, of the quarto size.^b

In the Harleian Collection of Manuscripts nine Registers of this monastery are remaining.

1. Harl. MS. num. 27, called "Registrum CROFTIS." This volume, of a thick square folio form, written upon vellum, has its title prefixed in a modern hand: Wanley says by Sir Simonds D'Ewes. It relates to the office of pietancier only. The indentures, leases, &c., transcribed in it are of various dates, from the time of Henry III. to the time of Edward IV. They relate almost exclusively to the lands, messuages, and rents which were appropriated to the celebration of the "Sonitus duplex" on the anniversary of All Souls. Thomas Croftis, from whom the Register takes its name, held the office of pietancier in the 10th, 11th, and 12th of Edw. IV.^c

The first part of this volume, extending through sixty-six leaves, bears the title of "Evidentiæ pro avena nomine Fodircorn debita domino abbati mon. Sancti Edmundi per Cellarium et alios officarios ejusdem monasterii." A second series of folios then follows; at the head of the first of which is, "Memorandum quod per Evidentias et Indenturas infrascriptas realiter cognosci poterit cujusmodi juris titulum abbates Sancti Edmundi habuerunt in certis maneriis et dominiis in eisdem evidentiis et indenturis seriose expressatis. Et ne hujusmodi evidentiæ et indenturæ posteris ex hoc laterent, dominus W. Curteys abbas eas suo in Registro decrevit annotandum. Et sciendum quod omnes fines in curia regis levatæ pro jure evidentiæ subscriptarum in Registro J. Brynkele abbatis per ordinem conscribuntur, et copiae original. earundem finium in archivis domini Abbatis firma sub custodia debite conservantur." This portion of the volume, including an alphabetical index at the end, occupies a hundred and ninety-eight leaves.

The contents of this manuscript, altogether, constitute it rather a Book of general Entries than a regular Register of Charters belonging to the monastery. Exclusive of releases, indentures, grants of wards and marriages, corrodies, dowers, homages, &c. it contains numerous copies of Instruments of a public nature, Writs, Letters, and Summonses to Parliament. Many of the Writs and Letters, chiefly those in abbat Curteys's time, are in English. In one place is a list of the Relics in the Church of St. James of Compostella; in another, different prophecies supposed to refer to the reign of King Henry the Sixth; and, at fol. 127, "Declaratio sancti Thomæ Cantuariensis de receptione cujus-

The very curious volume of ancient Charters in the Cottonian library marked Augustus II. contains the following of St. Edmund's Bury:

1. An ancient copy of Canute's charter, confirming the liberties and privileges of the monastery, num. 8.

2. The charter from William the Conqueror, declaring the abbey to be exempt from the jurisdiction of the bishops of Norwich, Latin and Saxon, num. 25.

In Leland's Itinerary, edit. Oxford, 1769, vol. iv. p. 164, is the following Letter in behalf of that learned antiquary, probably written to St. Edmundsbury by Lord Cromwell. Leland's commission was dated in 1533.

"In right hearty manner I commend me on to yow. And where as Master Leylande at this præsente tyme cummith to Byri to see what bookes be lefte yn the library there, or translatid thens ynto any other corner of the late monastery, I shaul desier yow upon just consideration right redily to forder his cause, and to permitte hym to have the use of such as may forder hym in setting forth such matiers as he writith for the king's majeste. In so doying ye shaul bynde me to show on to yow at al tymes like gratitude: for if I were present at this tyme with yow I wold gladly my selfe fulfil his honeste requeste. Thus fare ye wel this ix. of Novembre at Barnewelle."

The only books, however, which Leland appears to have noticed here, were these:

"Abbo Floriacensis de vita S. Edmundi martyris, ad Dunstanum archi. Cantuar.

Passio Demetrii martyris ad Carolum Magnum, autore Anastasio.

Meditationes Alexandri Necham de mirabili conversione Magdalenæ.

Epistolæ Flacci Albini, sive Alcuini.

Robertus Melundinensis, episcopus Herfordensis, super Sententias, sive de Sacramentis Veteris Testamenti. Scripsit duo pulcherrima juxta ac doctissima volumina.

Trivet super libros Boetii de Consolatione Philosophiæ.

Waleys super Psalterium.

Ryngsted super Proverbia Solomonis.

Kilwardby super Ezechielem.

Hovedeni Historia incipiens a Beda."^a

Several volumes from St. Edmund's Bury library not mentioned in the above list, afterwards passed into that of King Henry the Eighth, and are now preserved in the royal collection of manuscripts in the British Museum. The manuscript 2 E. ix. "Johannis de Alba Villa Homilia," of the fourteenth century, has this written at the beginning, "Hunc librum fecit scribi Guido precentor, quem qui alienaverit a domo Sancti Ædmundi, anathema sit." The manuscript 7 B. ix. of the thirteenth century contains a tract of Dionysius the Areopagite, "de divinis Hominibus," six of St. Augustine's treatises, "Johannes Damascenus de Fide Orthodoxa," and a large assemblage of the pieces of Archbishop Anselm. Other manuscripts formerly belonging to the monastery will be found in MSS. Reg. 8 C. iv. 8 E. x. 10 B. xii. 11 B. iii. 12 C. vi. 12 E. xv.

Among the SEALS belonging to ST. EDMUND'S BURY ABBEY, Cole, in the xxxviii. volume of his manuscripts, mentions one of an oval form, probably of the time of abbat Hugh, or earlier. It represented a King seated upon a throne or stool, with a sceptre in one hand and a mound in the other; and only this remaining of the inscription: SIGIL REGIS . ET . MARTYRIS. A less perfect impression of this same Seal is engraved by Dr. Yates, in the last figure at the bottom of his Plate of Seals in the History of St. Edmund's Bury.

A later and a grander Seal in point of form, nearly perfect, is preserved in the British Museum, appendant to a deed of the 9th of Henry the Eighth.^b In the area of the obverse is a façade, as of the entrance to some Gothic building, separated into three compartments, which terminate in pointed arches, surmounted by a spire, having the figure of a cock at the top. In the centre compartment was formerly a figure of St. Edmund, crowned, bearing an arrow in his right hand. The two side arches contain other figures of kings, seated, crowned and sceptred, possibly intended for Canute and King Edward the Confessor. The inscription round is, SIGILLVM . CONVENTVS . ECCLES MVNDI . REGIS . ET . MARTIR . . The area of the reverse represents a kind of saltire wavy. In the upper part is represented the first person of the Trinity, seated, and bearing a crown; a cherub placed on each side. In the middle of the saltire two angels appear, carrying the soul of St. Edmund to heaven to receive the crown: while at bottom, a soldier is represented as having just severed St. Edmund's head from his body with a sword; a wolf guarding the head. The inscription round this side is,

TELIS . CONFODIT . VNVM . IMVNDVS . ET . ENSE . FE
BESTIA . QVEM . MVNIT . QERE . HVNC . CELESTIB^c VN . . .^d

The legend here represented has been already explained in the account of St. Edmund. The drawing of this Seal, in the Museum, which has been made for the present Work, has been completed from a fragment appendant to the Surrender of the monastery in the Augmentation Office. Beside the inscriptions on each side, already given, the Museum impression has the remains of an inscription running

3. A grant of immunities to the monastery from King Edward the Confessor in the time of abbat Baldwin. In Saxon, num. 49.

4. A short charter of K. Edward the Confessor, in Saxon, "ƿ Leofstan abb. ƿ ealle ƿæge ƿroðra on Eadmundes ƿyrig. beon heora salve ƿ heora soce ƿurðe oðer ealle heora agene menn." num. 80.

5. A kind of note or memorandum concerning lands granted by Thurketul: viz. "ƿur ƿendan ƿa land ƿe ƿurkytel ge an Gode ƿ ƿe'e Mapian ƿ ƿe'e Eadmundes ƿ 1ƿ ƿ land æt Culeƿorðe ƿ ƿur agen ƿær ƿra hit ƿrænt mid mete ƿ mid mannum ƿ mid rake ƿ mid roene ƿ eal ƿ land æt ƿrude ƿellan. ƿ ƿ land æt Gyxeƿorðe ƿra hit ƿrænt mid mete ƿ mid mannum." Below, in a hand somewhat later, is written "Quicumque hanc cartam ƿurcetelli ab ecclesia Sancti Ædmundi alienaverit anathema sit." num. 84.

6. The will of Ælfric, bishop as it should seem of Elmham, bequeathing his lands chiefly to the monastery of St. Edmund. Dr. Hickes assigns this instrument to the time of Harold the son of Canute (See Hickes, Thesaur. tom. ii. p. 262,) num. 85.

Other Charters in the Cottonian Collection are:

xi. 20. Bulla Bonifacii papæ Willielmo abbati concessa, absolvens omnes et singulos monachos S. Edmundi de Bury ab omnibus excommunicationum sententiis aut aliis censuris aut pœnis. An. 1 Bonif. viii. PP.

xxi. 7. Carta Johannis abbatis monasterii de Bury liberis tenentibus manerii de Melford concessa. Dat. 28 Julii an 9 Hen. viii.

Beside these, there are the following articles scattered in different volumes of the Cottonian manuscripts:

round the edge of the Seal, in the same manner as round the edge of a half-crown: a singularity not very common among monastic Seals.

A third Seal, the "SECRETUM" of the Convent, of an oval form, is preserved in the Augmentation Office, appendant to a lease dated 26th April, 25th Hen. VIII. whereby John the abbat, with the assent and will of the prior and convent, demise to William Balkey a piece of meadow, lying in the meadow called "Sextens mede medowe," for five years, at the rent of 16s. 8d. On the front, the upper part of which is divided from the lower by a kind of trefoil arch, is represented St. Edmund bound to a tree, with the Danes shooting arrows at him: below, the severance of St. Edmund's head is represented, with the wolf, similar to the bottom compartment of the Seal last described. The inscription on this side is, SIGNVM . SECRETVM . CAP'LI . SANCTI . EDMVNDI . REGIS . ET . MARTIRIS. The reverse represents the royal saint seated beneath a Gothic canopy, with a bishop on either side: inscribed AGMINE . STIPATVS . SEDET . ED . REX . PONTIFICATVS. It is engraved at the top of Dr. Yates's Plate of Seals.

Of the Seals of individual abbats, Battely^a describes one of abbat Sampson, formerly if not now in the archives of Christ-Church Canterbury. The front of the Seal represented the abbat, mitred, with a crozier in the right hand and a book in his left, inscribed SIGILLVM . SAMSONIS . DEI . GRATIA . ABBATIS . S. EDMVNDI. On the reverse, the Agnus Dei and cross, with the inscription, SECRETVM . SAMSONIS . ABBATIS, round.

Dr. Yates has engraved one of abbat Hugh: bearing in the area a figure, precisely answering the description of that of abbat Sampson, with the exception that a cap appears upon the head instead of a mitre; inscribed SIGILLVM . HVGONIS . ABBATIS . SANCTI . EDMVNDI. A less perfect copy of this Seal, described by Mr. Cole, had a small round impression at the back of a man's head, with the words SECRETVM . ABBATIS round it.

A portion of a small Seal of abbat Curteys is engraved in Sir John Cullum's History of Hawsted, edit. 4to. Lond. 1813, Pl. III. fig. 4, p. 111. The part which remains represents St. Edmund's head found by the wolf, with the words here, here, above. Of the legend round, S Willel'mi Curteis is all that is now visible.

Appendant to the same Instrument, in the Cottonian Collection of Charters, which bears the larger Seal of the abbey already described, is a large fragment of an oval Seal of abbat John de Melford, or Reve. This also has three figures within Gothic arches or tabernacles in the area, of which St. Edmund only can now be identified, crowned, and bearing a sceptre in one hand and an arrow in the other. In the exergue is the half figure of an abbat, mitred and croziered: having the arms of the convent on the dexter, and the arms of England on the sinister side. All that remains of the inscription, in black letter, is abbat' mo burg sci Edmudi Another Seal of abbat Melford is preserved, appendant to a Deed in the Chapter-house at Westminster. The form and device are similar to the one just described, except that the representation in the centre niche is of St. Edmund shot at with arrows; each of the other divisions containing a king crowned. The inscription also varies: SIGILLVM . JOHIS . MILFORDE . ABBATIS . S. EDMVNDI . DE . BVRY.

The Seal of Walter de Banham, the sacrist of the abbey in the time of Henry the First, was oblong, representing a wolf under a tree, holding in his paws St. Edmund's head. The inscription: OSTENDVNT . SIGNVM . GALTERI . REX . LVPA . LIGNVM. It is engraved in the XVth volume of the Archaeologia of the Society of Antiquaries, Pl. xxxv.^b

William of Worcester, in his Itinerary, gives two statements of the dimensions of the abbey church of St. Edmund's Bury, taken in the fifteenth century, which, if not completely reconcileable, at least give an approximation to the actual measurements:

"Longitudo curiæ magnæ infra precinctum monasterii de Berye 210 gressus. Latitudo ejus 120 gressus.

"Longitudo et latitudo quadrangularis Claustri Bury continet ex omni parte 80 gressus.

"Longitudo navis ecclesiæ monasterii Bery continet 150 gressus m.

"Longitudo spaciî campanilæ in medio ecclesiæ navis, a dicto numero 150 gressus, continet 20 gressus. Latitudo brachii meridionalis ecclesiæ a pede campanilis ad portam meridionalem continet 43 gressus.

"Longitudo chori a pede orientali campanilæ prædictæ usque ad capellam beatæ Mariæ continet 70 gressus.

"Et sic tota Ecclesia Monasterii cum choro et campanile continet 240 gressus meos.

Battely, in his Antiquitates S. Edmundi Burgi, gives a plan drawn by Mr. afterwards Sir James Burrough, in 1718, according to William of Worcester's first statement: this stands corrected in the Archaeologia of the Society of Antiquaries, vol. iii. p. 311, by Mr. Edward King, who, after an accurate examination of the foundations of the abbey in the summer of 1772, showed that there were formerly two chapels in the abbey church dedicated to the Virgin Mary: one, of small dimensions, behind the high altar; the other, in which Thomas duke of Exeter was buried, on the north side of the choir: the latter extending from the cross aisle to the fourth pillar from the east end of the choir; and totally omitted in Sir James Burrough's plan. Mr. King also marked with dotted lines another unnoticed chapel, terminating in a semicircular bow, the foundations of which were laid open at the same time, on the east of the north transept.

The church, constructed in the form of a cross, had two octagon towers and a centre tower, at the west front; and another tower between the nave and choir. At the east end, which was circular, was St. Edmund's shrine, richly adorned with gold and jewels.^e The walls of the church were of flint and boulder, immensely thick, cased with hewn stone from Bernak quarries in Northamptonshire. The abbey precinct was enclosed by a lofty wall. Of three gates of entrance, the principal one, which opened into a court-yard in front of the abbat's palace, still re-

^b It is also engraved by Dr. Yates. Among the lands with which the sacrist's office was endowed, were those of Haberdon; the tenants of which were bound to provide a white bull, as often as any matron of rank or other female should come, out of devotion, to make what were called the oblations of the white bull at the shrine of St. Edmund. On this occasion, the animal, adorned with ribbons and garlands, was brought to the South gate of the monastery, and led along Church-gate, Guildhall, and Abbey-gate streets to the great West gate; the lady, all the time, keeping close to the animal. Here the procession ended. The bull was returned to its pasture, and the lady made her offerings at the shrine, in hope of becoming a mother. A copy of one of the abbey leases, with this condition annexed, will be found in the Appendix, Num. XLII.

^e Weever, Fun. Mon. p. 722, says, "If you demand how great the wealth of this abbey was, a man could hardly tell, and namely how many gifts and oblations were hung upon the tombe alone of Saint Edmund." From Registrum Croftis we learn, that the "Obventiones Feretri S. Edmundi," about the time of King Edward IVth, were rated at 40l.

mains; and is certainly the richest relic now existing of the former magnificence of the abbey. It was built subsequent to the destruction of the ancient entrance in 1327; and bears, among other shields of arms, the coat of Thomas de Brotherton earl of Norfolk, half-brother to King Edward the Second.

Weever says, Harvey the sacrist "compassed the burgh about with a wall, whereof their remaine still some few reliques, and abbat Newport walled the abbey." He adds, "Whiles they laid the foundation of a new chappell, in the reign of Edward the First, there were found (as Eversden a monke of this place writeth) the walles of a certaine old church, built round, so as that the altar stood (as it were) in the mids, and we verily thinke, saith he, it was that which was first built to Saint service."^a

During the prosperity of the abbey, it comprehended within its precincts, beside the conventual church, three others, St. Margaret's, St. Mary's, and St. James's. The first of these has been converted into a town-hall. The others are the churches of the two parishes into which Bury is divided. A Norman tower, leading by a gate-way into the abbey yard, called Church-gate, has long served for a steeple to St. James's church, though at the distance from it of at least thirty feet. On the 5th of November, 1818, a considerable portion of the grand arch on the east side of this gate-way fell down, weakening the upper part of the tower, which exhibits two fissures of considerable length.

The uncovering of the foundations of St. Edmund's Bury abbey, in 1772, has been already incidentally noticed. Mr. Gough, in his Additions to Camden, says, the whole area was at that time traceable. Other excavations are said to be at present going on, under the direction of a Mr. Benjafield, who at present occupies a part of the site; the whole of which is the property of the earl of Bristol.

The Benedictine Nunnery of Thetford, which was in part dependant upon the abbey of St. Edmund's Bury, will be spoken of hereafter in its proper place.

NUM. I.

INGUAR igitur, cum de strage suis illata inconsolabiliter anxietur, venit ad eum apud Thedforde Hubba frater ejus, qui jam Merciam totam depopulaverat, cum x. millibus armatorum, et sic unctis viribus, ut se vindicarent, in sanctum regem Eadmundum castra moventes ad Heglesdunam villam, ubi rex beatissimus Eadmundus tunc erat, celeriter pervenerunt. Tunc tyrannus Hinguar jussit, circumcingi regem cum turba, ne quidem unus ex omnibus elaberetur vivus. Sanctus itaque rex Eadmundus, cum se ab hostibus undique vallatum cognosceret, de consilio Humberti, Helmhamensis episcopi confugit ad ecclesiam, ut se membrum Christi ostenderet, et armis temporalibus projectis, caelestia induit, humiliter Patrem, et Filium, cum Sancto Spiritu deprecans, ut sibi in passione constantiam largiretur: igitur a ministris iniquitatis clementissimus rex Eadmundus ab ecclesia truculenter extrahitur, loris dirissimis coarctatus, et sicut Christus ante Pilatum praesidem, ita ducitur Eadmundus ante iniquum ducem, cupiens ejus sequi vestigia, qui pro nobis immolatus est hostea. Quo jubente, ad arborem quandam, quae non multum aberat, religatus, diutissimè flagellatur, multisque modis illuditur. Sed invictus athleta Christi Eadmundus, inter flagella, Christum semper invocando flebilibus vocibus, tortores suos compulit in furorem. Et ad ipsum tunc arcubus, quasi ad signum, ludendo, totum corpus ejus telis confodiunt et sagittis. Nec erat locus in corpore martyris vacuus, cui novum posset imprimi vulnus. Nam, sicut hericius in cute densis armatur spinis, ita corpus invicti regis spiculis configitur sagittarum. Cumque nec sic Hinguar carnifex truculentus sanctum martyrem Eadmundum à fide Christi, et confessione trinitatis potuit separare, ut suis iniquis persuasionibus praeberet assensum, protinus lictori mandat, ut ense cruento martyris caput praecidat: at lictor sanctum de stipite truculenter avulsum, inter verba orationis, et confessionis Christi nominis, unico ictu ipsum decapitando, xij. kal. Decemb. gratissimum Deo holocaustum, igne passionis exanimatum, cum palma victoriae, et corona justitiae transmisit ad cælum.

Corpus verò martyris, ministri diaboli, capite truncatum, relinquentes, et in sylvam cui Heglesdune nomen est, asportantes, inter densa veprium fruteta projecerunt. Adhuc enim laborabant lanistae iniqui, ne à Christianis, quos paucos superstites reliquerant, corpus martyris sepulturae, ut decebat, cum capite traderetur. Didicerant namque Hinguar et Hubba, piratae nequissimi, in sylva jam dicta, olim de medio sublatum fuisse Lothbrocum patrem suum. Undè falsa suggestionem Berni venatoris beato regi et martyri Eadmundo talionem reddere cupientes, in sylva eadem caput ejus ignominiosè projecerunt, avibusque cæli tradentes et bestiis devorandum. Passus est autem cum sanctissimo rege Eadmundo comes ejus individuus Humbertus Helmhamensis antistes, qui regem eundem in regni fastigium sublimaverat, et constantia invicti regis ad martyrium animatus, cum ipso est regni caelestis possessor effectus. Sicque rege beatissimo ad caelestia translato, pagani nimium gloriantes hyemaverunt in regione illa, expulsis paucis indigenis, qui superstites cladi praecedenti fuerunt. Eodem anno Ceolnothus Cantuariensis archiepiscopus, diem clausit extremum, cui successit Æthelredus vir venerandus, et in rebus divinis sufficienter eruditus.

Cum igitur post martyrium beatissimi regis Eadmundi, fratres Hinguar, et Hubba, Deo odibiles, hyemale tempus in regione Estanglorum, praedis vacantes et rapinis, jam pro parte expleverant, venit ibidem ad eos Gytro quidam de regibus Danorum potentissimus, ut cum praedictis fratribus hyemaret. Superveniente itaque tempore vernali, omnes pagani ab Estanglia pariter recesserunt. Quo audito, Christiani undecumque de latibulis erumpentes, summopere satagebant, ut caput beati regis Eadmundi inventum, reliquo corpore uniretur, et sepulturae corpus integrum, more regio, traderetur. Cumque omnes pari affectu ad id concurrerent, et sylvas perlustrando caput martyris diligenter quaererent, res contigit dictu mirabilis, et saeculis inaudita: nam cum caput quaerendo inter silvas, et veprium densitates, socii ad socios mutuis clamoribus patria lingua ubi es, ubi es, interrogarent, caput martyris eadem lingua respondens dixit, her, her, her, quod Latine dicitur hic, hic, hic. Nec cessavit eadem repetendo clamare, quousque singulos ad se perduxit. Ubi cum capite lupus ingens, et visu horribilis, reperitus est, qui caput sacrum inter brachia complectens, beato martyri excubias impendebat. Assumentes itaque homines caput intrepidi, profusis Deo laudibus ad suum corpus detulerunt, subsequente lupo illos usque ad locum sepulturæ. Tunc caput corpori conjungentes in mausoleo competenti, illa pariter concluserunt. Quo facto lupo dilectæ solitudinis secreta petivit. Constructa est autem in eodem loco, pauperrimo opere, à fidelibus ecclesiola, ubi postea per multa annorum curricula corpus sanctissimum requievit. Passus est autem beatissimus rex et martyr Eadmundus, anno gratiæ dcccclxx. anno ætatis suæ xxix. regni verò sui anno xvj. die xij. kal. Decemb. feria secunda indictione tertia, Luna existente vicesima secunda.

Lapso deinde multorum intervallo annorum, sedatis penitus bellorum incendiis, cœpit fidelium pietas respirare, qui in loco, ubi corpus martyris requievit, Hoxon nunc ab incolis nuncupato, visis creberrimis miraculorum signis, in villa regia, quæ lingua Anglorum Beodrichesworth, Latine verò Beodrici curtis sive habitatio nominatur basilicam permaximam construxerunt, et ad illam sanctum martyrem in magno tripudio transtulerunt. Sed mirum dictu contigit.

Nam cum corpus martyris præciosissimum, ob spacium diuturni temporis putrefactum ab omnibus putaretur, ita integrum repertum est et illæsum, ut non solum caput corpori redintegratum et compaginatum sed omnino nihil in eo vulneris nihil apparuit cicatricis. Sicque Deo dignus martyr Eadmundus, viventi simillimus, ad locum memoratum est translatus, apparente in collo ejus signo martyrii per gyrum quasi filo coccineo, sicut testari solita fuit quædam beatæ recordationis femina, Oswen vocata, quæ ad sacrum martyris sepulcrum, jejuniis sæpè vacans et orationibus per multa annorum curricula, revulso beati martyris mausoleo in cœna dominica, ejus attondendo capillos, et ungues præcidendo. Quæ omnia diligentèr colligens, et in capsella recondens, super altare illius ecclesiæ ponere consuevit, ubi usque in hodiernum diem veneratione debitâ conservantur.

ANNO Domini MXX. rex Cnuto, constructo regali monasterio, cum competentibus officinis in loco qui Bede-rickworth nuncupabatur, ubi rex et martir Eadmundus in corrupto corpore diem beatæ resurrectionis expectat, et monachos in eo instituit. Cœnobium quoque illud beati regis et martiris Eadmundi tot prædiis et bonis aliis ampliavit, ut omnibus fere Angliæ monasteriis in rebus temporalibus meritò præferatur.

[Will. Malmesb. fol. 41 a.]

— SUPRA corpus beatissimi Edmundi, quem antiquiores Dani interfecerant (rex Canutus) basilicam, animositate regiâ, construxit, abbatem et monachos instituit, prædia multa et magna contulit, præstat hodieque donorum ejus amplitudo integra, quòd locus ille infra se aspiciet omnia penè Angliæ cœnobia.

[Ex Chron. S. Bened. de Hulmo in Bibl. Cottoniana.]

ANNO MXX. Cnuth rex Angliam rediit, et concilio cleri et reginæ Emmæ, et comitis Turkilli, monachos ad S. Edmundum constituit, clericis qui ibidem inordinatè vivebant ejectis; præfecitque eis abbatem Uvium quem a domo S. Benedicti de Hulmo cum xij monachis transtulerat.

Anno MXXj. Alwinus, Est-Anglorum episcopus, cœpit construere ecclesiam S. Edmundi regis ad quem media pars librorum, et ecclesiasticorum ornamentorum à domo S. Benedicti est translata.

NUM. II.

Fundatio Ecclesiæ Sancti Edmundi.

[Ex Registro S. Benedicti de Hulmo in Bibliotheca Cottoniana, fol. 7 b.]

TEMPORIBUS primi Knut, magni regis Anglorum, et Danorum qui supra novem regna dominabatur, qui etiam Romæ scholam Anglicam constituit, et ad fovendam eam ex Anglia omni anno censum dari fecit, quod Anglicè dicitur Romescot, inventum est corpus sancti Edmundi regis et martyris, absque reverentia et religione condigna, in monasterio sanctæ Mariæ ligneo apud villam Bedrichswrthe dictam sub secularium clericorum custodia conditum, qui beneficia eidem martyri collata et oblationes inter se dividebant et corpus sanctum absque condigno honore dimittebant. Concilio verò archiepiscoporum, episcoporum, abbatum clericorum, atque baronum totius Angliæ inito, præcepit rex, ut in prædicta basilica fierent monachi, qui die, nocteque ibidem Deo, et sanctæ Mariæ, devotè servirent, et corpus preciosi martiris, cum majori diligentia, et reverentia observarent. Placuit autem prædicto regi, et clero, cum primatu baronum, ut, ex ecclesia beati Benedicti de Hulmo, antiquitè constituta, illuc adducerentur monachi religiosi, et tali observatione, quod conventus Holmensis ecclesiæ in duas partes divideretur: et pars dimidia ad monasterium in villa Beotrici dirigiretur, et altera pars fratrum in ecclesia beati Benedicti remaneret.

Ea verò tempestate, viginti sex monachi, viri religiosi, et bonæ famæ in eadem ecclesia Deo et sancto Benedicto famulabantur; de illa verò parte dimidia fratrum ad Beotrici villam directam, vir prudens et honestus, Uvius nomine, prior fuit, qui postea, in monasterio Sancti Edmundi abbat extitit primus; et cum eo, alius frater, Leofstanus nomine, qui in eodem loco post ipsum Uvium abbas effectus est. Hæc autem sunt nomina aliorum undecim fratrum monachorum qui cum ipsis directi sunt: Agelwinus monachus et auriga Sancti Edmundi. Ælwardus valdè religiosus, Leosdenus decanus, Alfricus, Bondo, Edricus, Assi-woldus, Leofsinus, Sparhavocus, et pueri Oswaldus et Ordricus. Tota quidem supellex in domo Sancti Benedicti in libris et vestimentis, in vasis et ornamentis, et omnibus rebus similiter dividebatur, et pars dimidia illuc, cum eisdem fratribus, mittebatur: altera vero pars eidem domui reservabatur.

Crescente autem ibidem religione, talis observatio et familiaritas, inter utrasque ecclesias, scilicet, sancti Benedicti, et sancti Edmundi facta est, ut quicumque harum ecclesiarum, majori rerum copia videretur habundare, opulentior inferiorem opibus relevaret. Simili quidem providentia pro defunctis invicem fratribus, in utroque monasterio fieret ut quantum pro semetipsis, tantum et pro illo persolverent, in missis et elemosinis et in omnibus aliis bonis Deo placitis. Quod usque in æternum, gratia Dei, observabitur firmiter. Si vero casu accidente, quod absit, quælibet prædictarum ecclesiarum combustione, vel guerra, vel aliquo gravi infortunio impediatur, pars dimidia conventus de altera ad alteram, consilio utrorumque abbatum et conventuum migrabit ecclesiam, et donec plenariè in pristino statu reformetur, tanquam fratres ejusdem ecclesiæ per omnia et in victu et in vestitu, pars illa participetur. In tanta etiam familiaritate, et affinitate consociantur hæc prædictæ ecclesiæ, ut si quis in aliquo gravi corruat flagitio, unde vel ab ecclesia sua expellatur, aut sponte decedat, et illuc confugerit, omni remota occasione, præter prodicionem monasterii sui et abbatis, in altero monasterio tanquam unus frater loci illius collocetur.

[Ex Registro Cœnobii S. Edmundi penes Robert. Bacon, equit. aur. fol. 214.]

CUM monasterium gloriosi regis et martyris Sancti Edmundi in quo incorruptum ipsius corpus requiescit humatum, à prima introductione monachorum, viz. à tempore regis Canuti, qui monachos in eodem primo instituit, extitit et est realiter et de facto notoriè exemptum, ut in charta dicti regis Canuti, qui cum assensu et decreto regni sui dominorum spiritualium et temporalium in suo pleno parlamento (prout sibi ad tunc et aliis licuit regibus quibuscunque, eo quod nullum pro tunc per summos Romanorum pontifices editum fuerat decretum sive decretale in oppositum) prædictum exemit monasterium, aliisque chartis regiis et bullis papalibus patet manifestè, ita, videlicet, quod nullus archiepiscopus, sive episcopus, aliave persona ecclesiastica, vel minister regis ullam quomodolibet in eodem habere debet dominationem, sive exercere potestatem vel jurisdictionem.

Ac postea nonnulli reges et principes, alique regni proceres, ut Hardecanutus, præfati regis filius, gloriosusque rex sanctus Edwardus, Willielmus Conquestor et alii, quorum memoria sit in benedictione, prædicti regis Canuti vestigia imitantes, dictum monasterium bonis et possessionibus dotaverunt, ac privilegiis regiis fortissimè munierunt. Nonnulli tamen Sathanæ satellites, spiritu ducti Sathanico, dicti monasterii infringere privilegia persæpe attemptaverunt. Inter quos Arfastus quidem et Willielmus Bateman, Norwicensis episcopi, specialiter sunt notati, qui tamen in foveam quam paraverant meritò inciderunt, ut quidem sequens processus postea declarabit; quia a seculo non est auditum, Quod quis sancti Edmundi monasterium læserit vel ejusdem monasterii privilegia infregerit, quin eum Dominus spiritu oris sui aut pœnitentem correxit vel non corruptum contriverit.

Cum ergo proverbialiter dicatur, "Jacula prævisaminus lædunt," Willielmus Curteys abbas ad memoriam reducens quædam gravamina nuper dicto monasterio illata, ac suos volens successores reddere cautiores, quædam privilegia dicti monasterii exemptionem specialiùs concernentia, una cum quodam processu de quibusdam gravaminibus contra prædicta privilegia per præfatos episcopos et alios, ut præmittitur, injustè attemptatis, posteros ne lateret, seriøsè sub certa forma decrevit registrari. Et quanquam ab aquilone pandatur omne malum, sicut cum Petri navicula undis periclitata divinæ manus dante gratia non periit, sic gloriosi martyris sancti Edmundi monasterium, ipso intercedente à cunctis ventis aquilonaribus illæsum permanebit. Quidam enim Willielmus Alnwick, Norwicensis episcopus, tempore præfati Willielmi Curteys abbatis, contra privilegia et exemptionem monasterii voces emisit teterrimas, ventumque aquilonarem fortiter exufflavit, sed benedictus Deus, qui non deserit sperantes in se, in nobis adimplevit misericordiam suam ipsius maliciam gratiosè compescendo. Quidam etiam Clemens Denston, ipsius episcopi archidiaconus, et quidam Nicholaus Bakhot, contra exemptionem et privilegia ventum validum commoverunt, sed sancti Edmundi monasterium super firmam fundatum petram, ut mons stetit immobilis, faciesque ipsorum confusio cooperuit. Et quemadmodum Berith et Asteroth à facie fugierunt beati Bartholomæi apostoli, sic isti fugierunt impii nemine persequente. Deo tunc volente postea capti fuerunt et in foveam quam fecerant meritò inciderunt, &c.

INGWAR et Ubba, apud Thetford, junctis viribus, ad Eglesdene venientes sanctum Edmundum martyrizaverunt: occubuit sanctus Edmundus anno Domini dcccclxx. et anno ætatis suæ xxix. et regni sui xv. xij. kalend. Decemb. sepultus fuit vero in eodem loco ubi occubuit et jacuit ibidem in terra defossus per xxxij. annos. Cæco igitur ibi sanato et multis jam factis miraculis, multitudo populi, non solum vulgi, sed etiam nobilium, construxit in villa de Bedricesworth, permaximam ligneo tabulatu basilicam, ad quam cum clero et pontifice transtulit eum de loco in quo sepultus erat post martyrium: cujus corpus cum capite unito ita incorruptum est repertum ac si eodem die fuisset sepultum, &c.

Tempore regis Ethelstani circa annum Domini dcccxxv. perpendentes quidam clerici martyrem magni esse meriti, sub ejus patrocinio devoverunt se Deo perpetuo famulari; fuerunt enim in principio vii. vel. viii. progressu verò temporis multiplicati sunt ad numerum xix. viventes de præbendis suis et oblationibus a fidelibus eidem loco collatis. Clarescentibus igitur miraculis, multa eidem cœnobio clericorum ob amorem sancti Edmundi sunt collata beneficia, inter quæ rex Edmundus filius regis Edw. primi et Edgari regis pater dedit sancto Edmundo et clericis suis villam de Bedricesworth cum charta quæ incipit, "Quamvis decreta," &c.

Anno Domini mx. et anno regni regis Etheldredi xxx. sanctus Edmundus, propter infestationem Turkilli comitis Danorum, London. est ab Ailwino translatus: sed tertio anno sequente ad Bedricesworth est reversus: anno quarto regis Canuti, idem rex Canutus ad magnam solertemque instantiam Ailwini præsulis Elmamensis, (cujus sedes episcopalis postea ad Thetford per Arfastum, et tandem per Herbertum, Thetfordensem episcopum usque ad Norwicum extitit translata) clericis, qui adtunc apud Bedricesworth, quæ nunc villa sancti Edmundi nuncupatur, vitam actitabant minùs regularem, ab inde expulsis et ejectis, monachos ordinis sancti Benedicti regulariter professos, abbatem nomine Uvium eis præficiendo ibidem introduxit, per cccclxxxij. annos postquam Sigebertus rex East-anglorum, qui apud Bedricesworth prædictum monasterium construxerat, in quo accepta tonsurâ monachicâ eterno regi Christo per multorum annorum curricula fideliter deservivit, et tandem anno Domini dcccxxvij. a rege Mercior. Pendæ nomine, pagano et sacrilego fuerat interemptus, per cccxxxij. annos ante passionem gloriosi regis et martyris Edmundi superius memorati.

Quibus verò abbati et monachis sic ad dicti præsulis instantiam ibidem introductis, idem præsul munificus adtunc exemptionem concessit specialem, omne videlicet jus suum et jurisdictionem, necnon omnibus dictum oppidum, sive in ejus circuitu per unius stadii ambitum inhabitantibus, ab ipsius episcopi successoribus, aut a quibuscunque aliis episcopis justè et legitimè creatis et ordinatis, licentiam recipiendi omnia episcopalia sacramenta liberè concedendo. Necnon idem monasterium, abbatem, monachos, et oppidum cum omnibus et singulis in eodem oppido commorantibus à sua jurisdictione episcopali et omnium successorum suorum pro pertetuis extunc futuris temporibus gratanter eximendo. Hic insuper præsul magnificus videlicet Aldwin, anno primo immediatè sequente post introductionem monachorum apud sanctum Edmundum, videlicet anno Domini mxxj. construere cœpit ecclesiam sancti Edmundi regis et martyris antedicti in eodem scilicet loco in quo per Sigebertum regem antedictum primitus constructum erat monasterium, et in quo idem rex devotus habitu tectus monachico vitam duxit regularem, tempore Felicis East-anglorum episcopi, prout ex cronicis Crolandiæ atque Cestriæ colligitur manifestè. Cujus constructionis sumptus populus patriæ illius videlicet Norfolk. et Suffolc. quatuor denarios annuos de qualibet carrucata terræ, quod usque hodie Carucagium appellatur, ad fabricam ecclesiæ antedictæ pro perpetuo unanimi assensu et consensu concessit pariter et persolvit: ex qua quidem pecunia collecta incepta fuerat ecclesia sancti Edmundi antedicta. Quæ anno ab inceptione ejusdem xij. videlicet anno Domini mxxxij. ab archiepiscopo Agelnotho in honore Christi, beatæ Mariæ, et sancti Edmundi extitit dedicata, in qua ad feretrum martyris gloriosi, ob ipsius reverentiam, plerique reges Angliæ suas transmittere coronas persæpe consueverunt.

Illustris rex Hardicanutus, regis Canuti filius, hæres, et successor, per chartam suam (inter alia) concessit, ut nullis archiepiscoporum aut episcoporum vel aliqua secundi ordinis eorum disciplinæ adhærentium personarum audens quoquo modo suæ constitutionis violare inditium præsumeret, quicquam consuetudinis sive dominationis in prædicto monasterio et villa prædicta sive super monachos clericos aut laicos proclamare, usurpare, justitiam aliquam facere, aut missas celebrare, nisi a præfati loci abbate specialiter fuerat invitatus, pœnam nimium formidabilem incursum, ac insuper regio fisco xxx. auri talenta persolvat, quæ in pecunia numerata reddunt et in se continent librarum decem millia. In qua pecuniæ summa quidam Norwicensis episcopus, prædictorum præcepti et decreti violator, temerariis suis exigentibus demeritis, quondam per placitum diuturnum ac tandem per judicium fuerat condemnatus. Extunc autem prædictorum regum nobilium successores egregii, ante decretorum sive aliorum canonum quorumcunque compilationem, præcepta et decreta prædicta benigne confirmaverunt.

Ut insuper omnium regum prædictorum præcepta et decreta per quemlibet eorum solidè confirmata perpetuis extunc futuris temporibus infringibilia et inconcussa valerent perdurare, Alexander papa secundus, anno pontificatus sui undecimo videlicet anno Domini mlxxj. (per septinginta et octo annos ante compilationem decretorum vel aliorum canonum quorumcunque) ad instantiam præfati Willielmi regis et Conquestoris, ipsius regis Willielmi ac omnium aliorum regum suorum prædecessorum prædictorum præcepta et decreta per bullam suam confirmavit, cujus successor immediatus Gregorius papa septimus, Urbanus secundus, Calixtus secundus, ac nonnulli alii Romani pon-tifices præfati Alexandri secundi præcepta per ipsorum omnium bullas confirmaverunt. Præterea Alexander papa tertius anno pontificatus sui xxx. videlicet anno Domini mclxiiij. et post compilationem decretorum xiiij. omnium prædecessorum suorum Romanorum pontificum ac etiam omnium regum prædictorum præcepta et decreta una cum regis Henrici secundi, adtunc apicem regni gubernantis, præcepto et decreto, firmiter roboravit et suis bullis authenticis de facto confirmavit. Processu verò temporis nonnulli ac penè omnes extunc summi Romani pontifices, ac omnes Angliæ reges nobilissimi omnium prædecessorum et progenitorum suorum præcepto et decreta in firma permanere stabilitate per suas bullas ac chartas speciales verissimè decreverunt.

NUM. IV.

Privilegium Eadmundi Regis.

[Ex Historia Mariani Scoti MS. in Bibliotheca Bodleina, V. 3, 7 Jur.]

ANNO Domini DCCCCxlv. Hoc etiam anno rex Eadmundus dedit hoc privilegium sancto Edmundo regi et martyri.

In nomine Sanctæ Trinitatis. Quamvis decreta pontificum et verba sacerdotum velut fundamenta montium in districtis ligaminibus fixa sint, tamen plerumque tempestate et turbine secularium rerum etiam religio sanctæ Dei ecclesiæ maculis reproborum dissipatur ac rumpitur. Incircò incertum futurorum temporum statum prævidentes, posteris succedentibus profuturum esse decrevimus, ut ea quæ communi tractu, salubri consilio, definiuntur, certis literulis roborata confirmentur.

Quapropter ego Eadmundus, rex Anglorum cæterarumque gentium in circuitu persistentium gubernator et rector, ad memoriam revoco gesta antecessorum meorum qui terrenis opibus ecclesias sanctorum ditaverunt, quorum exempla imitatus, ad monasterium quod situm est in loco qui dicitur Badericheswyrthe in quo sanctus Eadmundus rex et martyr quiescit corpore, terram quæ circa illum locum esse videtur libenter tribuo, et æternaliter persistat, eatenus ut illam ejusdem monasterii familia possideat, atque suis posteritatibus eadem dictione derelinquat. Sit autem prædicta terra libera ab omni mundali obstaculo cum omnibus quæ olim ad ipsum locum pertinere dinoscuntur, tam in magnis quàm in modicis rebus, campis, pascuis, pratis, silvis: et non reddat aliquod debitum nisi ad necessitatem familiæ ejusdem ecclesiæ. Si quis autem propria temeritate violenter invadere præsumpserit nostram prænotatam donationem, sciat se proculdubio ante tribunal districti judicis titubantem tremebundumque rationem redditurum, nisi prius hîc digna satisfactione emendare maluerit.

REX archiepiscopis, &c. salutem. Inspeximus cartam quam bonæ memoriæ Knutus quondam rex Angliæ progenitor noster, fecit in hæc verba. 'In nomine poliarchis Jesu Christi Salvatoris mundi totiusque creaturæ creatoris cujus divino dominatui quæque dominationes debito servicio subnixè deserviunt, cujus etiam omnipotentatui universi potentatus obsecundari examussum præproperant, quia bonitas ejus bonitatis est incomprehensibilis, et miseratio interminabilis, dapsilitas bonitatis ineffabilis, longanimitas quoque super pravorum nequitias quantitatis prolixitate cujuslibet longior, qui cotidianis admonitionibus religiosam conversationem ducentes monet ut piæ sectando justitiæ culturam, non eam deserendo linquant, quin potius perseverabili instantia in ejus cultura ut permaneant paterno affectu hortatur, qui nihilominus eadem affectione mandat peccatoribus ut resipiscant à suis iniquitatibus convertentes, quia eorum execratur mortem.

Ejus amoris stimulo et fide suffultus, cujus largiflua miseratione ego Cnut rex totius Albionis insulæ aliarumque nationum plurimarum in cathedra regali promotus, cum consilio et decreto archiepiscoporum, episcoporum, abbatum, comitum, aliorumque omnium meorum fidelium elegi sancendum, atque perpeti stabilimento ab omnibus confirmandum, ut monasterium quod Badricesworde nuncupatur, sit per omne ævum monachorum gregibus deputatum, ad inhabitandum, et ab omni dominatione omnium episcoporum comitatus illius funditus liberum, ut in eo Domino servientes monachi sine ulla inquietudine pro statu regni Dominum prævaleant precari. Placuit etiam michi hanc optionis electionem roborare privilegio isto, in quo videre præcepi libertatis donum quod jam olim Eadmundus rex occidentalium Saxonum largitus est suo equivoco pro nanciscenda ejus gratiâ et mercede æterna, scilicet Eadmundo regi et martyri, quod bonæ voluntatis voto augere cupimus, quatinus ejus promereri precibus merear portionem ejus beatitudinis post hujus cursum vitæ.

Tali libertate concedo fundo frui illi, in quo idem sanctus pausat ut quoties populus universus persolvit censum Danis, vel ad naves, seu ad arma, persolvant inhabitantes in ipso fundo eadem ad usus quos elegerint fratres illius loci. Sitque nobis remedio hoc, michi quippe æque reginæ meæ Alfgifæ, ac filiis nostris, omnibusque qui pridem ei hoc contulerunt. Huic libertati concedo additamentum, scilicet maritimos pisces qui michi contingere debent annualiter per thelonei lucrum, et piscationem quam Ulfkitel habuit in villa et omnia jura quarumcumque causarum in villis quæ monasterio adjacent et quæ adjiciendæ sunt per gratiam Dei. Dedi quoque reginæ meæ assensum, concedens ei, pro sua elemosina dare quatuor millia anguillarum cum muneribus quæ pertinent ad illas pro annuali censu in villa quæ cognominatur Lacyngahythe.

Carta Edwardi Regis Confessoris.

Ego Eadwardus rex Anglorum notifico in his literis omnibus Dei fidelibus, quod consiliatus sum cum meis archiepiscopis et episcopis, et abbatibus et comitibus, et cum omnibus meis baronibus; videlicet, volo et præcipio quod monasterium cognati mei Sancti Eadmundi, et villa in qua situm est illud monasterium, sit perpetualiter in eadem libertate quam Cnut rex, et Hardecnut rex, meus frater, ei concesserunt: et quod ille locus nunquam sit locatus cum aliis personis quam cum monachis; nec aliquis episcopus qui est, vel unquam erit in Norfc. vel Suffolc habeat unquam potestatem aliquam in eodem monasterio, nec infra fines ejusdem villæ crucibus designatos. Et monachi qui ibi degunt eligant sibi abbatem de seipsis, sicuti eidem monasterio et eadem villæ concessi, permaneat in perpetuum, ubicunque habent monachi terras sive homines, seu in futurum acquirant per Dei auxilium et bonorum hominum. Nunc igitur rogo omnes Dei amicos, qui nunc vivunt, seu futuri sunt, quod pro timore Dei nunquam sint in loco, seu in concilio ubi prædicta Libertas sit mutata, vel adnichillata, quam antecessores nostri, et nos Sancto Eadmundo et monasterio suo concessimus. Quod si aliquis fuerit ita vesanus per incitamenta diaboli, quod velit hanc libertatem mutare, sive in aliquo adnichillare vel depravare, sit ille anathematizatus, et in gehennam ignis demersus, nisi in vita suâ resipuerit.

[Ex Hist. MS. Mariani Scoti, in Bibl. Bodleiana, v. 3, 7, Jur.]

ANNO MLXV. Gloriosus rex Willielmus, qui primus ex Normannorum gente prudentia sua et fortitudine totam Angliam suo subjugavit imperio, hanc licentiam et facultatem Baldwino abbati scilicet de burgo Sancti Edmundi contulit, ut quocumque modo posset, terras ecclesiae S. Eadmundi adjiceret; vel pecunia eas à vicinis suis redimendo, vel dono ipsorum proprio et spontanea eorum voluntate acquirendo: unde factum est, ut plures liberos homines quos Soskemannos vocamus, et illorum homagia adquireret, et eorum acquisitione monasterium suum locupletaret. Cum autem hiis atque aliis modis infinitis honor per eum crevisset ecclesiae, crevit in quibusdam et exarsit insatiabilis fames avaritiæ, ita ut eundem locum invaderent, et suo eum dominio subjugare temptarent.

Exstitit malitiæ hujus exactor et princeps quidem Erfastus, Tedfordensis episcopus, qui propter cupiditatem possessionum apud sanctum Dei Eadmundum sibi constituere volebat episcopatum. Orta verò tali de causa inter episcopum et abbatem gravi contentione et gravi controversia, dominus Baldewinus abbas, consilio et auxilio famosissimi regis Willielmi Romam profectus est, dominumque Alexandrum papam secundum in sede beati Petri principantem invenit. A quo benignè et diligenter susceptus, maximo honori et venerationi habitus, insigne privilegium ad gloriam et laudem beati regis et martyris Eadmundi optinuit, cujus præmunitione eandem ecclesiam usque ad finem seculi in maxima libertate Deo protegente collocavit. Fuit autem cum domino papa conversans aliquantulis diebus, donec eum ad ordinem presbyterii promoveret, et quibusdam dignitatibus ultra quosdam abbates honorificè insigniret. Dedit ei virgam pastorem et anulum, curamque illi delegavit animarum. Altare præterea quoddam ex porphiritico lapide pretiosum, et in honore beatæ Dei genitricis et sanctissimi regis Eadmundi solenniter ab ipso consecratum, cum maxima dulcedine et dulci devotione, abbati Baldewino dominus papa dedit, eique in hæc verba denuntiavit, dicens: 'Si totum regnum Anglorum aliqua excommunicationis causa à divino cessaret officio, quamdiu altare illud integrum et illibatum custodire poteritis, nunquam à sacris missarum solenniis pro aliqua prohibitionem, nisi dominus papa hoc nominatim interdixerit, cessabitis.' Et ut in privilegio sequenti patebit, ex autoritate Dei et beati Petri apostolorum principis, et sanctorum canonum sancivit et confirmavit, ut idem locus sub abbatis regimine imperpetuum ordini monastico deserviat, neque aliqua ecclesiastica aut secularis persona eundem in sedem episcopalem convertat.

Alexander episcopus, &c. Data Lateranis vj. kal. Novembris anno Domini mxxj. indictione vij.

[Ibid.]

ANNO mxxxj. finitis placitis, calumniis, et querimoniis, quas Arfastus episcopus faciebat Baldwino Abbati, videlicet de ecclesia sancti Eadmundi et de villa in qua sanctus martyr requiescit, die pridie kalendas Junii apud Wintoniam coram rege et principibus terræ dedit rex Willielmus glorioso regi et martyri Eadmundo hoc privilegium.

P Willielmus rex Anglorum, princeps Normannorum, atque Cynomannensium, archiepiscopis, episcopis, abbatibus, comitibus, et cæteris suis fidelibus. Quoniam nos ad regni fastigia Deimis eratione provectos esse credimus, oportet ut de prospera stabilitate plebis nobis subjectæ, et maximè eorum qui in Domini servitio die ac nocte desudant, vigilare curemus. Igitur notum facimus fidelibus regni nostri presentibus et futuris, quod Arfastus episcopus ecclesiam beati Eadmundi in qua ipse venerabilis rex et martyr incorrupto corpore diem expectat beatæ resurrectionis, suam episcopalem debere esse sedem, nobis et multis aliis referebat. Unde inter Baldwinum abbatem prædictæ ecclesiæ et ipsum episcopum per multum temporis facta quam maxima altercatione, concilio archiepiscoporum, episcoporum, et aliorum multorum nobis fidelium, ut utrorumque super hiis ratio in nostra discuteretur curia, dignum censuimus. Qui dum die statuto coram adessent, episcopus suum satis facundè fecit clamorem, sed scriptis et testimoniis omnimodo vacuum. Abbas verò e contra, quomodo archiepiscopus rex à prædicta ecclesia, cum communi consilio archiepiscoporum, episcoporum, et optimatum suorum, presbyteros qui inibi inordinatè vivebant ejecerit et monachos posuerit. Quodque postmodum ipsam ecclesiam Ailnodus archiepiscopus Cantuariensis, jussu prælibatis regis dedicaverit, atque primum abbatem loci illius episcopus Londoniensis, secundum episcopus Wintoniensis, ipsum etiam Baldwinum, qui tertius est abbas, archiepiscopus Cantuariensis sacraverit.

Et quia per liij. annos, sine alicujus jam dicti Arfasti antecessoris contradictione, monachi prædicti loci à quibus voluerint episcopis ordines susceperint, ex ordine luculenter enarravit. Ostendit denique et præcepta, videlicet Canuti regis atque gloriosissimi regis Eadwardi, in quibus ab omni dominatione omnium episcoporum comitatus illius funditus sæpeditam ecclesiam liberam perpetualiter ipsi reges esse concesserunt. Quod Cantuariensis archiepiscopus Lanfrancus, et Thomas Eboracensis archiepiscopus, et Odo Baiocensis episcopus frater meus et comes Cantia, et plerique alii episcopi, Rotbertusque filius meus atque cæteri prin-cipes regni nostri qui aderant audientes, censuerunt tanti loci tantam auctoritatem, inviolatam usque in finem seculi debere permanere. Quorum irrefutabili judicio, prout dignum fuit, assensi et consensum præbeo.

Placuit etiam nobis, consilio archiepiscoporum, episcoporum, comitum, aliorumque multorum nobis fidelium, atque digna petitione Baldwini abbatis, qui nostram humiliter requisivit serenitatem, antecessorum nostrorum Anglorum regum, scilicet Eadmundi, Canuti, Hardecanuti, atque illustris Eadwardi, cujus, miseratione Domini, genere et dono in regno sumus hæredes, præcepta quæ jam sæpe nominatæ ecclesiæ contulerunt, nostro roborare præcepto, ex hoc, ut ab Arfasti episcopi, omniumque sibi per tempora succedentium episcoporum dominatione ipsa ecclesia et villa in qua sita est eadem ecclesia, sit libera. Et ut hæc auctoritas nostris et futuris temporibus circa ipsum sanctum locum perhenniter firma et inviolata permaneat, manus nostræ subscriptione cartam hanc decrevimus roborare et sigilli nostri impressione firmare.

ministris suis de Norfolk et Suffolk, et ubicunque S. Eadmundus habet terras, salutem. Notum sit nobis, quod volo et præcipio ut partitio facta a Roberto abbate S. Eadmundi de omnibus redditibus abbatiae stabilis sit in perpetuum, ut Abbas scilicet S. Eadmundi liberè habeat omnia maneria et redditus suos pro se, et prior et conventus habeant liberam dispositionem omnium maneriorum et reddituum suorum. Et regales ministri, tempore vacantis abbatiae, nullam potestatem sibi attrahant in maneriis prædicti conventus, nisi de illis dignitatibus et libertatibus, quæ ad coronam pertinent, quas S. Eadmundus habet et habere debet plenè in omnibus dignitatibus et libertatibus, per octo hundredos suos et dimidium, super omnes homines, de quibus omnibus S. Eadmundus saisitum inveni, die qua frater meus rex Willielmus fuit vivus et mortuus. Concedo et confirmo conventui S. Eadmundi, in perpetuum, liberam electionem in abbate sibi eligendo de domo sua propria, sicut rex Edwardus eis eandem libertatem dedit, et charta sua quam vidi confirmavit. Teste Th. archiepiscopo Eboracensi.

STEPHANUS, rex, &c. Sciant omnes quod ego pro salute regis Willielmi avi mei, et avunculorum meorum regum Willielmi et Henrici, et patris et matris meæ, et parentum meorum, nec non pro remissione peccatorum meorum, et Matildis reginæ uxoris meæ, et fratrum et puerorum meorum, quietam in sempiternum clamavi Deo et sancto Edmundo wardam XL. militum, quam facere solebant ad castellum meum de Norwico per quatuor terminos in anno per decenos milites singulis terminis residentes: et præterea quicquid ecclesia præfata vigiliis prædicti castelli dare solebat per annum pro warda, faciant apud Sanctum Edmundo ad eosdem terminos sicut faciebant apud Norwicum. Hanc itaque quietationem meam ad libertatem ecclesiæ datam, et a me supra altare ante corpus B. Edmundi oblatam, regia auctoritate confirmo, et præsentis sigilli mei impressione, et subscriptorum baronum attestazione munio atque corrobore. T. Carta Sampsonis Abbatis de Consuetudinibus Burgensium de Bury Sancti Edmundi.

SAMSON Dei gratia abbas S. Edm. omnibus baronibus et hominibus de honore S. Edmundi, Francis et Anglis, omnibusque successoribus suis, salutem. Notum vobis facimus, quod hæc consuetudines sint, quas burgenses S. Edm. dirationaverunt in curia S. Edm. coram prædecessoribus meis, ut a cartis eorum accepi, se habuisse tempore Edwardi regis, et temporibus Willielmi regis, et filiorum ejus Willielmi et Henrici, et temporibus Baldwini abbatis, et cæterorum abbatem, et quas ego eis concessu conventus concessi, et confirmavi. Est ergo consuetudo illorum invenire viij. homines per annum de iiij. custodiis per singulas noctes ad Villam custodiendam; et in festo S. Edmundi xvj. homines ad iiij. portas custodiendas, sc. duos homines ad quamlibet portam in die, et totidem in nocte; et similiter per xij. dies Natalis Domini; invenient etiam iiij. janitores per annum ad iiij. portas; quinta autem porta (viz. orientalis porta) est in manu abbatis; si autem opus fuerit, Sacrista invenient materiem portarum, et burgenses parabunt eas: quod si fossatum quo villa circumdatur reparari debeat, si milites de abbatia et liberi socmanni ibi operentur, tunc burgenses ibi operabuntur sicut milites sive socmanni, quod illud opus non pertinet magis ad burgenses quam ad milites. Quicunque habet in villa S. Edm. mansuras de burgali terra, pro singulis mansuris dabit per annum duos ferthingos, unum ad Pentecosten, et unum ad festum S. Martini. Præterea non debent ire extra villam S. Edm. ad hundredum, nec ad comitatum, neque ad ullum placitum ut implacitentur, nisi ad suum Portmannemot. Si quis burgensium habet terram in villa S. Edmundi vel si emerit eam, vel alio modo adquisierit legaliter in villa vel in foro, et illam tenuerit uno anno et uno die sine calumpnia, et hoc possit dirationare per testimonium burgensium, post non respondebit inde alicui calumpniatori ex diverso venienti: hanc autem necessitate cogente (si non habet filium, vel proximum vel parentem, qui voluerit et poterit ei dare tantum pro ea, quantum aliquis alius) vendet cui voluerit infra feodum S. Edm. sine omni licentia præpositi, uxoris, filiorum et parentum. Si quis accommodaverit suam pecuniam alicui extra vel infra villam, et non poterit eam habere ad terminum statutum, et hoc fuerit recognitum in ipsa villa, accipiet pro illa namam; si autem inde vadimonium habuit, et hoc tenuerit per integrum annum et unum diem, et debitor illud deguajare, siue deliberare noluerit, et hoc fuerit recognitum, vendet vadimonium coram bonis testibus pro quanto poterit, et inde suam pecuniam capiet, si quid autem superfuerit, reddet illi; si vero inde totam suam pecuniam habere non poterit, iterum namam capiet pro eo, quod sibi deest. Si quis adquisierit terram in eadem villa, quæ fuisset de Burgali consuetudine, quicumque ille sit, faciet consuetudinem, quam illa terra facere consuevit.

Quapropter volo, et hac mea charta confirmo, quod ipsi bene et honorifice debeant omnes prædictas consuetudines, et omnes libertates, quas habuerunt in temporibus Henrici regis, et prædecessorum suorum. Hujus meæ confirmationis et concessionis hi sunt testes, Robertus prior, et multi alii.

ALIANOR Dei gratia regina Angliæ, ducissa Normanniæ et Aquitaniæ, comitissa Andegaviæ, universis sanctæ matris ecclesiæ filiis, &c. Noverit universitas vestra quod cum abbas Sancti Edmundi Sampson, et ejusdem loci venerabilis conventus teneantur nobis in x. marcis auri, pro fine quem cum domino rege Ricardo, filio nostro fecerant, nummorum et pecuniæ penuriâ laborantes, aureum calicem quem habebant, tresdecim marcas auri ponderantem, nobis in satisfactione obtulerunt: nos autem decem marcas quæ ad nos spectabant eis penitus condonantes, et residuas tres aureas marcas de nostra pecunia ementes et acquietantes, totum calicem eis dedimus in perpetuam elemosynam, pro intuitu charitatis, et amore beati martyris: præcipue autem pro salute karissimi filii nostri regis Richardi: ita tamen ne liceat prædictæ ecclesiæ monachis expendere, neque ab ecclesia sua alienare calicem præmemoratum: et quod hæc rata sint, præsens carta nostra confirmat. [Pat. 17 Joh. n. 40.]

REX priori et sacristæ Sancti Edmundi, &c. Datum est nobis intelligi quod vos firmatis villam vestram Sancti Edmundi, quæ sita est in terra pacis; et ideo vobis mandamus quod opus inceptum ad villam illam firmandam penitus prosterni faciatis, ejicientes ab eadem inimicos et inimicas nostras qui in ea sunt et excommunicationis vinculo innodantur, quia licet de privilegio Sancti Edmundi deberent homines ipsius et tenentes de feodo suo tuti extitere, excommunicati tamen ex hoc in nullo meruerunt defensionem habere vel tutamen. Igitur si hoc mandatum nostrum non adimpleveritis et nos forsitan illuc non venerimus, tales illuc mittemus qui hiis meritis vestris exigentibus graviora vobis inferent mala, quam si nos personaliter adessemus, prius igitur vos super hoc monendos duximus quam gravandos. Carta Nestæ de Cokefeld facta Henrico Abbati de toto Manerio de Leleseye cum omnibus libertatibus et pertinentiis suis.

SCIANT præsentis et futuri quod ego Nesta de Cokefeld, domina de Leleseye, ex mera voluntate et in libera potestate et viduitate mea, concessi, dedi, et hac præsentis carta mea confirmavi domino Henrico abbati Sancti Edmundi totum manerium meum de Leleseye cum omnibus libertatibus et pertinentiis suis, tenendum et habendum eidem abbati vel cuicumque illud assignaverit post decessum vel recessum meum, si de meipsa proprium hæredem non habuero, ita plene et integre, bene et in pace, honorifice et hæreditarie, imperpetuum, sicut ego Nesta unquam plenius et melius dictum manerium tenui et habui. Præfatum tamen manerium tenebo donec idem abbas vel assignati sui assignaverunt mihi, quamdiu vixero, aliquod manerium vel maneria ad valentiam dicti manerii de Leleseye et decem librarum ultra, sed statim post mortem meam dictum manerium vel maneria mihi assignata integre revertentur ad dictum abbatem vel assignatos suos sine omni difficultate et conditione, dictum vero manerium de Leleseye cum omnibus ad illud pertinentibus plenarie et pacifice remanebit præfato abbati et assignatis suis imperpetuum. Promisi etiam eidem abbati fide mea interveniente media quod istud scriptum si potest corrigi et emendari ad opus meum libentissime illud emendabo pro voluntate et ordinatione sua et consilii sui. Et ad omnia prædicta fideliter observanda obligavi me per omnia bona mea mobilia et immobilia habita et habenda renunciando omni foro et juri et juris auxilio et omnibus apostolicis et regiis præceptis, prohibitionibus, et mandatis. In cujus rei testimonium præsentis scripto sigillum meum apposui coram multis. Act. apud Leleseye anno regni regis Henrici filii regis Johannis vicesimo quinto.

NOVERITIS nos ab antecessoribus nostris didicisse, quod beatus Edwardus primo anno regni sui, orationis gratiâ veniens apud sanctum Edmundum, circumibat officinas ecclesiæ, et tandem in refectorium intravit, qui videns ibi juvenes monachos ante prandium conventus reficientes pane vesci hordeaceo, quæsit cur hoc fieret? Cui responsum est à priore et monachis; quia bona ecclesiæ non sufficerent ut bis in die vel ter pane triticeo vescerentur. Tunc sanctus rex ait: 'Et ego de beato Edmundo manerium meum de Mildenhall hic vobis proximum, et cavete ne pueri mei consanguinei sancti Edmundi deinceps panem comedant hordeaceum:' (sic enim solebat vocare Sanctum Edmundum.) Et hoc donum nobis quam habemus confirmavit. Succedente tempore, Stigandus ejusdem sancti regis capellanus, factus est East Anglorum episcopus; erat enim tunc sedes apud Helmham, à cujus jurisdictione tunc temporis plenè non eramus exempti: qui frequenter ad nos divertens, et graviter expensis et aliis exactionibus onerans, petiit à nobis ut villam de Mildenhall ei ad tempus accommodarem; cui propter potentiam quam tunc habuit in tota Anglia, et maximè in nobis nondum per curiam Romanam plene exemptis, contradicere non audebamus.

Ille ergo tenuit dictum manerium de nobis omni tempore quo fuit tam episcopus quàm archiepiscopus Cantuariensis. Quem archiepiscopatum vi et dolo invasit, expulso Roberto archiepiscopo. Anno igitur Willielmi Bastardi quinto, concilium Wintoniæ celebratum est per episcopum Sedunensem, et Johannem et Petrum presbyteros, cardinales, apostolicæ sedis legatos, præsidente et jubente eodem rege Willielmo. In quo concilio Stigandus archiepiscopus degradatur pluribus de causis, maximè, quia vivente archiepiscopo Roberto, non solùm archiepiscopatum invasit, sed ipso Roberto injustè expulso, pallio ejus quod Cantuariæ remansit usus est, et postea à Benedicto, quem sancta Romana ecclesia excommunicavit, eò quod pecuniis sedem apostolicam invasit, dictum pallium accepit. Quo degradato, rex omnia maneria quæ tenuit in manu sua cepit, quorum unum erat manerium nostrum de Mildenhall, quod postea rex Richardus nobis per chartam suam reddidit, tanquam jus sancti Edmundi et confirmavit, et insuper chartæ S. Edwardi sigillum suum apposuit.

De Testamento Hamonis Blundi.

HAMO Blundus, unus ex ditioribus hominibus istius villæ agens in extremis, vix aliquod testamentum voluit facere. Tandem fecit testamentum ad pretium trium marcarum, nullo audiente nisi fratre suo et uxore sua et capellano. Quod cum abbas recognovisset, post mortem ejus illos tres convenit et acriter corripuit super hoc quod frater ejus, qui hæres erat, et uxor ejus, non sustinuerunt aliquem alium accedere ad infirmum, cupientes omnia capere. Dixit quoque abbas in audentia. 'Ego fui episcopus ejus et curam habui animæ ejus, nec mihi vertatur in periculum sacerdotis et confessoris ejus inscitia, qui infirmo viventi consulere non potui absens. Quæ mea interest faciam saltem tardè. Præcipio ut omnia debita ejus et catalla mobilia quæ valent cc. marcas, sicut dicitur, reducantur in scriptum: et una portio detur hæredi, et alia uxori, et tertia pauperibus consanguineis suis et aliis pauperibus. Equum autem qui ductus est ante feretrum defuncti et oblatum est sancto Edmundo jubeo reverti et reddi; non decet enim ecclesiam nostram coinquinari munere ejus qui decessit intestatus, et quem fama accusat quod ex consuetudine solebat pecuniam suam ad usuram dare. Per os Dei si alicui de cætero tale quid contigerit diebus meis, non sepeliatur in cimiterio.' Hiis dictis recesserunt cæteri confusi.

Præterea cedente vel decedente ejusdem loci abbate inveniet conventus sumptibus suis electo et familiæ suæ expensas et omnia necessaria versus curiam Romanam et in ipsa curia usque ad electionis confirmationem et electi benedictionem. Defendet siquidem abbas qui pro tempore fuerit omnia maneria conventus cum omnibus suis pertinentiis et libertatibus obtentis et obtinendis, redditus, possessiones, et omnia bona secularia et ecclesiastica usibus conventus deputata in foro seculari et ecclesiastico ubicumque et coram quocumque iudice seculari seu ecclesiastico sumptibus suis et expensis sicut sua. Ita tamen quod si abbas in foro ecclesiastico agat vel conveniatur pro aliquibus portione conventus contingentibus, et contigerit eo prætenu aliquam fieri condemnationem, ipsam acquietabit conventus, dicto abbate tota lite pendente omnes, ut supradictum est expensas de sua portione faciente. Si vero abbas pro ipsius conventus portione in foro seculari implacitet vel implacitetur, omnes expensas circa placitum de sua propria acquietabit portione.

Quod si aliquando contigerit in aliquibus maneriis, possessionibus, vel rebus supradictis, conventui deputatis vel in posterum deputandis, aliquid vel aliqua fieri pro quo sive quibus abbas in misericordia domini regis contingat; finis misericordiae à conventu eorumque portione persolvatur. Nullus etiam abbas qui pro tempore fuerit nullusque ejus ballivus vel alius quicumque præter ballivos pro conventu constitutos in maneriis, rebus, vel possessionibus conventui deputatis se intromittat; salvo abbati et suis successoribus quod eorum ballivi exerceant et faciant in prædictis maneriis et locis omnia quæ ad coronam regis pertinent, eo modo quo temporibus retroactis facere consueverunt. Præterea idem abbas existens in villa Sancti Edmundi cum familia sua omnes hospites, tam pedites quam equites, suscipere debet et exhibere, præterquam viros religiosos et eorum famulos, quos omnes semper conventus recipere tenetur. Omnes enim sæculares, tam equites quam pedites, ad abbatem præsentem de jure semper pertinent antiquo, quo absente, omnes pedites universique equites cum xiiij. equis vel paucioribus pertinent ad conventum: cum xiiij. equis vel pluribus sive præsens fuerit sive absens, semper pertinent ad abbatem ubi fuerint religiosi vel à priore specialiter invitati. Ut igitur prædicta ordinatio et portionum divisio stabilis, firma, inconcussa, et in perpetuum illibata perseveret, præsentem scripto tam supradicti domini abbatis quam ipsius conventus sigilla, unanimi consensu et voluntate eorundem, sunt appensa. NUM. XXXII.

TEMPORIBUS Baldwini abbatis, primò Thurstanus et postea Tolinus fungebantur officio. Hi duo, temporibus prædicti abbatis, ecclesiâ lignea et veteri complanatâ, ecclesiæ nostræ fundamenta jecerunt, parietes erexerunt, presbyterium ad plenum confirmaverunt, et beati martyris translationem procuraverunt: feretra etiam beati martyris et sanctorum Botulfi et Firmini laminis argenteis exsculperunt.

Hos secutus est, tempore domini Roberti abbatis, in eodem officio vir staturæ ferè gigantea, Godefridus nomine, magnus corpore, sed major animo. Hic refectorium, capitulum, domum infirmorum, et abbatis aulam consummavit ad plenum. Iste et magnam campanam non levi pretio comparavit.

Subsecuti sunt eum viri totius prudentiæ Radulphus et Harveus, sacristæ temporibus domini Anselmi abbatis, qui murorum ambitum circa atrium ecclesiæ fecerunt, ecclesiam beatæ Mariæ cum turri sua, clocarium, et deintus cimbala bene sonanti, et turrim sancti Jacobi, valvas etiam duplices in fronte ecclesiæ insculptas digitis magistri Hugonis. Qui, cum in aliis operibus omnes alios vicerit, in hoc opere mirificè vicit seipsum, murorum et ambitum circa villam Sancti Edmundi: quia liberè tenentes de honore Sancti Edmundi ad Harvei comparationem in murorum ædificationem quasi rivuli fuerint, ille fons fuit. Redditus quos ex antiquo jure sacrista habet in villa Sancti Edmundi Harveus comparavit et terram Thomæ Noel de Hausted.

Iste Harveus, frater Taleboti prioris, omnes expensas invenit fratri suo priori in scribendo magnam bibliothecam, et manu magistri Hugonis incomparabiliter fecit depingi. Qui cum non inveniret in partibus nostris pelles vitulinas, in Scotia partibus parchamentum comparavit. Pitantias etiam quas habemus annuas in anniversariis eorum, ipse instituit, et pretio dato redditus comparavit.

Secutus est eum Helias sacrista, nepos Ordingi abbatis, natus apud Hildercl, cognomento Widewell. Iste Elias conflagratis omnibus officiis domus sancti Edmundi abbatis aulam, refectorium, dormitorium, et domum infirmorum vetustam, et capitulum reformavit ad plenum, et omnes alias officinas in curia inchoavit ille, et primam manum apposuit, quod successores feliciter consummaverunt. Tabulam etiam argenteam pretii c. marcarum ad magnum altare fabricari fecit, et festum Reliquiarum instituit, erogationem autem factam per manus diebus festivis, per manum sacristae ipse constituit; crucem in choro et Mariam et Johannem per manus magistri Hugonis incomparabiliter fecit insculpi. Idem etiam Helias avunculum suum, cum ei sua non sufficerent tempore turbatae pacis, de bonis sacristiae, assensu conventus devotè et piè adjuvavit.

Huic aliquando ministravit dominus Radulphus quondam elemosinarius in sancta sacristia. Qui translationem sanctorum Botolphi et Firmini procuravit. Quo in brevi mortuo, ministravit et eidem in eodem officio magister Samson postea abbas, qui tempore officii sui pro majori parte chorum consummavit et unam istoriam in majori turre occidentale.

Domino Willielmo Wardell successit dominus Hugo sacrista, qui turrim magnam versus occidentem tecto opposito et plumbato consummavit, domino Samsone laquearia et tigna et quicquid ibidem ligneum est inpendente. Turrim etiam juxta capellam sanctae Fidis plenè quoad opus lapideum consummavit. In alia turri juxta capellam sanctae Catherinae unâ istoriâ consummatâ. Infirmarium novum temporibus Willielmi sacristae, procurante magistro S. et capellam sancti Andreae pro majori parte edificavit et consummavit praedictus Hugo, domino abbate Samsone de boscis suis tigna et quicquid ibidem ligneum est ministrante. Pulpitum in ecclesiae edificavit, magna cruce erecta cum imaginibus beatae Mariae et sancti Johannis sibi sedem abbatis in choro, manu Simonis pictoris ad hoc desudante. Reddidit conspicuè capas bruslatas quilibet ad valentiam lx. marcarum, et calicem auream v. marcarum pondere. Idem sacrista aulam hospitum et balneatorium plenarie perfecit, domino abbate S. affluenter, largiente de boscis suis quae necessaria erant ad praedictarum domorum contignationem. In adis tamen suis praedictis sacrista de receptis et expensis neminem voluit habere consciunt, cum dominus abbas in pleno capitulo id praecipisset, sed solus quae agenda erant fideliter et feliciter consummavit.

Successit ei magister Walterus de Banham: Henrico primo elemosinarius fuit, factus verò sacrista, aulâ domini abbatis antiquâ dirutâ novam innovavit, et plene consummavit. Aqueductum à capite et fonte distantem duobus milliaribus plumbo inclusit, et usque ad claustrum per occultos terrae meatus derivavit. Lavatorium morte preventus ad plenum non consummavit: sed tamen quicquid ibi vidimus in marmore aut imaginibus deauratis et in opere cementario factum totum fecit, quia in vita sua expensas omnimodas erogavit. Centum marcas de plata et eo amplius, et duas marcas auri ad tabulam faciendam dedicavit, et ecclesiae fabricam innovavit, ut patet omni transeunti. Turrim magnam quae est juxta capellam sanctae Fidis, quam dominus Hugo sacrista quoad cementariam consummaverat, hic culmine supraposito plenius consummavit. Quinque capas sericas auro bruslatas, et unam casulam bruslatam devotè contulit. Tabulam magnam super altare in choro cum mole illa lapidea cui trabes innituntur consummavit ad plenum, magno candelabro deaurato et laminis aureis innovato, decies viginti tignis relictis in cimiterio quae dictus dominus Samson abbas contulit, videlicet quater

xx. de bosco de Wirbugwrth, et sexies xx. de boscis de Meleford ad innovationem ecclesiae satis accommodis.

Waltero de Banham successit Willielmus de Disce, qui cum modo debito electus fuisset ad illud officium, et in illo à die sancti Thomae martyris usque ad Circumcisionem Domini, per quatuor videlicet dies, stetisset, interim sompnum oculi sui capere non potuerunt, qui videns se ibidem proficere non posse, suam ab abbate Sampson petiit cessionem.

Post hunc venit Robertus de Grauele, qui locum vineae emit et muro lapideo inclusit, ad solatium infirmorum et amicorum. Navim ecclesiae de novo contignavit, et celuram ultra sanctum Edmundum fecit, et picturae varietate decoravit. Mortuo autem abbate Sampson, à quibusdam Hugo de Northwold, a quibusdam Robertus praedictus ad abbatiam fuerat electus. Hic vero Robertus, durante inter ipsos non modico tempore controversia memorata, utrique parti expensas invenit sufficientes. Cum autem contra eundem Robertum processu temporis processum fuisset, et in officium sacristae aliquanto tempore post difinitivam sententiam stetisset, electus fuit ad abbatiam de Thorney.

Cui successit Dominus de Newport. Hic vetus capitulum destruxit, et novum à fundamentis construxit: piscariam de Ikelingham non modico pretio comparavit. Magnam etiam campanam in majori campanario, quae dicitur Newport, sumptu non mediocri fieri fecit. Hic in maremio ab abbate Hugone secundo, in manerio de Meleford comparato, omnia edificia, pariter aulam et solarium de lapide apud Manhale construxit. Idem xx^s. annui redditus in Manhale et xx^s. anni redditus in Ikelingham adquisivit pro conventus et pauperum in diem anniversariis suis videlicet duas marcas pro conventu et unam marcam pro pauperibus secundum martirologium.

Huic ad preces suas appositò successit Gregorius precentor natus in patria sancti Albani, qui cum ibidem non diu stetisset, electus est ad prioratum sancti Edmundi, meritis sanctitatis suae exigentibus. Nam ad sacrum ejus tumultum, prout vidimus, nonnulli à diversis infirmitatibus per merita viri dicti curantur.

Post hunc factus est sacrista Nicholaus, natus in patria de Warewick, qui inter multa alia bona quae fecit, fundi fecit campanam optimam in choro, quae dicitur campana sacristae. Ab isto primò ablata fuit pixis oblationum et assignata thesaurariis. Hic in ultimis diebus suis paralysi percussus, sponte cessit, et in infirmaria multos transigens annos de sacrista annuatim dum vixit xl^s. ad percepit.

Cui successit Simon de Luyton, vir prudentissimus et circumspectus, qui modicam ibi faciens moram, ad altiora non immerito proventus, factus est prior sancti Edmundi. In ipso officio stans, fundi fecit campanam in choro, quae dicitur Luyton. Post non multum verò temporis vocatus est ad abbatiam sancti Edmundi.

Huic successit Richardus de Horninshe, qui cum ibidem aliquanto tempore stetisset, abbate et priore et conventu hoc volentibus, sponte cessit vel invitatus, erat enim senio affectus, et vir agriculturæ et non libertatibus servandis deditus.

Cui successit Richardus de Colecester. Hujus tempore, pacificata lite inter comitem Richard. Gloverniæ et nos, concessum est eidem comiti pro bono pacis manerium de Manhall cum Bremge, terra apud Gasely ad elemosinarium pertinens, et manerium de Southwold spectans ad cellerarium. Hujus tempore consideratum fuit per conventum quod in ruinis ecclesiae reparandis xij^l. poneret per annum et non amplius, veruntamen ultra praedictas xij^l. fecit novam aulam quae dicitur Spane, ad recreationem conventus. Hic per duos annos habuit de conventu omnia maneria cellerariae firmario facienda plenas firmas. Sed conventus interim per annum respondebat illi de xx^l. tunc verò temporis cellerarius fuit frater Willielmus de Becles.

Cantabrigiæ. Qui prius cellerarii, postea verò camerarii functus est officio, qui sponte cedens vel invitatus nihil dignum memoria egit ibidem.

Cui successit Willielmus de Luyton, à cameraria ad officium assumptus memoratum. Hujus tempore concessum est regi medietas omnium bonorum temporalium et spiritualium tam religiosorum quam prælatorum et ecclesiasticarum personarum, in subsidium guerræ suæ contra regem Franciæ. Hic primò cultum Dei in ecclesia et circa sanctum Edmundum, sanctum Botulphum aliaque sanctuaria in cereis et luminaribus diminuit, et plusquam dimidiavit. Quod sibi prosperum cecidisse non arbitror. Et quamvis in aliis honestus homo fuit et modestus, in hisce verò quæ conventui facere tenebatur, utpote pitantiis, misericordiis et hujusmodi, prærigidus fuit et austerus. Stetit per multos annos ante obitum suum, nec aliquid de hiis nisi pro voluntatis suæ arbitrio poterat extorqueri. Maneriorum tamen edificia, et redditus in villa utiliter reparavit et decenter ornavit. Moriens ferè nullam reliquit pecuniam, in magna tamen pecunia diversis creditoribus et maximè servientibus ecclesiæ tenebatur. Staura siquidem et instaura-menta maneriorum maximè in bidentibus ampliavit.

NUM. XXXIII.

ANTIQUÆ consuetudines celerarii quas vidimus tales fuerunt. Celerarius habebat messuagium et horrea sua juxta fontem Scurum, ubi solemniter curiam suam solebat tenere de latronibus et omnibus placitis et querelis, et ibi solebat ponere homines suos in plegios et irrollare et renovare singulis annis et inde lucrum capere, sicut præfectus faciebat ad Portmanatt. Quod messuagium cum orto adjacentem quem nunc infirmarius tenet, fuit mansio Beodrici, qui fuit antiquus dominus istius villæ, unde et villa dicta fuit Beodrisworth, cujus campi dominici nunc sunt in dominio cellerarii. Quod autem nunc vocatur Averland fuit terra rusticorum ejus. Erat autem summa tenementi ejus et suorum trecies triginta acræ terræ, quæ adhuc sunt campi istius villæ. Quorum servitia, cum villa fuit facta libera, dividebantur in duas partes. Sacrista sive præfectus acciperet liberum censum videlicet de qualibet acra duos denarios: celerarius habebat araturas et alia servitia videlicet araturam unius rodæ pro qualibet acra sine cibo, quæ consuetudo adhuc observatur. Haberet et faldas, ubi omnes homines villæ, præter seneschaldum qui propriam faldam habet, tenentur ponere oves suas, quæ consuetudo adhuc observatur. Haberet et Averpeni, scilicet pro singulis triginta acris duos denarios, quæ consuetudo mutata fuit ante mortem Hugonis abbatis, Gilberto de Alveden existente cellerario. Solebant etiam homines villæ, jubente celerario, ire apud Laginheth et reportare averagium de angillis de Southreye, et sæpe vacui redire, et ita vexari sine aliquo emolumento celerarii, unde convenit inter eos, ut singulæ triginta acræ de cætero darent unum denarium per annum et homines remanerent domi. Terræ autem illæ nunc temporis devisæ sunt, quod vix scitur a quo ille census dari debet, ita quod vidi celerarium in uno anno capere inde xxvij. denarios, sed nunc non capit unum denarium.

Item celerarius solebat habere potestatem in viis ex villa, ita quod nulli licuit fodere cretam vel argillam sine licentia ejus. Solebat etiam summonere fullones villæ ut ei accommodarent pannum ad sal suum ducendum alioquin ipse prohiberet eis usum aquarum et caperet telas quas ibidem inveniret. Quæ consuetudines adhuc observantur. Item quicumque emerat à celerario bladum vel aliud solebat esse quietus de theoloneo ad portam villæ quando exiret, unde cellarius rem suam carius vendebat, quod adhuc observatur. Item solus cellarius debet vel solebat habere liberum taurum in campis hujus villæ et non alius. Item quando aliquis delegabit terram burgagii in elemosinam conventus, terra illa solebat de cætero esse quæta de Haggonell^a et maximè cellario propter dignitatem officii, quia secundus pater est in monasterio, vel propter reverentiam conventus, quia favorabilior debet esse conditio eorum qui victum nostrum procurant. Item cellarius liberè solebat capere omnia sterquilinia ad suum opus in omni vico, nisi ante ostia eorum qui habebant Averland. Item celerarius in foro istius villæ tale privilegium solet habere, quod ipse vel emptores sui primam emptionem habebunt de omni cibo ad opus conventus, si abbas domi non fuerat. Emptores abbatis vel celerarii qui prius veniunt in foro prius ement, sive isti sine illis sive illi sine istis: si autem hinc et inde præsentés fuerint, deferendum est emptoribus abbatis. Item tempore quo venduntur aleciæ ement emptores semper abbatis centenarium de allec minus quàm cæteri uno obolo, similiter celerarius et sui emptores, &c.

SANCTÆ matris ecclesiæ filiis universis præsentem litteras inspecturis Willielmus permissione divina abbas monasterii Sancti Edmundi de Bury, Norwic. dioc. ad Romanam ecclesiam nullo medio pertinentis salutem in Domino sempiternam. Quia Majestatis divinæ celsitudo inscrutabilis illorum merita condigno primo recompensat qui domus Dominicæ sic facultates amplificavit ut in ea Christo famulantium necessitatibus uberius valeat provideri. John Ap Rice's Letter to Lord Cromwell, giving account of the Misrule of Bury Abbey.

PLEASE it your mastership, ffor asmoche as I suppose ye shall have sute made unto you touching Burie er we retorne, I thought convenient to advertise you of our proceedings ther; and also of the compertes of the same. As for thabbot, we founde nothing suspect as touching his lyving; but it was detected that he laye moche foorth in his granges, that he delited moche in playing at dice and cardes, and therein spent moche money, and in buylding for his pleasure. He did not preche openly. Also that he converted divers fermes into copie holdes, whereof poore men doth complayne. Also he semeth to be addict to the mayntenyng of such superstitious ceremonies as hathe ben used heretofore. As touching the covent, we coulde geate litle or no comperts amonge theym, allthough we did use moche diligence in our examinacion; and therby, with some other arguments gethered of their examinacions, I fermely bilieve and suppose that they had confedered and compacted biferre oure comyng that they shulde disclose nothyng. And yet it is confessed and proved, that there was here such frequence of women comyn and reassortyng to this monasterie as to no place more. Amongest the reliques we founde moche vanitie and superstition, as the coles that St. Laurence was tosted withal, the paring of St. Edmund's naylls, St. Tho. of Cant. pennekynff and his bootes, and divers skulls for the hedache, peces of the Holie Crosse, able to make a hole crosse: of other reliques for rayne, and certaine other superstitious usages for avoydings of wedes growing in corne, with such other. Here departe of theym that be under age upon an eight, and of them that be above age upon a five, wolde departe yf they might; and they be of the best sorte in the house and of the best lernyng and ingenient. The hole number of the covent biferre we came was lx. savyng one, beside iij. that were at Oxforde. Of Elie I have written to youre mastership by my felowe Richard a Lee. And thus Almighty God have you in his tuition. From Burie v^{to}. Nov.

* ARMS of ST. EDMUNDSBURY ABBEY. The Arms given in the initial letter of the English Account of this abbey^a are those assigned to it by Bishop Tanner. In Reyner, p. 214, and in Fuller, Ch. Hist. book vi. p. 322, the Arms are three Crowns without Arrows. The same coat has been already mentioned as occurring in Lydgate's Life of St. Edmund, presented to King Henry the Sixth:^b and so the abbey at first bore them. In the Procession Roll to parliament in the time of King Henry the Eighth, copied in Mr. Cole's manuscripts, the same Coat occurs impaling the private shield of abbat Bunting.^c

Bishop Tanner, in the Notitia Monastica, however, asserts, from Blomefield, that for above a hundred years before the Dissolution the abbey constantly bore three Crowns, or Coronets, with Arrows. According to Blomefield, they so occur in a window of old Buckenham church in Norfolk.^d Turner adds, "In Rice's Suffolk Collections, MS., there is another Coat ascribed to this abbey, which, perhaps, might be the Arms or Seal of one of the greater obedientiaries; viz. Azure, three pair of keys adorsed in triangle Or."^e

That the monastery of St. Edmund, however, like other abbeys, sometimes varied the bearings of its shield, there is good reason to believe.

Upon the church of Beccles, in Suffolk, which the abbat and convent were patrons of, and the structure of which is supposed to be at least as old as Richard the Second's time, many single Crowns, pierced with Arrows, occur.^f And on the steeple of Great St. Mary's church in Cambridge, and on the outside of the cornice of the south aisle, on stone shields, the same Arms of a single Coronet pierced with three Arrows occur. The abbey of St. Edmundsbury having been a benefactor to the building of that church.^g In the ceiling of the Nave of Wood-Ditton church in Cambridgeshire is the Coat of Bury Abbey still differently given; viz. Three Coronets pierced with two Arrows in saltier.

What is called the Shield of St. Edmund the King and Martyr occurs in other churches dedicated to that saint, which were not connected with Bury abbey: and still with variation.

On the font of Downham church in Norfolk dedicated to St. Edmund (but which belonged to Ramsey abbey) is a shield with two Arrows in saltier and a Crown over them.^h

On a wooden screen in the church of Emneth, in Norfolk, belonging to the bishoprick of Ely, also dedicated to St. Edmund, is carved on a shield the single Crown, or Coronet, pierced with three Arrows, points downwards.ⁱ

Cathedral and Benedictine Priory of Coventry,

IN

WARWICKSHIRE.

IR William Dugdale having himself written of the Priory of St. Mary Coventry in his History of Warwickshire, it would be improper were we not to make his Account at least the ground-work of that which is now to be laid before the reader.

A convent of Nuns is said to have existed here early in the eleventh century, under the government of St. Osburg, which was destroyed by the Danes in the year 1016.^a Of this foundation our notices are extremely scanty. Leland ascribes it to Canute both in his Itinerary and his Collectanea, but probably without sufficient authority.^b

ST. MARY'S COVENTRY^c was a priory for Benedictine monks, founded, according to the best authorities, in 1043, by LEOFRIC earl of Mercia and his lady Godiva.^d The church was dedicated by Edsi archbishop of Canterbury on the fourth of the nones of October that year, and was furnished with an abbat and twenty-four monks.

Godiva is said to have given all her treasure to this monastery; and to have sent for skilful goldsmiths, who, with all the gold and silver which she had, made crosses, images of saints, and other curious ornaments for its decoration.^e Hoveden speaks of the wealth so bestowed as far exceeding that of any contemporary monastery in England.^f William of Malmesbury adds further, that it was enriched and beautified with so much gold and silver that the walls seemed too narrow to contain it; insomuch that Robert de Limesi, bishop of Coventry and Lichfield, in the time of King William Rufus, scraped from one beam, which supported the shrines, five hundred marks of silver. Here also was kept the celebrated relic, the Arm of St. Augustine bishop of Hippo, placed in a silver shrine, with an inscription indicating that Archbishop Egelnoth, returning from Rome to Pavia, had purchased it for a hundred talents of silver and a talent of gold.^g

Earl Leofric died on the 2d of the kalends of September, 1057:^h but the date of Godiva's death has not been preserved. William of Malmesbury says they were buried in the two porches of their church. Godiva, when at the point of death, gave a rich chain or collar, set with precious stones, directing it to be placed about the neck of the image of the Virgin Mary, and enjoining that those who came for devotion to the church should say as many prayers as there were gems in the chain.ⁱ

The original endowment of the Monastery by Earl Leofric, beside a moiety of the town of Coventry, consisted of the vills of Honington, Newenham, Chaddleshunt, Ichenton, Olloufton, Sutham, Greenesburgh, Buntingbury, Merston upon Avon, Herdwike, Wasperton, Chesterton, Sutham, Ruyton, and a moiety of the vill of Sowe; Merston in Gloucestershire; Salewarpe in Worcestershire; Eaton on the Dee in Cheshire; Kyldesby and Wynwyke in Northamptonshire; Burbagh, Barwell, Scraftofte, and Pakington, in Leicestershire.^k

^c See Num. I.

^d See Num. II. The story of the freedom of Coventry, as procured by the Lady Godiva, is known to every one. The following are the particulars detailed by Matthew of Westminster under the year 1057, edit. 1601, p. 216. "Hæc autem comitissa religiose villam Coventrensem a gravi servitute ac turpi liberare affectans, sæpius comitem virum suum magnis precibus rogavit, ut Sanctæ Trinitatis, sanctæque genitricis Dei intuitu, villam a prædicta absolveret servitute. Cumque Comes illam increparet, quod rem sibi damnosam inaniter postularet, prohibuit constanter, ne ipsum super hac de re cætero conveniret. Illa contrario, pertinacia muliebri ducta, virum indesinenter de petitione præmissa exasperans, tale responsum extorsit ab eo. 'Ascende' (inquit) 'equum tuum nuda, et transi per mercatum Villæ, ab initio usque ad finem, populo congregato, et cum redieris, quod postulas, impetrabis.' Cui Comitissa respondens ait: 'Et si hoc facere voluero, licentiam mihi dabis?' Ad quam comes 'dabo' inquit. Tunc Godiva comitissa, Deo dilecta, die quadam, ut prædictum est, nuda equum ascendens, crines capitis et tricas dissolvens, corpus suum totum, præter crura candidissima inde velavit, et itinere completo, a nemine visa, ad virum gaudens hoc pro miraculo habentem, reversa est. Comes vero Leofricus, Coventrensem a præfata servitute liberans civitatem, charitam suam inde factam sigilli sui munimine roboravit." Compare also Chron. Joh. Brompton, Script. X. Twysd. col. 949. Hen. de Knyghton, ibid. col. 2333.

In memory of this fact, says Dugdale, Hist. Warw. p. 86, the pictures of Earl Leofric and his lady were set up in a south window of

"In the same place King Canutus had before built a church, and little monastery for religious virgins, which were either removed or translated to some other place, and now Benedictine monks put in their rooms."

^c Although usually spoken of as dedicated to St. Mary, it is named in Earl Leofric's charter as consecrated to God, the Virgin Mary, St. Peter, St. Osburg the virgin, and All Saints. A charter of Geoffrey the son of Robert de Stokes, "de quadam cultura in Offechirch," (see the Append. of Instruments, Num. XII.) says,—"pro amore Dei et beatæ Mariæ, et pro amore beati Petri apostoli, et Pauli, et sancti Benedicti, et Omnium Sanctorum in quorum honore fundata est ecclesia de Coventre."

^d Pope Alexander's bull of confirmation, Bishop Tanner observes, bears date this year; and so doth the recital of Leofric's deed of foundation, in Cart. 51 Hen. III. n. 8. This is also the year assigned in Dugdale's Warwickshire, p. 157, edit. 1730. But the third Volume of the former edition of the Monasticon, p. i. p. 217, and Lel. Collect. vol. i. p. 416, place it in 1044. And in Leland, Collect. vol. iii. p. 72, it is said to have been founded A. D. 1051.

^e "ELFGARUS Comes Coventrense cenobium construxit, et magnis redditibus ad victum monachorum inibi consistentium largiter ditavit. GODIOVA vero religiosa comitissa omnem thesaurum suum eidem ecclesiæ contulit, et accersitis aurifabris quicquid in auro et argento habuit, ad construendum sacros textus et cruces, ac imagines sanctorum, aliaque mirifica ecclesiæ ornamenta devote distribuit." Order. Vit. Hist. Normann. Script. edit. 1619, p. 511.

^f See the original passage of the historian, App. Num. I.

The charter by which these were granted was first confirmed by King Edward the Confessor, who added these privileges,—that the land so given should be free from taxes for setting forth soldiers, or the building of bridges or castles, and also from all payments to the king, bishop, or any other person.^a A bull of Pope Alexander the Third, which accompanied this Charter, added that the monastery should not be subject to any diocesan bishop, nor judiciary power, of what order or dignity soever; and that the monks here should have liberty to elect their abbat from among themselves, or from any other congregation.^b

Another confirmation of Leofric's charter, granted by King William the Conqueror, with a fine impression of his seal appendant, is still preserved in Warwickshire among the family muniments of Sir Simon Archer, Baronet.^c A second charter of the Conqueror, confirming the privileges of the place, is preserved among the Harleian charters in the British Museum.^d

The following are the lands recorded as the endowment of the monastery in King William the Conqueror's Survey. In Gloucestershire, ten hides at Merestone; in Worcestershire, a hide at Salewarpe; in Northamptonshire, three hides and a virgate at Winewiche, two hides and a half appertaining to Winewich in Essebi, two hides in Chidesbi, and two hides at Eddone. In Leicestershire, a hide and the fourth part of another hide at Burbece, three carucates in Mersitone, four carucates in Barewelle, one in Stapleton, twelve carucates in Scrapentot, eight carucates and a half in Pachintone, and one in Cherchebi. In Warwickshire, half a hide in Filvnger, eight hides in Raneberge, six in Svrland, two in Derbingerie, three hides in Bilveie, three virgates in Condene, four hides in Sucham, three hides and a half in Sowa, four hides in Vlchetone, five hides in Icetone, one hide and a virgate in Edburberie, fifteen hides in Herdewiche, five hides in Hvnitone, five in Cedeleshunte, one hide and a half in Cestreton, five hides in Wasmertone, five in Neweham, and three hides in Radewei. Aluin the sheriff is stated to have given Cliptone in the same county, with the consent of King Edward, to the monastery; but it had been invaded and taken from the monastery by Earl Aubrey.^e

Shortly after the Norman Conquest, says Sir William Dugdale, there was one Peter consecrated Bishop of this diocese, meaning Lichfield (then including Chester as well as Coventry and Lichfield), in whose time Lanfranc archbishop of Canterbury held a Synod at London, wherein it was decreed that episcopal seats should not remain in petty towns: by virtue whereof this was removed from Lichfield to Chester.^f To which Peter, who died and was

Trinity church in Coventry, about the time of King Richard II. The earl holding a charter in his right hand, on which was written,

*I Puriche for the lobe of thee,
Doe make Cobentre tol-free.*

Dugdale says, exclusive of Earl Leofric's foundation and endowment of this monastery of his proper patrimony, he was a great benefactor to other religious houses, more especially of Leominster in Herefordshire, Wenlock in Shropshire, St. Werburgh's and St. John's in Chester, and Worcester and Evesham in Worcestershire; to all of which he gave divers rich ornaments. To the abbey of Burton upon Trent in Staffordshire he granted a large part of Austrey in the county of Warwick. Compare also Joh. Brompt. col. 949. Henr. Knyghton, col. 2334.

The joint benefaction of Earl Leofric and his countess to the monastery of St. Mary's Stow, near Lincoln, has been already noticed in the present Volume, p. 1.

^f Dugd. Warw. edit. 1656, p. 100, ex rot. pervetusto penes Dec. et Cap. Lichf. A quarto manuscript in Mr. Sharp's Collection at Coventry, which will be hereafter described, says, "Anno m.lxxv. In hoc anno per consilium quod Lanfrancus archiepiscopus tenuit Londoniis translata fuit sedes episcopalis de Lich. ad Cestriam episcopo Petro tunc pontificatum agente."

ⁱ Ibid. Compare the extract from Will. of Malmesb. Script. post Bedam, fol. 73. Mr. Sharp's manuscript, just quoted, speaks of Robert de Lymesie's translation of the see as taking place in 1104 by the authority of Pope Paschal the Second. "Anno m.c.iiiij." In hoc anno translata fuit sedes episcopalis per Robertum de Lymesie episcopum buried at Chester, succeeded Robert de Limesy; which Robert, upon the death of Lewinus, or Leofwinus, abbat of Coventry, obtained from the king the custody of this monastery, and, by the authority of a bull from Pope Paschal the First, removed his see from Chester hither.^g Hereupon the bishop settling at Coventry, and having the government of this monastery, the name of abbat became thenceforth utterly suppress and extinct, in regard that the episcopal dignity therein overtook it: so that the succeeding Priors (for so they were called who had the rule) were but as substitutes to the bishops, in whom the abbacy virtually was.^h But this bishop, Sir William Dugdale observes, was neither a friend to the monastery nor to the monks; for besides scraping so much silver from one beam, as has been already intimated, he suffered the buildings to decay for want of repairs, and pillaged the church of many rich ornaments; and as for the monks, he kept them to poor and miserable commons, not regarding their regular living, nor any thing that might advance learning among them, to the end, that being thus brought low, and in ignorance, their thoughts should not soar so high as to consider the redress of these his so great injuries.ⁱ

Of the other bishops who successively resided here at Coventry (this being their cathedral as well as Lichfield) Sir William Dugdale recites the names. These were, Robert de Peche, Roger de Clinton, Walter Durdent, Richard Peche, and Gerard de Puella; all of whom, in their several times, successively, styled themselves "Coventriæ episcopi" only, and had their palace at the north-east corner of St. Michael's church-yard, very near to the monastery. The History of these Bishops will be reserved for the Account of Lichfield cathedral.

In the seventh year of King Stephen, A. D. 1143, the times being then turbulent, Robert Marmion, whose seat was the castle of Tamworth, and himself a great adversary of the earl of Chester, possessed himself of the monastery of Coventry, turned out the monks, and fortified the church, with the buildings belonging to it, making deep trenches in the fields adjacent, which he so covered that they could not be seen, to the end that they might be an impediment to any approaching enemy. While sallying out upon the earl of Chester's forces, he fell with his horse into one of these trenches himself, was surprised by a common souldier, and killed.^k

In the 15th of Stephen the monks of Coventry granted unto those of Daventry, in Northamptonshire, the church of Ashby, with three yard-lands thereto belonging, and the church of Haddon, with two yard-lands, excepting the

The Bodleian manuscript quoted by Hearne in his History of Glastonbury, App. 293, 294, has the following:

"De Roberto de Limesi.

"Hæ sunt terræ quas Robertus episcopus de Lymesie ejecit cum ecclesiis. Roberto de Flamville dedit Barewelle. App. pp. 293, 294.

^k Dugd. ut supr. who quotes Anonym. Abingd. in Bibl. Bodl. vol. i. fol. 30 a. Mat. Paris, edit. 1684, p. 67, says, "Anno Domini m.c.xliij. Robertus Marmimi [sc. Marmion] vir bellicosus, qui monachos Coventrenses a suo monasterio expulerat, et de ecclesia illa castellum fecerat, dum contra hostes decertaret, inter prædones suos, ante ipsum monasterium, solus peremptus est, et excommunicatus morte depascitur sempiterna." Brompton adds a miracle on this occasion. Having noticed the death of Geoffrey de Mandeville at Ramsey abbey, he says, "Simile quoque scelus exercuerat in ecclesia Coventrensi quidam perversus Robertus Marmion, vir strenuus et bellicosus, qui inter suorum cuneos coram ipso monasterio solus interfectus est, et excommunicatus obiit. Dum autem ECCLESIA illa pro CASTELLO teneretur, a parietibus ecclesiæ et claustris adjacentis, SANGUIS multis videntibus ebullivit, et hoc Henricus de Huntynghdon in suis testatur Cronicis se vidisse." Script. X. Twysd. col. 1033.

tithes and such other benefits which were due to the church of Winwyk, of which these were originally members; in consideration whereof, the monks of Daventry were to pay yearly to this monastery one pound of incense before the feast of the Nativity. This was in the time of prior Laurence. Shortly after, it appears, there was an agreement made between the two houses, that, if any monk of Coventry should be, by the consent of his prior and convent, sent to Daventry, out of their great affection for that house he should be freely received, and reside there in the same regular way as if he were one of the same convent until he should be recalled by the prior of Coventry; and, in case he departed this life during his abode there, all solemnities were to be performed for him as for a monk of Daventry: and the like were the monks of Coventry to perform for those of Daventry who should be sent thither. And if any of either convent happened to die elsewhere, one priest of each monastery, his death being known, was to celebrate three masses for him; his service, with Placebo and Dirige, to be also performed in the convent, with the corrody belonging to a monk for that day, and his name registered in the Martyrology. And when any prior of either monastery died, a Trental was to be sung in the other convent, over and above the services before recited. And moreover, every year, a mass of the Holy Ghost was to be celebrated, as well for the living in each monastery as for the dead: and lastly, in all things both spiritual and temporal, where each could assist the other, they were bound effectually to afford their aid.^a

About this time, also, Ranulph, or Ralph de Gernon, earl of Chester, gave the monks of Coventry liberty to have two carts going to and fro twice every day, except festivals, into his woods about Coventry, to fetch thence whatsoever they might need, in order to the repair of their buildings, fuel for their fire, or as bundles for their hedges.^b And being fully assured that the chapel of St. Michael in Coventry, and all the rest within the town and without, with the tithes, oblations, and rights to them belonging, situated within his fee, did justly belong to them, he made them his charter of recognition, and confirmed them to this monastery for the health of his soul, as also for the souls of his father and mother and all his progenitors.^c After which, in the twelfth of Henry II., upon return of the certificates touching knights' fees, the prior of this house signified that he had seven and a third part, with two fifths and a tenth "de veteri feoffamento," and as much in demesne as countervailed ten knights' fees.^d

In the 29th of Hen. II. there was an exchange of land made between the monks of Coventry and Hugh Keviliok, the succeeding earl, for licence whereof they gave twenty marks to the king.^e About which time the said earl granted to them a free and ample charter, as well of protection as confirmation of their possessions; ^f forbidding all his tenants from hindering their market, or meddling therein without the consent of the monks. And that posterity might not be ignorant which were the metes and boundaries betwixt both their fees, that is to say, of the Prior's part and Earl's part, he by the same charter fully described them, including the lands of the monastery within these following limits; viz. beginning at St. Michael's church-yard, and from thence directly to the Broadgate of his own castle, leaving the houses of William de Repyndon and William the son of Forthwy (tenants to the monastery) on the north part, and the earl's fee on the south; and so passing down to the river of Smythesford, and from thence ascending the brook to the mill of Gerard le Vinter of Hull and Radeford to Coundon, and so coasting aside between the grounds of Robert Scot of Aileward-siche near Blakemore, the lands of R. Beaufiz and Anketil Locard being on the one part, and the earl's wood called Haselwood on the other part; and thence by the brook of

Endemere to the high-way leading from the midst of Har-nall near to Stoke, as far as the gibbet, and thence descending by Bisseleis to the brook called Goseford; and so along that brook and the ditch, hard to the land of William Hakun, and thence to the walls of the said monastery.^g

To this Hugh succeeded Ranulph, surnamed Blundevill, in the earldom of Chester, who ratified to the monks of Coventry the recognition and confirmation made by Earl Ranulph, his grandfather, of the chapel of St. Michael, with Ansty, Shilton, Wykin, Bilney, Whitley, Pinley, Stoke, Stichall, Eccleshall, Folkeshull, Karesley, Whaberley, Sponne, and Bisseleie, within his fee; in all which he solemnly invested them on the feast-day of St. Abdon and Sennes, in the month of July, 3 Rich. I. by his gold ring, which, with his said charter, he offered upon the altar. Upon which chapel of St. Michael he likewise conferred the tithe of all his lands and possessions in Coventry, under the penalty of a curse upon his officers, servants, and heirs, in case they should not make due payment of them accordingly. And, besides this, he gave to the monks, in exchange for one of the two carts which Earl Ranulph, his grandfather, had granted to them, to have going to and fro in his woods for necessary housebote, firebote, and heybote, two hundred and eighty acres of land, being part of his wood and waste in Eccleshale and Kersley, according to twenty-five feet the perch; the metes and bounds of which are set forth in the charter: which waste he gave them liberty to enclose, reduce into tillage, or otherwise to use to their best advantage.^h

In reciting the misfortunes which befell the monks of Coventry about this time, we shall quote Sir William Dugdale's own words:

"Hugh Novant, a Norman by birth, having been brought up to learning in the university of Oxford, and consecrated bishop of this diocese (of Coventry and Lichfield) towards the latter end of Henry the Second's reign; at the same time that he had the bishoprick conferred upon him by the king had also a grant of the Priory in such sort as Roger de Clinton his predecessor enjoyed it; viz. in demesne with the barony, wherein he received homage of the freeholders, and found the monks all necessities according to his own pleasure: but during the life of the said King Henry he did not possess what was so granted him. Whereupon he came to King Richard the First, his son and successor, and purchased a Confirmation of his father's grant: and besides all this he [Bishop Novant] obtained a render of the house by Moyses, the then Prior at Reading, in the presence of Baldwin archbishop of Canterbury, the bishops of London and Rochester, and many other persons of note. After which the said bishop, holding a Synod in the church of this monastery, wherein some things were agitated tending much to the prejudice of the monks, as it should seem, though the particulars are not recorded, he so much incens'd the monks that they rush'd in upon him, and with a cross of that church broke his head; whereupon complaint being presently made to William bishop of Ely, chancellor of England, and at that time not only the Pope's legate, but governor of the realm in the absence of King Richard, then on his journey to the Holy Land, that the monks had shed his blood even before the altar; ⁱ he forthwith decreed that they should be expelled, and secular canons plac'd in their room; ^k which judgment the proud bishop soon put in execution; and by strong hand turning them out, did, to justify himself therein, forthwith dispatch letters to Rome, whereunto he had got the hands of other bishops, signifying, that the monks of Coventry had deserted their rule, and were contaminated with secular pollutions; ^l thereupon petitioning his holiness that he might have the free disposal of that monastery. Unto which letters the pope gave no present answer, expecting to have heard what the monks could say for themselves: but, they, being much impoverished by the bishop's oppressions (for he was then a potent man, having the custody of the counties of Warr. and Leic. committed to his charge for several years of King Rich. reign,^a) were not able to send to Rome in their own defence; so that the bishop had his desires fulfilled, the poor monks being scattered up and down to seek their fortune in the world. In which banished condition they continued during the whole life of that bishop, who lying upon his death-bed at Bec in Normandy, in the last year of King Richard's reign, became so sensible of his great iniquities, and in particular of the injuries done to these monks, that he deplored the same with abundant sighs and teares; earnestly desiring that prayers and intercessions should be made unto God for him. And not then knowing how to make other satisfaction than to end his dayes in their habit, with great mourning besought the abbat of Bec, that for the love of God, and shame of the Devil, he would vouchsafe to grant him the habit of a monk, to the end that he might have them to be his patrons in the world to come, whom he had so persecuted in this. Which being accordingly fulfilled, he disposed all his gold and silver, jewels and plate to Houses of Religion, and unto the poor; and by way of satisfaction for his manifold transgressions condemned himself to the pains of purgatory 'usque in idem Judicii cruciandus,' and so died.^b

"At which time there was resident in the court of Rome, one Thomas, a monk of Coventry, who being expelled with the rest, was studious to obtain a restitution of this monastery to its former condition; and therefore waited all opportunities, though through want he was often forced to beg his bread: and when news was brought of the bishop's death, being then in good hopes to be heard, he exhibited his petition to Pope Innocent the Third (then newly created and sitting with his cardinals in the Consistory), which so soon as his holiness had read, in an angry mood he bad the monk withdraw, telling him that other petitions to the same purpose had been exhibited to Clement and Celestine his predecessors, but rejected, and therefore his expectations were vain. Unto which the monk with bitter tears replied, 'Holy father! my petition is just and altogether honest, and therefore my expectation is not vain; for I expect your death, as I have done your predecessors; for there shall one succeed you who will hear my petition to purpose.' But the pope, taking notice of these expressions from the poor monk, and much wondering at them, said to the cardinals, 'Hear ye not what this Devil hath spoken? scil. I expect your death as I have done your predecessors;' immediately turned to him and said, 'Brother, by Saint Peter, thou shalt not here expect my death, for thy petition is granted;' and forthwith before he went to dinner directed his letters mandatory to Hubert archbishop of Canterbury, that, upon sight of them, he should presently go to the church of Coventry, and thence put forth the clerks, and reinvest the monks: which the said archbishop did accordingly 15 cal. Feb. 1198. (ult. Ric. I.) And because Moyses the prior was dead in the time of their banishment, he constituted in his stead one Joybert a Norman; who for his eminent wisdom in worldly affairs, had the government also of Daventry, Wenloc, and Bermundsey committed to him. Which Joybert was no sooner entred upon his charge, but he speedily, with the consent of the monks, elected Geoffrey Muschamp archdeacon of Cliveland to be bishop as being a man from whom they expected nothing but fair regard."^c

Such, indeed, is the testimony of Matthew Paris: the Annals of Burton, however, and Hoveden, ascribe the

"The monks," Sir William Dugdale continues, "thus re-established, took into consideration the conveniences of their house, and all other securities that might tend to their advantage, as appears by what I shall instance: for in 5 Joh. they procured an alteration of the market, but how the record expresses not; in consideration whereof they gave a Fine of five marks to the king.^e And the next ensuing year did they obtain the king's special letters of protection for themselves, their tenants, and all their possessions:^f as also such a privilege, that they should not be impleaded for any of their lands except before the king himself, or his chief justice, for which they gave two pal-freys.^g The like charter of protection had they 11 Hen. III.^h and, besides, another of sundry privileges, viz. sok, sak, tol, theam, infangenthef, hamsocne, forstal, blodwithe, flithwithe, wardwite, and mundbriche: and that they and all their tenants, except those which held by knights' service more than half a knight's fee, should be quit of murder, robbery, suit to the county or hundred-courts, aid to the sheriff, view of frank-pledge, and repair of the king's castles or pooles.ⁱ In consideration of which favours they paid to the king a fine of sixty marks;^k towards the raising whereof they had aid of the Coventry burghers.^l In the same year they had a grant of a yearly fair to last for three days beginning on the day of St. Leodegarus the martyr, which falls out Oct. 2d.^m And in 16 Hen. III. did Gefrey, the then prior, purchase of Gerard de Allespath half a hide of land in Old Fillongley to the use of this monastery."ⁿ

"Touching such extraordinary charges whereunto they were subject in this king's time, I find, that in 13 Hen. III. they gave a fine to be exempt from sending souldiers in person for the expedition then beyond sea; and to have power for levying scutage of their tenants for ten knights' fees, which they held of the king in capite; viz. three marks, "pro quolibet scuto," towards that service.^o As also in 18 Hen. III. a fine of twenty five marks, that they might not send soldiers to the king's army in Wales.^p In 20 Hen. III. they answered xx. marks for eight knights' fees, "de veteri feoffamento," upon collection of the aid for marrying of Isabel the king's sister to the Roman emperor.^q In 26th, fifteen marks by way of aid, upon the king's trans-fretation into Gascoyne.^r In 29 Hen. III. 10% for ten knights' fees, upon the aid for marriage of the king's eldest daughter.^s Towards their better support of which burthens they had the king's letters of recommendation to all their tenants, for the receiving aid from them; which bear date in Octob. 33d of his reign.^t

"But it seems, that these taxes fell thus heavy upon them, before they had in any reasonable measure recovered themselves out of the low condition wherein they had been cast by the oppression of Hugh Novant the bishop before-mentioned: for I find that in the time of prior Roger (who died about the 32d of this king's reign) there being a great league of friendship betwixt the monks of this monastery and the canons of Derley in Derbyshire, these of Coventry represented their miserable condition unto those of Derley, not only with very lamentable expressions, but with tears; protesting, that their wants were so great, that the whole convent was like to be dispersed, except they had present succour, and therefore humbly besought the canons of Derley that they would vouchsafe to receive some of them into their monastery there to have subsistence for a while: "quousque oriens ex alto; miseratio altissimi, nostro felicius illuxerit occidenti," are their words. Of which great good will, that had been for a long time before, betwixt these two religious houses, I find this testimony, that by way of mutual curtesies, the monks of Coventry used to send unto them of Derley needles and soap; and they of Derley to these, saddles and riding-furniture.^a

"But, after this, they received, as well from the king as others, divers great favours and benefits for the advantage of their monastery: for in 34 Hen. III. it was, that they obtained in fee-farme from Roger de Montalt and Cecily his wife all their interest in the manor of Coventry, with the advowson of the church of St. Michael, and the chapels thereunto belonging; excepting the capital seat called Cheylesmore, and the park, with the House of Friars Minors, and the homage and services of their freeholders.^b And in 41 Hen. III. had they the king's charter of free-warren in all their demesne lands of Coventry, Cundulme, Sow, Wylenhall, Frankton, Merston, and Herdwyk, Sutham, Olethon, Offechurch, Wasperton, Hongton, and Packwood, with divers other places in this county and Leicester-shire.^c As also in 44 Hen. III. an appropriation of St. Michael's church before mentioned, with all the chapels thereunto belonging: viz. Ansty, Shulton, Wykin, Stoke, Bilney, Sow, Stichall, Folkeshull, and Sponne; and of Trinity church, with its chappels; the chapel of St. John, with the hospital; the churches of Corley and Allespath, the church of Herdwyke, and its chapels, with archidiaconal jurisdiction there: the church of Packwood, with archidiaconal jurisdiction also; and likewise the whole tithes arising in their demesne lands wheresoever.^d In 46 Hen. III. the like appropriation for Offechurch.^e And in 51 Hen. III. a confirmation of their foundation charter by Earl Leofric, with the bull of Pope Alexander the First: as also a further grant of freedom from doing suit to the county or hundred courts, and to the sheriff's turn. And that they should have a coroner within the town of Coventry that might answer before the justices itinerant for whatsoever concerned that office: and, moreover, a merchant's gild, with all privileges thereto belonging; and that they, their tenants, nor their goods should be distreyned for any debt not properly their own, or for which they were sureties.^f

"And after this, ere long, suffering great losses by reason of such excursions as young Montfort and his fellow rebels in Kenilworth-castle, or the king's army, during the six months siege thereof, did make; had they the king's letters patent, recommending their wants to all their tenants, and desiring them that they would so contribute to their relief, as that they might expect recompence at God's hand, and thanks from him.^g And in 5 Edw. I. licence to enclose certain waste grounds near Coventry which (inter alia) were granted to them in fee farm by Roger de Montalt and Cecily his wife.^h So that the state wherein this monastery stood, about those times, was thus represented by a special inquisitionⁱ taken shortly after; viz. that, consisting of Black-monks, it had therein a Cathedral-Church; and that the prior and his convent, together with the chapter of Lichfield did elect the bishop, these having the first voice. That the prior, here, was also lord of this town, a moiety whereof, with the whole barony, he held of the king in capite, by the service of two knights fees in the army: and had a weekly mercate on the Friday: and a faire every year, enduring eight days, with a coroner, and free-warren in all his demesne lands: which moiety he held as freely as Earl Leofric did the same of King Edward the Confessor. And that he the said prior with his tenants, being privileged of murder,^k had gallows, pillory, tumbrell, assize of bread and beer; as also fealty of his burghers, and appearances at his court twice in the year: for all which the charters of King Henry III. and divers other his progenitors were then exhibited.

"And, moreover, that he held the other moiety, called the Earl's part; with the out-wood wherein the inhabitants claimed Common of pasture for all manner of cattle, and other commoning in the woods belonging the the abbey of Stoneley, of the heirs of Roger de Montalt, by the service of cx. marks per annum, according as in the fine levied betwixt the said Roger and Cecily his wife, and the said prior and convent is more at large contained: which heirs held it of the king as of the fee of Chester. In which half the said prior had, once in the year, a fair lasting six days, about the feast of the Holy Trinity; with gallows, pillory, tumbrell, assize of bread and beer, and fealty of all the burghers; as also two appearances yearly at his court. By which inquisition likewise appeareth, that the whole town was then exempt from toll, excepting for horses, whereof the burghers were only freed; but that the said burghers had toll of horses for their own tenants there inhabiting: and that the same prior had three mills here, with the ponds thereto belonging; and two pools in demesne. All which immunities and privileges were in 13 Edw. I. pleaded by the monks; who then likewise manifested, that they had time out of mind enjoyed two great courts every year in this place; and weyfs: and that the Prior's bailiff used ever to go along with the king's bailiff to execute all such precepts as concerned the crown; as also, that the town of Coventry answered for xij. having free-warren, infangthef, assize of bread and beer, mercate, and fair, with all things belonging thereto; pillory, tumbrell, and a coroner of their own: and that they were quit of murder, robbery, suit to the county or hundred courts, and to the sheriff, &c.^l

"Touching the mercate they had here, it was kept in that part of the town called the Prior's half, as it seems; where it still continues, that being the place peculiar thereunto: for in Edward the Second's time, upon a suit commenced by the Prior against one William Graumpe and others, for selling divers wares in Erle-street every week upon the Friday in their houses and shops; who pleaded that they did so by vertue of the charter anciently granted to them from the earl of Chester; in which was contained that they should enjoy as ample liberties as the burgesses of Lincoln; and added, that the said earl, in his time, had a fair in that street, and so likewise his heirs, till such time as the beforementioned Roger de Montalt and Cecily his wife demised that street to the predecessors of the said Prior; judgement was given for the prior with lx^{li}. damages; and command that they should not sell their commodities any where upon the Friday, but in the Prior's part.^m But in Edw. III. time, after the possession of Cheylesmore came to the hands of Queen Isabel, there grew some dispute touching the extent of the Prior's part; so that, by an indenture tripartite, bearing date 29 Edw. III. made betwixt the said queen with the mayor and commonalty on the one part, and the prior and convent on the other, the division betwixt their said parts was by metes and bounds there described in manner following; viz. beginning at the stones or pillars near the cross of St. John Bapt. hospital, including northwards all Bishop-street; and so all along towards the common-quarry, near the garden of Richard Buckmore: and thence strait on, taking in all St. Nicholas street, even to the high-way leading unto Radford; and so through the midst of Radford to Broad Oak towards the east; and thence to Whittemore, environing that manor; and so to Blakemore, and Cuenetford; and thence turning aside by a little brook running from Endemere towards Coventry into Swanneswell-pool; and from that pool by a hedge and ditch of the priory, near to the gate called Derngate, to Erlesmylne; and thence on the back side of Erles-orchard, including the bishop's palace, and so to the wall of the priory-well yard, and along by the gate of the monastery to the corner of Trinity church-yard, where the butchers use to be; and from that corner directly along by the west gate of the Priory, and the guest-stable wall to the running river; and so thwarting the brook, excluding St. John's hospital and the bake-house belonging thereto unto the cross or pillars before-mentioned. So that whatsoever is included within those bounds was the prior's part, and all the rest the earl's part.

"Divers other covenants are contained in the said tripartite indenture, whereof the Friday-market for cattle and timber, is one of the principal, which was agreed to be kept in Bishop street, and Cook street, as it had wont to be; but that the said prior and his successors should take no toll, except for horses only; and that the sale of all other vendible commodities whatsoever, in this town, should be by the ordering of the mayor and commonalty, and their successors for ever."^a

An enumeration of the several lands, messuages, &c. purchased by the prior and convent within the precincts of Coventry, as well as in their other lordships, from the passing of the statute of mortmain to the 31st of Edw. III. will be found in the Appendix of Instruments.^b

"The next thing," says Sir William Dugdale, "that, in order of time I meet with, which may be reckoned worthy of note in relation to this monastery is, that the clergy and people of the archdeaconry of Coventry did in anno 1410 (12 Hen. IV.) make a humble representation to John Keterich bishop of this diocese, that the memory of the holy virgin St. Osburg (unto whom this monastery was specially dedicated) grew famous for many miracles in those days; for as much as divers weak and infirm people, which came to her tomb, situate in the priory-church, and there and elsewhere imploring her prayers and merits, had been restored to bodily health and soundness: and therefore did petition the same bishop, that her birth-day might be solemnized, and the said Virgin revered in hymnes and psalmes, with other devout suffrages. Whereupon the bishop caused a synod of the clergy of the archdeaconry to be convened in the said church the 13 of Octob. in the same year; wherein it was determined that her said birth-day should be solemnized and kept, as a double festival throughout the whole archdeaconry every year for ever, and in as complete a manner as the feast of their churches dedication."^c

In the fatal Survey of 26 Hen. VIII. the forerunner of the Dissolution, the yearly revenue of St. Mary Coventry was certified to be 731*l.* 19*s.* 5*d.*; out of which, the fee-farm rent to the crown reserved by Roger de Montalt, with all other pensions and annual payments, amounting to 249*l.* 5*s.* 9*d.* being deducted, the clear remainder was 499*l.* 7*s.* 4*d.* per annum. Amongst these deductions, Dugdale informs us, 14*l.* 13*s.* 2*d.* per annum was reckoned for bread, beer, and two messes of meat daily: viz. as much as would suffice for two monks, and allowed to the poor of St. John's hospital within the city, upon the first foundation thereof; and 6*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* in money, bread, wine, and other victuals, distributed to poor people on Maundy Thursday, yearly, at the washing of their feet: also 12*l.* 11*s.* 4*d.* for the yearly maintenance of poor scholars in the said monastery; and 26*s.* 8*d.* to keep the anniversary of Earl Leofric the founder, and of the Countess Godiva his wife. At the time of which Survey, Henry Marquis of Dorset was high-steward, and had 4*l.* per annum pension; and William Gevyns receiver general, who had 10*l.* per annum annuity.^d The valuation of this monastery, as given by Bishop Tanner from the Liber Regis, stands at 538*l.* 4*s.*

ABBATS OF COVENTRY.

LEOFWINUS was made the first abbat, A. D. 1043:^e from which office, ten years afterwards, A. D. 1053, he was promoted to the bishoprick of Lichfield.^f He died in 1066.^g After Leofwinus,

LEOFRIC, nephew of Earl Leofric the founder, is stated to have held this and three other abbeys in commendam with his great abbacy of Peterborough.^h Another

LEOFWINUS, called also LEWINUS, the last abbat, occurs as present at the Synod of London, A. D. 1075. Sir William Dugdale makes no mention of him. Wharton says, he died some time before 1095.ⁱ

PRIORS OF COVENTRY.

A memorandum in a folio Register, which will be hereafter described, belonging to Mr. Sharp of Coventry, gives the following List of Priors successors to Leofwin:

BURWYNGUS;
HERWEY;
LEOSTANUS;
OWYNE;
STANULPHUS;^k
RICARDUS.^l

The next prior was

LAURENCE. He occurs in the years 1144, 1149, and 1162.^m He died upon the 4th of the kalends of February, A. D. 1179.ⁿ After a vacancy of four years,

MOSES, or MOYSES, chaplain to Richard archbishop of Canterbury, was elected prior about the middle of the year 1183.^o Upon the ejection of the monks by Bishop Hugh de Novant in 1190, abbat Moyses appears to have gone into exile. He died at Rome on the 17th of the kalends of August, 1198.^p

JOYBERT, or JORBERT, who has been already noticed, a Norman, was the successor to Moyses. He had previously held the priory of Wenlock. He was confirmed Prior of Coventry upon the restoration of the church to the monks, on the 15th of the kalends of February, 1198.^q In 1208, upon the death of Bishop Geoffrey Muschamp, during the interdict, prior Joybert was elected by the monks of Coventry to the see of Coventry and Lichfield; his election, however, as well as that of Walter de Gray by the monks of Lichfield, was annulled by Pandulph the Pope's legate, and Joybert still continued prior: not, however, without paying three hundred marks for the restoration of his barony, which King John had seized.^r

Abbat Joybert died on the 18th of the kalends of July, 1216.^a

GALFRIDUS, or GEOFFREY, was elected prior on the 16th of the kalends of August following.^b In 1223, upon the death of Bishop William Cornhull, he also was elected by his monks to the bishoprick, but the chapter of Lichfield refusing to join in the election, it was set aside.^c A Chronicle of Coventry, written by him, is quoted by Sir William Dugdale. According to the Annals of Tewkesbury, abbat Geoffrey died in 1236.^d But it was probably somewhat earlier, as on Sept. 19th, 1235, the royal assent was given to the election of

ROGER DE WATTON, or DE WOOTTON, to whom the temporalities of the priory were restored on April the 28th following.^e A licence for a fresh election, upon the cession of abbat Roger, was granted May 21st, 1248,^f when

WILLIAM DE BRITHWATON was elected prior. A licence was granted for a fresh election, upon his cession, upon May 9th, 1279: upon the 19th of which month

THOMAS DE PAVY received the royal assent as prior.^g

HENRY DE LEYCESTRE received the royal assent as prior on Feb. 2d, and had the temporalities of the monastery restored to him on Feb. 11th, 1292.^h

WILLIAM IRREYS, a monk of Coventry, according to the Patent Rolls, received the royal assent to his election as prior on March 7th, and had the temporalities restored May 4th, 1322.ⁱ Dugdale and Wharton, however, speak of HENRY Irreys as Prior: and the latter states that while in that office, in 1321, he was elected by his monks to the bishoprick of the diocese, but was opposed by the chapter of Lichfield, and finally superseded by the pope's provision in the person of Roger de Norburg.^k Upon the death of prior Irreys, a licence for a fresh election was issued, in which he is again called William, on August 1st, 1349.^l On the tenth of the same month

WILLIAM DE DUNSTAPLE received the royal assent, and had the temporalities on the 1st of September following.^m Upon his death,

WILLIAM DE GRENEBURGH was chosen prior. The royal assent to his election was given July 13th, and the temporalities restored July 27th, 1361.ⁿ

JAMES DE HORTON was chosen prior upon the death of Greneburgh. He received the temporalities Oct. 7th, 1390.^o Upon his death,

ROGER COTON, or COTTON, was elected. He received the royal assent July 9th, and the temporalities Aug. 17th, 1396.^p A licence for a fresh election, upon the resignation of prior Coton, was issued April 23d; and on the 19th of May, 1399, the temporalities of the monastery were restored to RICHARD CROSBY.^q His portrait is preserved in a window in St. Mary's hall at Coventry.

RICHARD NOTYNGHAM was chosen prior upon the death of Crosby, and had the temporalities restored May 17th, 1437.^r He died on the 4th of the nones of March, 1453.^s

JOHN SHOTTESWELLE, subprior, was elected on the death of Notyngham. He received the temporalities March 21st, 1453.^t Dugdale appears never to have met with his name. Wharton notices him in the Anglia Sacra "ex Registro Kempe."

THOMAS DERAM, or DERHAM, succeeded upon Shotteswell's death. He received the temporalities of the priory Nov. 5th, 1460.^u Dugdale says he died April 14th, 21 Edw. IV. A.D. 1481.^x

RICHARD SHAW received the temporalities, as prior, June 4th, 1481.^y He occurs as a member of the Corpus Christi Gild in Coventry in 1487 and 1489. He was succeeded by WILLIAM POLLESWORTH, who had the temporalities March 26th, 1500.^z He also was a member of the Corpus Christi Gild.

JOHN IMPYNGTON was elected prior in 1516; in the month of October in which year he became a member both of the Corpus Christi and Trinity Gilds in Coventry. Mr. Sharp conjectures that he either died or resigned soon after: as inde electione de prædicto Josberto Priore pendente, Canonici Lichfeldenses ad mandatum domini regis per se elegerunt Walterum de Gray in episcopum. Unde et utraque electio, scil. de Josberto priore et de Waltero de Gray, per Pandulfum legatum annullata est, archiepiscopo Cant. tunc in transmarinis agente." Ibid. pp. 436, 437.

^l In certain pleas before the king of the 18th Edw. II. rot. 24. MS. Hale in Biblioth. Lincoln. Hospit. we read,

"By writt of certiorari directed to the coroner of the king's household to certifye an appeale made before him by one Ro. le Mareschall of Leicester he certifies the same, which is to this effect.

"Robert le Mareschall of Leicester hath acknowledged before Simon Croy coroner of the king's household that in vigil. Omnium Sanctorum 17 Edw. II. he was inhabiting with John de Nottingham who pretended to be a necromancer at Coventre and that Richard le Laconer and several others of Coventry came to him the Wednesday next before St. Nicholas 17 Edw. II. complaining that they could not live for the hardships they endured from the PRIOR OF COVENTRY by the maintenance of our lord the king, Sir H. Spencer E. of Winton and Sir Hugh his son in destruction of them and of the town of Coventry, and if they would undertake to kill the K. and the others there named by negromancy, they would give him 20*l.* and his subsistence in any Religious house in England; and to him the said Robert 15*l.*; of which they paid eleven marks to the said John, and 4*l.* to him the said Robert, as also brought them 7*lb.* of wax and two ells of canvas of which they made seven images, one of the king, a second for the Earl of Winchester, a third for his son, a fourth for the PRIOR, a fifth for the Cellerer, sixth for Nicholas Crumpe steward to the Prior, and the seventh for one Richard Sowe; and how they began their necromancy the Munday after St. Nicholas in an old house half a mile out of Coventry under Shortley parke, and so continued till Saturday after the Ascension; and that the next day after Holy Rood day about midnight the said John delivered him a feather sharpned at one end and comanded him to thrust it into the forehead of the image of Richard Sowe two inches deep, by which they would prove what might be done upon the others, and that he did so, and that the next morning the said John sent him to the house of the said Richard Sowe to see how he was who found him roling and crying Harrou, without knowing any body, and so continued untill the Sunday before the Ascension, and then the said John took the feather out of the forehead of the image and put it into the heart, where it remained till the Wednesday following, on which day the said Richard dyed, which tryal upon the said Richard was made in the manner aforesaid by the assent of the aforesaid persons knowing of it.

"Some of these appear, and are tried and found not guilty.

gild accompts in the month of August, 1517, and on the 4th of October, in the same year, in those of the Corpus Christi gild. His name occurs in the same accompts in 1528.^a In which year

THOMAS WYFFORD, or WEFORD, was elected prior.^b According to Wharton, he occurs as still prior in 1533 in the Register of Cranmer, archbishop of Canterbury.^c His death is alluded to in a letter from Bishop Latimer to Lord Cromwell given in the Note, written in 1538.^d

THOMAS CAMSWELL, CAMSELE, or KAMPSWELL, was the last prior. The temporalities of the monastery were restored to him March 21, 1538.^e Wood says, he had commenced B.D. at Oxford in 1531. On the 15th of January, 1539, with twelve monks, he surrendered the priory of St. Mary Coventry to the king;^f receiving for himself an adequate pension.^g

The prior of Coventry, though subordinate to the bishop of Coventry and Lichfield as his abbat,^h still had a seat in parliament. Fuller says he "played at in and out, and declined his appearance there."ⁱ

The SITE of the priory was granted, by the king's letters patent, bearing date 28th July, 37 Hen. VIII., to John Combes, gent., and Richard Stansfield, and their heirs, with divers messuages, gardens, mills, &c. thereto belonging, to hold in free burgage.^k

Two REGISTERS of CHARTERS, with other manuscript materials relating to this priory, have been obligingly supplied to the Editors of the present Work by Thomas Sharp, Esq. of Coventry.

One Register forms a volume of considerable thickness, written upon a hundred and twenty-six leaves of vellum. Its contents will be found enumerated in the Note.^l The Instruments marked with an asterisk have been transcribed in the Appendix to this Account.

Mr. Sharp's second manuscript of charters forms a thin quarto volume of twenty-five leaves;^a the first twenty having been taken from a manuscript of the "Statuta Antiqua et Nova," in the possession of Francis Douce, Esq., supposed formerly to have been the property either of the convent or of some monk of Coventry. The last five leaves consist of transcripts in Mr. Sharp's hand, chiefly of homages, from parts of Mr. Douce's manuscript which could not be separated from the rest without injury to the main contents of the volume.

Leland makes no mention of any LIBRARY here: but in an Account of Payments in the 5th of Rich. II. there is one 'Custodi Librorum.'^a

Hearne, in his Appendix to the History of Glastonbury, gives a List of Books, which appear to have been written for the use of this monastery by a monk of the name of John de Bruges, probably about the fourteenth century, from a manuscript in the Bodleian library at Oxford.^b

ARMS of St. Mary's Coventry. Fuller, in the margin of his Church History, book vi. p. 322, says, "St. Marye's in Coventry had no Armes in their Seale, as my good friend Mr. Dugdale informed me." Dugdale's observation was strictly correct; but not so Fuller's inference. The Arms were those ascribed to Earl Leofric, Or. an eagle displayed Sa. as given in the initial Letter to the present Account of the monastery. Dugdale has engraved them twice, as Earl Leofric's; once from a window in St. Michael's church in Coventry, and once from a window in Trinity church.^c A whole-length portrait of prior Richard Crosby, already mentioned, in one of the east windows of St. Mary's hall at Coventry, has the Arms of the priory beneath. A receipt of the treasurer of this priory, 37 Edw. III. has the eagle upon the Seal: and so has a receipt by William Pollesworth, prior, dated in 1503, with the legend SIGILLUM OFFICII THESAURARIÆ, remaining in the Augmentation Office: and upon the Seal of the sacrist, 18 Hen. VI. are two shields of Arms, one Leofric's, the other of King Edward the Confessor. These two shields are likewise found upon a small round Seal, used in the 22d of Rich. II. by prior Roger, the legend of which is not recoverable.^d Tanner says, in the Notitia Monastica, that although Coventry was a parliamentary priory, he could not meet with the Arms.

The COMMON SEAL appendant to the Surrender of this priory, in the Augmentation Office, represents the Virgin Mary seated, with the infant Jesus in her lap; the legend on the obverse being SIGILLUM . COMMUNE . ECCLESIE . COVENTRE. A Counter-seal, on the reverse, represents the Ark floating on the waves; the legend, SIGILLUM . ELE . DE . COVENTRE.

Mr. Sharp has a drawing of an older Seal of the convent used in the time of prior Moyses; it represents a priory or cathedral church of considerable size. All that remains of the legend is SIGILLV IE . C

^e The following is Dugdale's Account of the "CHANTRIES in and adjoining to the PRIORY OF COVENTRY:

"Leicester's Chantry.

"This chantry was founded in the 2d Edw. III. as appears by the covenants (Northb. f. 27 a.) for ordination thereof made betwixt Henry the then Prior, and Robert de Leicester and William de Leicester, canons of Lichfield; whereby the said prior doth undertake for himself and his successors to find two secular priests to sing mass daily in that cathedral at the altar of the Holy Trinity, the blessed Virgin, K. Edward the Confessor, Edmund archbishop of Canterbury, and All Saints, standing in the body of the said church; for the good estate of the same church, and for the soul of the before specified Prior; as also for the souls of Henry and Letice, father and mother of the said Prior; Robert and William de Leicester above mentioned, Geoffrey and Elene their father and mother; and of their brethren and sisters. And likewise for the souls of Sir William de Bereford, frere Hugh de Rothwell, Walter de Langton, and Roger Northbury then bishop of Coventry and Lichfield. But of this chantry, all that I find more is, that upon the Survey (MS. penes S. A. eq. aur. fol. 28 a.) taken in 26 Hen. VIII. it was certified, that Thomas Jackson and William Pawden were then the priests belonging thereto, each of which had a stipend of 4^{li}. per annum paid by the prior, and were removable at his pleasure.

"Copston's Chantry.

"This chantry adjoining to the wall of the priory (Ibid. fol. 31 b.) was founded by William Copston in 19 Edw. I. (Pat. 19 Edw. I. m. 14.) the revenue of it in 26 Hen. VIII. being xj^{li}. viij^s. ij^d. per annum, over and above reprises; and Anthony Molineux doctor of divinity then warden thereof. (MS. penes eundem S. A.) It seems, that, upon the dissolution of the monastery in 30 Hen. VIII. it was translated into St. Michael's church; for there I find it in 37 Hen. VIII. and of the clear yearly value of xj^{li}. viij^s. ij^d. ob. above all reprises. (Ex alio MS. penes eundem fol. 6 a.)

"The next particular whereof I come to speak, is, the two large and beautiful churches, dedicated, the one to S. Michael, the other to the Holy Trinity; both which heretofore stood within the same cemetery with the priory church.

and the mother church of the city, yet escaped not the rude hands of the destroyers, "but was pull'd in pieces

"ST. MICHAEL'S CHURCH.

"Of this, the first mention that I find, is in King Stephen's time; for then did Ranulph earl of Chester render it to the monks of Coventry, by the name of the chapel of St. Michael, being satisfied by the testimony of divers persons, as well clergy as laity, that it was their right. Which act of this Earl Hugh his son and successor confirmed. Hereunto also did Earl Ranulph, the last of that name, give the tythe of his lands and rents in Coventry for the health of his soul, and of his ancestors souls; commanding all his officers upon pain of a grievous curse to make due payment of these accordingly. What colour of right the bishop had in the advowson thereof I find not: but it seems that a claim he made thereto; so that in 32 Hen. III. the Prior and he came to an agreement: (Fin. levat xv. Joh. B. 32 Hen. III.) whereupon the said Prior, to purchase the bishop's interest, parted with the perpetual patronage of the churches of Ruyton and Bobenhull, then settling them upon the cathedral of Lichfield, whereof since that time they had been prebends. By which Accord it was concluded, that after the diseases of each of those priests, then incumbents of the particular chapels belonging thereto, the monks should provide secular priests, and other fit ministers to serve in the said chapels, and to allow them competent maintenance. And, that to the vicarage of St. Michael should, by the bishop's official and the archdeacon, and two other discreet men on the Prior's part chosen and sworn, be assigned, out of the fruits of the said church, the value of xxiv. marks per annum. (Ex autogr. penes Dec. et Cap. Lich.)

"And moreover, that the Prior and Convent should pay, out of the fruits thereof to the archdeacon of Coventry, for his procurations, four marks. And because that the cathedral of Lichfield, had of ancient time used to have xxx. marks yearly out of the profits of this church, it was by the same agreement further concluded, that the same sum should be paid yearly thereto for the time to come, at the feasts of St. Michael and Easter, by even portions, out of the rectory of Southam, the patronage whereof belonged to the said monks. Which Accord bears date at Warwick 3 kal. Julij anno 1248, 32 Hen. III. But in 44 Hen. III. this church was appropriated to the monks; (Rot. R. Molend. penes. Regist. Cov. et Lich. episc. m. 4.) and in anno 1291, 19 Edw. I. with its chapels, valued at fifty marks; and the vicarage at eight marks and a half. (MS. in Scacc.)

"In 26 Hen. VIII. the vicarage was rated at 65*l.* 10*s.* 6*d.* per annum, out of which being then annually paid 2*l.* 15*s.* 4*d.* to the archdeacon of Coventry for procurations and synodals: to the Prior of Coventry for a yearly pension 100*s.* and to the dean and chapter of Lichfield, 33*s.* 4*d.* The clear value amounted to 56*l.* 0*s.* 10*d.*

"Merynton's Chantry.

"This was founded by Hugh de Merynton in 17 Edw. II. and consisted of two priests to sing mass daily for the health of his soul, and of Agnes his wife: as also for the souls of his ancestors and all the faithful deceased; being endowed with 8*l.* yearly rent, for that purpose: (Pat. 17 Edw. II. p. 1, m. 6.) yet in 26 Hen. VIII. the clear yearly value thereof amounted to no more than c*o.* (MS. penes S. A. eq. aur. fol. 30 b.) but upon the Survey taken in 37 Hen. VIII. (ex alio MS. penes eundem.) it was found to be worth 7*l.* 9*s.* 4*d.* per annum over and above all reprises.

"Shepey's Chantry.

"This was founded by Laurence Shepey of Coventry in 4 Edw. III. and endowed with one mesuage and two shops, for the maintenance of a priest to sing mass daily, at the altar of St. Laurence within the same church; for the soul of the said Laurence, and of the souls of his father and mother, Maud his wife, Adam Stanydelf and Alice his wife, with all the faithful deceased. Whereunto in 11 Ric. II. John Shepey, dean of Lincoln, added the gift of one more mesuage for the maintenance of two priests to sing mass at the said altar for the soul of Laurence the founder, his grandfather, Jordan Shepey, his father, as also for the good estate of him the said dean, whilst he lived, and afterwards for the health of his soul, and the souls of all the faithful deceased. (Pat. 6 Ric. II. p. 2, m. 2. Esc. 11 Ric. II. n. 99.) In 37 Hen. VIII. the value thereof, certified at 59*s.* 7*d.* per annum was allowed by the last Prior of Coventry to the curate of Sow in augmentation of his salary; in regard that the small tythes of Sow, that were all he had for his maintenance, were then worth but six pounds per annum. (MS. penes S. A. eq. aur. fol. 7 a.)

"After this, viz. in 45 Edw. III. John de Burgh, priest, William Liberd, John de Pountfreit, Ranulph Palmer, and Thomas Yelvertoft, gave two mesuages with the appurtenances here in Coventry, for the maintenance of a priest to sing mass daily at the altar of the blessed Virgin within this church, for the souls of Henry Dilcock and Margery his wife, Robert de Watton and Maud his wife; and of William de Shepey and Alice his wife. (Pat. 45 Edw. III. p. 1, m. 32.)

"Haye's Chantry.

"This was founded in 12 Rich. II. by Henry del Hay of Coventry, girdler; and endowed with three mesuages lying here in Coventry, for the maintenance of one priest to sing mass daily at the altar of All Saints within this church; for the good estate of the said King Richard II. and of Queen Anne his consort: as also of him the said Henry, during their natural lives, and afterwards for the health of their souls.

(Pat. 12 Ric. II. p. 1, m. 16.) The revenue whereof in 37 Hen. VIII. being certified at 21*s.* 7*d.* per an. over and above reprises, was by the last Prior of Coventry given to the vicar of Folkeshull in augmentation of his living, whereof the value then extended to no more than 3*l.* 18*s.* 0*d.* per annum. (MS. penes S. A. eq. aur. fol. 7 a.)

"Preston's Chantry.

"This was founded by John Preston of Coventry in the 13th Hen. IV. for two priests to sing mass daily at the altars of the Holy Trinity, and the blessed Virgin, within this church, for the good estate of him the said John during this mortal life; and afterwards for the health of his soul; as also for the souls of his parents and benefactors, and all the faithful deceased, and endowed with six mesuages and one shop, with a chamber over it, situated here in Coventry. (Pat. 13 Hen. IV. p. 2, m. 26.) All which in 26 Hen. VIII. were valued at 5*l.* 9*s.* 0*d.* per an. over and above reprises: (MS. penes præfat. S. A. fol. 30 a.) but in 37 Hen. VIII. at no more than 4*l.* 6*s.* 11*d.* per annum. (Ex alio MS. penes eund. fol. 4 a.)

"Crosse's Chantry.

"In 13 Hen. IV. John Scarburgh, Philip Baron, Laurence Coke, and Thomas Henryes gave five mesuages and 4*l.* 6*s.* 6*d.* rent per annum lying here in Coventry, to the mayor and commonalty of this city, and their successors for ever, to find a certain priest to sing mass daily, at the altar of St. Katherine, within the said church, for the good estate of the same King Henry, during this life; and for his soul after his departure hence: as also for the soul of John Crosse late merchant of Coventry, and the souls of all the faithful deceased: but when this chantry was dissolved or altered, I find not.

"Pyseford's Chantry.

"This was founded by one William Pyseford, and endowed with lands, for to find one priest to sing mass daily within this church; and to maintain six poor men and their wives, such as had been honest house-holders, and were fallen to decay within the city; viz. 7*d.* ob. a week to every couple, to pray for the souls of the said William and his parents for ever: (MS. penes præfat. S. A. fol. 4 b.) howbeit, the certain time of its foundation I have not seen; but the lands and teneaments thereunto belonging, being, by the Survey taken in 37 Hen. VIII. valued at 26*l.* 9*s.* 0*d.* per an. the priest had out of it 6*l.* yearly for his salary; the residue being for the maintenance of the before specified poor people, and discharge of other payments concerning the said lands and chantry.

"The Taylors and Shermans Chantry.

"Of this chantry's foundation I find nothing: but in the Survey of 26 Hen. VIII. it was certified to be of the clear yearly value of 2*l.* 16*s.* 6*d.* per an. over and above all reprises. (MS. penes eundem S. A. fol. 30 b.)

"Tate's Chantry,

"Hereof, all that I have met with, is onely, that there was an yearly stipend of 106*s.* 8*d.* paid to a chantry-priest, singing mass daily in this church of St. Michael, by the company of dyers of the city of London. (Ex. alio MS. penes eund. fol. 8 a.)

"Marler's Chantry.

"It doth not very clearly appear, that this chantry was in St. Michael's church: but in regard that there be circumstances which make it probable I have fix'd it so. It was founded by one Richard Marler, as his last will doth manifest; by which he assigned certain rents to be yearly received by the wardens of this city, for the time being, to find a priest to sing daily mass in a Chapel, built over the grave of him the said Richard, for the health of his soul and of all Christian souls; and to keep divine service in the quire; whose stipend was nine marks per annum. But the foundation of it is of no antiquity; for there were no more than two chantry-priests successively belonging thereto; viz. Henry Marler, and Richard Branker, which Richard was living in 37 Hen. VIII. (Ibid. fol. 6 a.)

"TRINITY CHURCH.

"Of this, the first mention I find, is of its appropriation to the priory in 44 Hen. III. (Rot. R. Molend. m. 4.) In an. 1291, 19 Edw. I. it was valued at xx. marks, and the vicarage at two marks: (MS. in Scacc.) but in 26 Hen. VIII. the said vicarage was rated at 33*l.* 1*s.* 6*d.* ob. per an. out of which issued a pension of c*o.* to the prior; xvj*s.* in procurations and synodals; and to the church-wardens, for a quit-rent, yearly, for the vicarage-house xx*s.* so that the clear yearly value, deducting the reprises, amounted to 26*l.* 5*s.* 6*d.*

"Percye's Chantry.

"This being the antientest chantry of any that were founded in Trinity-church, was endowed in 23d Edw. III. by Nich. Percy, John and reduced to rubbish."^a The letter which was fruitlessly addressed by Bishop Lee to Lord Cromwell, with a view to its preservation, will be found in the Appendix of Instruments.^b de Fylingley, and Henry Mollyng, with six mesuages, one shop, six acres of land, and 40s. rent, lying in Coventry, for the maintenance of one priest to sing mass daily at the altar of All Saints, for the good estate of the said Nicholas and Beatrice his wife; and of John Percy, priest, whilst they should live in this world; and for their souls after their departure hence: as also for the souls of John Percy and Peter Percy; and of the father and mother of the said Nicholas, with all the faithful deceased. (Pat. 23 Edw. III. p. 1, m. 1.) But afterwards there was another priest added thereto; towards whose maintenance in 9th Hen. IV. William Botoner, John Egeston the elder, and John Drye of Coventry, priest, gave one mesuage and twenty-four acres of land lying in this city. (Pat. 9 Hen. IV. p. 1, m. 29.) The value of all which was in 26 Hen. VIII. certified to be 10*l.* 10*s.* per annum, over and above reprises: (MS. penès præfat. S. A. fol. 31 b.) but upon the Survey taken in 37 Hen. VIII. 11*l.* 19*s.* 8*d.* (Ex alio MS. penès eund. fol. 5 b.)

"The Chantry of the Holy Cross.

"This was founded in 30 Edw. III. by William de Davyntre, Henry Molling, Rob. le Spenser, Gilb. de Peek, Ric. de Fillyngley, John Luk, Ric. de Godesvowes, Ric. de Northampton, Geoffrey de Peek, John le Baxtere, Henry de Whitemore, Adam de Keresleye, and Ric. Teynton of Coventry, for two priests to sing mass daily at the altar of the Holy Cross, in this church, for the good estate of King Edw. the Third, and of Isabel queen of England his mother; Queen Philippa his consort, and of all their children. As also for the good estate of the said William, Henry, and the rest aforementioned: and likewise of all the brethren and sisters of the fraternity of the Holy Cross of Coventry, whilst they lived, and for their souls after their decease: and for the souls of all the said king's progenitors; and of the ancestors of the said William de Davyntre, &c. For the maintenance of which two priests, they gave seven mesuages, fourteen shops, and six acres of land, lying in this city. (Pat. 30 III. p. 1, m. 6.)

"Lodyngton's Chantry.

"This was founded in 16 Ric. II. by William Haynton and John Bromcote, priests; for one priest to sing mass in this church, for the good estate of Alice the widow of Roger de Lodyngton, and for hersoul after her departure out of this world; and for the soul of the said Roger de Lodyngton, his father and mother, and of all the faithful deceased. (Pat. 16 Ric. II. p. 1, m. 4.) The clear revenue whereof in 37 Hen. VIII. being certified at 2*l.* 0*s.* 3*d.* per an. was allowed to the vicar of Ex-hall, in augmentation of his living; the small tythes belonging thereto extending to no more than 3*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* per ann.

"Corpus Christi Chantry.

"All that I find of this chantry, is, that the prior of Coventry presented three priests unto it successively in Edw. III. time: but when it was founded, by whom, or how dissolved I cannot say. (North. fol. 40 a, et 48 a. Et. Stret. fol. 11 a.)

"Allesley's Chantry.

"This was founded by one Will. de Allesley in Edw. I. time; for one priest to sing mass, daily, at the altar of St. Thomas the Martyr, in a chapel near adjoining to the church-porch: (MS. penès præfat. S. A. fol. 5 b.) the clear yearly value of all the rents belonging thereto, over and above reprises, being in 26 Hen. VIII. certified at 4*l.* 17*s.* (Ex alio MS. penès eund. fol. 31 a.) but in 37 Hen. VIII. at 4*l.* 8*s.* 6*d.* (Ex alio MS. penès eund. fol. 31 a.)

"Cellet's-Chantry.

"This was founded by one William Cellet in Edw. III. time, for one priest to sing mass daily for the soul of the said William and his parents: (Ib. fol. 7 b.) but I find no more than one only priest presented to it by the prior of Coventry; scil. 4 cal. Oct. 1356. (Northb. fol. 60 a.) And, that in 37 Hen. VIII. the clear yearly value thereof being certified at 3*l.* 0*s.* 4*d.* ob. per an. was allowed by the last prior of Coventry to the vicar of Stoke, in augmentation of his living, then worth but 40*s.* per an.

"The dissolution of all which CHANTRIES was by Act of Parliament in 1 Edw. VI. as the printed statutes do manifest."

Altars.

The altar of Holy Rood, or "Sanctæ Crucis," occurs in numerous items of expenditure by the Trinity gild, who seem to have supported it.

St. Katherine's occurs in a charter of Walter de Coventry in Mr. Sharp's larger Register, foll. 23 b, 24, as well as in another instrument from Ranulph earl of Chester and Lincoln. Ibid. fol. 24 b.

The altar of the Virgin Mary occurs in an accompt of payments in the 5th of Richard II. with a lamp burning night and day before it. Ibid. fol. 77.

clude it to have been very like the cathedral of Lichfield, tho' more sumptuously adorn'd; Dugdale telling us, that it was so enrich'd with silver and gold and precious stones, that the walls were too narrow to contain the treasure. Also by several circumstances of the emulation between the two churches, I am induc'd to imagine, that Lichfield was built in imitation of the model of this of Coventry; forasmuch as it had formerly three steeples, as Lichfield has at present, viz. one in the middle, and two at the west end. As we may judge from tradition, and the small remains extant of this heretofore flourishing monastery, which when in being stood in a close, call'd from the ruins, Hill close, on a descent between the church-yards of the Holy Trinity, and St. Michael's. At the entrance into this close, towards the west end, there was a large arch, which led to it out of the Oat-market; this lately fell down. Not far from hence is still standing the lower part of a great tower, or steeple, which heretofore was one of the steeples of the western front, 'tis now converted into a dwelling-house. On the south side next to the two churchyards, stood a lesser tower, demolish'd about twenty years since, probably made use of for a prison. As to the church itself, all I can learn, is, that the foundations being about fifty years ago taken up, the site thereof was then turn'd into a bowling-alley, and afterwards into a garden, as 'tis at present, and that, in digging them up, abundance of carv'd and gilded stones were found. The place where the chief habitation of the monks was, is likewise turn'd into gardens, and in a great measure levell'd, insomuch that several apartments are suppos'd to be bury'd under ground, as appears by the door-cases, yet visible at the end of the buildings next the river.

"Here is still standing a mean house, known by the name of the Bishop's palace, where 'tis suppos'd the bishops formerly had an habitation, and that they continu'd possess'd thereof ever since this monastery was annex'd to their see, which was effected about the year 1095, by Robert de Limesey the 35th bishop of Lichfield."^a

One small fragment only of the priory of St. Mary Coventry is still remaining; worked into a dwelling. The accompanying Wood-cut, representing it, has been copied from a private Plate, recently engraved.

ANNO Domini MCXC. Rege Ricardo in transmarinis demorante, Willielmus Heliensis episcopus, regni procurator, ac apostolicæ sedis, mediante pecunia, in Anglia legatus, clerum oppressit, plebem depressit, cum mille equis procedebat, monasteria contributionibus et hospitalitatibus gravabat, regni majores sibi affines faciebat, utramque sedem metropolitanam ad libitum suum prosternebat, appulsumque Galfridum regis fratrem Eborum electum, direptis rebus de monasterio sancti Martini extrahi, et turri regia trudi fecerat, apud Westmonasterium concilium celebravit, ubi complexus suus Hugo Novant episcopus Cestriæ querelam deposuit quod monachi Coventriæ sanguinem suum coram altari fudissent, unde decrevit Willielmus monachos de Coventre eliminandos fore, et clericos præbendarios instituendos, unde Hugo prædictus ad sedem apostolicam direxit responsales cum literis episcoporum attestantibus quod monachi de Coventre deserta Christi militia ad seculum essent relapsi; unde petiit liberam de ordinatione monasterii facultatem: antea enim monachos manu armata tanquam criminum enormium reos expulerat. Romanus verò pontifex sub cauta expectatione, si fortè aliquis ex parte monachorum adveniens in contrarium allegaret, per menses sex sententiam suspendit: sed sumptus inopia monachos retardans votum episcopi confirmavit. Monachi tandem vel serò venientes licet violenter expulsionis injuriam diutius deplorarent, prævalente tamen episcopi potentia, per annos plurimos latè dispersi monachi, rebus eorum ad clericorum præbendas redactis, prout poterant vicitabant. Quamobrem de isto Hugone in extremis laborante tradit fama; quod cum neminem sibi penitentiam imponere volentem reperisset, dixisse fertur, ‘Et ego adjudico me pro male erratis meis pœna purgatoria usque ad diem judicii cruciandum:’ sed et de quodam Coventriæ monacho tradunt, quod causam domus suæ instanter sed infructuose diutius in curia Romana agitabat, quod eum ad fores papales jugiter incumbentem papa egrediens sic alloqueretur: ‘Cur miser fores nostras sic indesinenter observas?’ ‘Pater,’ inquit, ‘expecto mortem vestram, nam te defuncto, bonus forsân succederet qui nobis obtritis justitiam exhiberet.’ In hoc verbo compunctus Pontifex, qui inde exulcerari putabatur, causam jussit ad plenum agitari.*

ANNO MCXXXij. post Pentecosten dedit rex episcopatum Elien. Nigello, &c. Cestrensem verò Rogero archidiacono Lincolniensi nepoti Gaufridi de Glintonia, decessor ejus fuerat Robertus cogn. Peccatum. Prædecessor verò Robertus Normannus de Limeseia. Hic secularibus intentus magis quàm divinis à rege Henrico Coventrense cœnobium optinuit, ibique capitalem cathedram Merciorum constituit. CÆLESTINUS episcopus, servus servorum, &c. dilectis filiis archiepiscopo Cantuariensi, episcopo Lincolniensi, et abbati de Sancto Edmundo, salutem et apostolicam benedictionem. Sicut ea quæ à prædecessoribus nostris provida fuerint deliberatione statuta, nullatenus irritari volumus vel infringi; sic quæ per surreptionem ab eis obtenta sunt, in honestatis ecclesiasticæ detrimentum, corrigi volumus, et in statum redigi meliorem. Et dicit quod ipse et omnes prædecessores sui a tempore quo non extat memoria extiterunt in seisinâ de prædicto visu et weif. Et super seisinam quam idem prior et prædecessores sui habuerunt dominus Henricus rex pater domini Ricardi regis per cartam suam concessit ecclesiæ beatæ Mariæ de Coventrea quam profert et quæ testatur quod idem rex concessit priori de Coventr. et monachis ibidem Deo servientibus omnes terras et tenuras suas cum soka, saka, tol, et theam, infangenthef, hampsokne, forestal, blodewite, fithwite, wardwite, et mundbriþe, et quod ipsi et omnes terræ suæ et omnia maneria sua cum pertinentiis, et firmarii et alii homines sui præter illos qui tenent de eis per servitium militare plusquam feodum dimidii militis sint quieti in perpetuum de murdro, latrocinio, sectis shiræ et hundred. et de auxilio vicecomitis et de visu franci plegii. [Placita cor. Rege Hillar. an. 14 R. II. rot. 50, Warw.]

In placito inter regem et priorem ecclesiæ de Coventre de annua pensione uni clericorum regis, ratione novæ creationis ejusdem prioris, quousque, &c. Prior venit et defendit vim et injuriam, et quicquid est in contemptu domini regis, &c. non cognovit, ecclesiam suam beatæ Mariæ de Coventre fore ecclesiam cathedralem, nec ipsum priorem tenere aliquid de domino rege per baroniam, prout pro domino rege, in narratione sua, proponitur. Et dicit quod tenet prioratum prædictum ex fundatione cujusdam Leofrici quondam comitis Cestriæ, qui prioratum prædictum fundavit tempore sancti Edwardi, dudum regis Angliæ

Ibidem recitatur charta ejusdem regis Edwardi, quas donationes et concessiones diversi alii reges confirmaverunt, et dicit quod postea, per processum temporis, nomen abbatiæ prædictæ divertebatur in nomen prioratus, eo quod Leofwinus adtunc abbas ibidem creatus fuit in episcopum Cestriæ, et ordinavit per assensum monachorum ibidem, quod abbatiæ prædictæ extunc foret prioratus; et quod superiores ejusdem ecclesiæ forent priores successivè in perpetuum, et dicit quod de ipso Leofrico, quia obiit sine hærede de corpore suo descendente, advocatio ecclesiæ prædictæ, tempore Will. Conquest. Angliæ, cuidam Hugoni comiti Cestriæ, ut consanguineo, et hæredi ipsius Leofrici, viz. filio Erminildæ, sororis ejusdem Leofrici, et de ipso Hugone cuidam Richardo ut filio et hæredi, et de ipso Richardo cuidam Ranulpho ut consanguineo et hæredi, viz. filio Matildis, sororis prædicti Hugonis, et de ipso Ranulpho cuidam Ranulpho ut filio et hæredi, et de ipso Ranulpho filio Ranulphi, quia obiit sine hærede de corpore suo descendente advocatio prædicta simul cum comitatu Cestre et Huntingdone, et aliis diversis castris, maneriis, terris, et tenementis cum pertinentiis in Anglia et Wallia, quibusdam Matildæ, Mabilliæ, Cecilie, et Margeriæ, ut sororibus et hæredibus prædicti Ranulphi, inter quas proprietia facta fuit, de prædictis comitatibus, advocationibus, et castris, maneriis, terris et tenementis, cum pertinentiis supradictis. Et prædicta advocatio simul cum toto prædicto comitatu Cestriæ, cum pertinentiis, allocata fuit prædictæ Matildæ, pro parte sua, in allocationem diversorum aliorum castrorum, maneriorum, terrarum et tenementorum, cum pertinentiis, prædictis Mabilæ, Cecilie, Margeriæ, seperatim allocatorum, et de ipsa Matilda descendebant prædicta advocatio simul cum prædicto comitatu Cestriæ, cum pertinentiis post proprietiam prædictam, cuidam Johanni Scott, ut filio et hæredi prædictæ Matildæ; qui quidem Johannes Scott advocationem prædictam simul cum prædicto comitatu Cestriæ, cum pertinentiis, dedit Henrico quondam regi Angliæ, filio regis Johannis, et hæredibus suis imperpetuum, &c. Prædictus prior sine die.

NORTHAMPTONSHIRE.

T. Pega, the sister to St. Guthlac of Croyland, upon her brother's death, is said to have fixed her residence in a cell about four miles from his oratory, upon a spot of ground in Northamptonshire, which, from her, afterwards received the name of Peykirk, Peges-kyrke, or Pegeland. She retired here, according to Bishop Tanner, about the year 714; according to other authorities, somewhat later. After a continuance of two years and a quarter, she went to Rome, where she is stated to have died about the year 719.^a

The Cell, thus founded, after a time improved into a Monastery. Camden says, it was for Women;^b but the historical notices of it which have reached us, of an old date, uniformly speak of Monks.

The only charter of endowment to this monastery now extant, is one preserved in the Register of Peterborough called Swapham; copied by Bishop Patrick in the Appendix to Gunton's History. It is from King Edmund Atheling, but from which sovereign of this name does not appear.

In this charter, the church is called the new monastery of the Holy Trinity, the Mother of our Lord, and All Saints. The land bestowed was for the redemption of the soul of King Edmund, his wife's soul, and that of Siwerth, who had previously been the owner of the property, which is called "exiguum munus ruricolæ," a small estate, consisting of a manse and a half at Peykirk, and three perches in the vill of Walton. The estate to be held free of all services except those of the "trinoda necessitas."^c

Ingulphus informs us, that in 871, after the country had been depopulated by the Danes, Beorred king of the Mercians seized into his own hands, together with the lands of other religious houses in this quarter, those of which the monastery at Peykirk was possessed; retaining some himself, and bestowing others on the soldiers of his army.^d

For a considerable length of time, no further mention is made of Peykirk: that the monastery, however, flourished, cannot be doubted, since, in 1013, the manors of Glin-

ton, Northumburch, Makesey, Cotton, Badyngton, and Bernak, belonging to it, were laid waste by the Danes under Swein: BALDOC, the abbat, with his monks, escaping in the night, by water, to Croyland.^e

Upon Canute's accession, in 1017, the abbat and monks are related to have returned: but so struck was abbat Baldoc with concern at the devastation which he saw, that he died within a few days of grief.^f

His successor, as abbat, was WLGATUS.

In 1048, in the reign of Hardicnut, after a long and vexatious contest, the site of the monastery of Peykirk was adjudged to belong to the abbey of Burgh; when Wlgatus began to lay the foundation of a new convent in his manor of Northamburg, or Northbure, near the river Welland: where he not only began a church, but also such monastic buildings as were requisite for the reception of his monks.^g

The Monastery of Peykirk, however, no longer existing, the descendants of those who had bestowed lands upon it both claimed and recovered the different estates. Fernot, a knight, and lord of Bosworthe, claimed Northbure; Edmer, lord of Holbrok, claimed Makesey; Siward, earl of Northumberland, claimed Bernak; Hugolin, the king's treasurer, Helpston; and others claimed other manors. The king's justiciaries confirming the different claims, Wlgatus, with eighteen monks, were not only ejected from their first monastery, but left to wander about without certain support, till King Edward the Confessor, taking them under his protection, gave them shelter in his palace; and, till he could provide for them, allowed them the use of his chapel.

Soon after this, the death of Brichtmer abbat of Croyland being announced to the king, the pastoral staff of that abbey was conferred, by way of investiture, upon Wlgatus, who retired thither with the remnant of his monks.^h

Whether the decision with respect to the site of Peykirk was just or unjust, it is impossible at this period to decide. The abbats of Peterborough were certainly very jealous of any contest relating to it, even in the time of Edward the First, as will appear by the following quotation among Bishop Kennett's Collections from the White Book of Peterborough:ⁱ "Memorandum, quod die Lunæ in vigilia S. Petri ad vincula anno regni Regis Edwardi xxix. et anno domini G. abbatis secundo dominus Griffinus rector

^a An account of St. Pega will be found in the Acta Sanctorum of the Bollandists, Month of January, tom. i. p. 532. See also the Appendix of Instrum. to the present Account, Num. I. Ordericus Vitalis, lib. iv. makes the following mention of her:

"Tunc temporis [i. e. sub S. Edwardo Confessore] Pegelandæ cœnobium erat, cui nobilis vir Wlfeatus abbas præerat. Illic enim S. Pega soror S. Guthlaci diu Domino militaverat. Quæ postquam venerandus frater defunctus est, austeriori labore vitam suam pro amore Christi examinare satis conata est. Unde Romam adiit, sanctorum apostolorum limina supplex pro se suisque requisivit, ibique vi. idus Januarii gloriôsè vitam finivit. In ecclesiâ, quæ ibidem in honore ejus à fidelibus condita est, tumultata quiescit, multisque virtutibus his, qui fideliter eam deprecant, piè succurrens veneranda nitescit."

St. Pega's church at Rome, however, or even where it stood, is now unknown.

In Domesday Book there is no mention of Peykirk. It was probably comprehended at that time in the account of Glinton, now a hamlet to it, and distant from it but a short mile.

On the erection of the bishoprick of Peterborough, Peykirk manor, which had continued with the monastery till it was dissolved, was given, in the 33d of Henry VIII., to the dean and chapter, who continue lords of it.^b

Cujus prædestinatione idcirco ego Edmundus Atheling rex pro amore Redemptoris nostri et propter nomen sanctum ejus qui dixit ‘date et dabitur vobis,’ ideoque nunc donabo Deo omnipotenti exiguum munus ruricolæ in loco qui ab incolis vocitatur apud Pegcyrcan in perpetua hæreditate ad locum qui dicitur Novum Monasterium Sanctæ Trinitatis ac Genetricis Domini nostri atque omnium sanctorum pro redemptione animæ meæ et conjugis meæ et pro anima Siuerthi. Ita habeant sicut Siuerthus habebat in vita, in longitudine et in latitudine, in magnis et in modicis rebus, campis, pascuis, pratis, silvis, theloneum aquarum, piscationem in paludibus. Sit autem prædictum rus liberum ab omni servili tributo sæculariumque servitiumque

Quisquis autem benevola mente hanc nostram donationem et eleemosinam amplificare satagerit, in hoc præsentis sæculo vitæ illius prospera felicitas augeatur, et æternæ vitæ gaudia æterna succedant. Si quis igitur diabolica illectus pravitate et hoc donum in aliud quam quod constituimus pervertere molitus fuerit, maneat æternaliter retrusus inter flammivomas æstuantis gehennæ incorruptiones lugubræ sibi solum vendicans inter tres nefandissimos proditores, Christi, Judam, Annam, et Caiphan. ANNO Domini M. XLVIII. — Illo in tempore (ut aliquando antea est prædictum) venerabilis pater dominus Wlgatus abbas Pegelandiæ diutissimam calumniam passus ab abbatibus Burgi, Elfino,^b Arwino, et Leofrico, abbatibus suæ sedem amittens, tandem succubuit, et (proh nefas) totum situm monasterii sui iudicio regalis curiæ perdidit. Tantum tunc potuit super justitiam pecunia, contra veritatem versutia, et in curia regis Hardecnuti, comitis Godwini potentia. Cumque prædictus abbas Wlgatus amisso situ monasterii sui, juxta proximi fluvii crepidinem, Weland nomine, in suo manerio magis vicino de Northamburgt fundamenta novi monasterii jecisset, et illuc abbatiam suam transferre disponderet, ecclesiamque ac dormitorium cum cæteris claustralibus officinis, adjutus multorum fidelium elemosynis, reedificare non segniter insudaret; Fernotus miles, et dominus de Bosworthe, in dicto manerio de Northburt calumniam posuit, et dictum manerium de Northburt datum fuisse de progenitoribus ejus monasterio sanctæ Pegæ, et monachis ibidem Deo servantibus, ex abbatis propriis chirographis patenter ostendit: unde consequenter allegavit, quod cum Deo et sanctæ Pegæ abbas Wlgatus et monachi sui à modo ibidem non servirent, dictum manerium à modo non haberent. Acceptatum est hoc a regis justiciario, et confestim adjudicatum est dictum manerium de Northburgh cum omnibus suis pertinentiis, prædicto militi Fernoto, et tanquam jus suum hæreditarium, de monachis ecclesiæ sanctæ Pegæ alienatum perpetuo et sublatum. Quod cum per universum regnum citius fuit cognitum, sc. Abbatem de Peykirk prius amisso monasterio suo, et consequenter manerio ad monasterium quondam pertinente:^c similiter Edmerus miles et dominus de Holbrok calumniam movit contra eundem abbatem et monachos suos de manerio suo de Makesey; et Horsyngus de Wathe calumniatus est, et pro manerio suo de Badyngton; et Siwardus comes de manerio suo de Bernak; et Hugolinus thesaurarius de manerio de Helpieston;^d et alii plures de aliis maneriis dicto monasterio dudum pertinentibus; et omnes eadem eatione in dicta causa contra monachos obtinuerunt; et tam de maneriis, quam de monasterio suo dictus abbas de Peykyrke et monachi sui nequiter ac crudeliter ejecti sunt: ut nunquam alicui veniat damnum solum. Cum itaque abbas Wlgatus et conventus suus, monachi scilicet XVIII. sic de monasterio destituti vagabundi et in proximo dispergendi in omnem ventum pro extrema miseria fluctuarent: misertus eorum piissimus rex Edwardus omnes in suam curiam suscepit, et usquequo pro eis provideret, suam capellam, ac aulam quotidie frequentare imperavit.

Vix egressus erat sermo ex ore Regis, et ecce, nuntiatur in aula ejus obitus Brichtmeri abbatis monasterii Croylandensis; cujus pastoralis baculus per Priorem monasterii ac duos alios fratres eum concomitantes, regi extitit præsentatus. — Recipiens ergo piissimus rex Edwardus baculum pastorem monasterii Croyland, in præsentia domini Gerardi prioris Croylandiæ, duorumque commonachorum suorum, qui cum ipso ad curiam venerant, et cæterorum monachorum Pegelandensium, quos sicut olim suos compatriotas et carissimos convicinos, monachi Croylandenses optime noverant, prædictum venerabilem patrem dominum Wlgatum abbatem de pastoralis regimine Croylandensis monasterii per ejus pastorem baculum investivit, et super hoc literam suam Croylandensi conventui direxit in his verbis:

Edwardus rex Anglorum subpriori et sancto conventui monasterii Croylandensis salutem. Misertus domini Wlgati quondam abbatis Pegelandiæ, qui non suo crimine, sed juris dictamine suum monasterium perdidit; misertus etiam vestri, qui non vestra violentia, sed mortis violentia vestrum patrem nuper perdidit; ambos una antidoto sanare contendendo, scilicet prædictum patrem Wlgatum vobis in prælatum præficiendo. Vos ergo sicut sancti viri benefacietis, si prædictum patrem vestrum, et pastorem, tot tribulationibus exercitatum et probatum, obedienter susceperitis, et commonachos suos, confratres vestros, secum ad vos committentes, si fraternæ caritatis amore benigne tractaveritis, ut simul ad cælum post præsentis vitæ cursum contendere valeatis, et ad sanctum chorum vestrorum patronorum, qui fratres fuerunt, pervenire possitis. Valete, orantes pro me, et pro toto regno meo Deum deprecamini die ac nocte.

Benedictine Priory of Spalding,

IN

LINCOLNSHIRE.

THOROLD, sheriff of Lincolnshire, also called Thorold of Bukenhale, the brother to the countess Godiva, according to the Annals of Peterborough, founded a cell at Spalding, in 1052, for a prior and five monks, whom, with the assistance of abbat Wlgatus, he selected from Croyland, leaving them still subject to that monastery as their parent abbey.^a The chief endowment of this cell, then dedicated to St. Mary,^b appears to have been the manor of Spalding; beside which it had tithes in Tetenay, Alkeburg, Beltisford, and Scamelisby.^c

Lucia countess of Chester, the niece, and heiress to the property of Thorold de Bukenhale, married Yvo Tailboys earl of Anjou, the nephew of King William the Conqueror, who thus becoming the superior lord of Spalding and Holand, according to Tanner, about the year 1074, gave what had belonged to Croyland abbey, the Cell as it should seem having been previously abandoned,^d to the abbey of St. Nicholas of Angiers, the chief monastery of his Norman earldom. The charter of licence for this purpose from King William the Conqueror will be found in the Appendix of Instruments, together with the substance of a charter from Yvo Tailboys, dated in 1085, granting the church of Spalding, with a carucate of land: three monks of the monastery of St. Nicholas of Angiers being bound to officiate at Spalding constantly, and the number of monks to be subsequently augmented in proportion to the increase which might take place in the revenues of the Cell.^e

A second charter from Yvo Tailboys to the abbat and convent of Angiers grants the tithes of toll, salt, sea-fish, and the aqueduct and fishery of Westlade, in further augmentation of the monks' support: and Hugh de Braybeof, one of the witnesses, is also stated to have given to the monks of Spalding the tithe of Claquesby.^f

^a Thorold of Bukenhale's charter of foundation has been already printed in the Appendix to the Account of Croyland Abbey, vol. ii. p. 119, Num. XVIII. Ingulphus gives the particulars of the foundation as follows:

"Tunc inter familiares nostri monasterii, et benevolos amicos, erat præcipuus consiliarius quidam vicecomes Lincolnæ, dictus Thoroldus, quem multi adhuc superstites et regulares et sæculares viderunt et noverunt, de genere et cognatione illius vicedomini Thoroldi, qui quondam nostro cœnobio amicissimus dedit nobis manerium suum de Bokenhale cum omnibus pertinentiis ejus. Sic iste Thoroldus ductus super domum nostram dignissima pietate, in relevationem nostri monasterii et exonerationem, ad sustentationem sex monachorum, scilicet unius Prioris et quinque confratrum, competentisque familiæ satis, ut æstimabat, sufficientem, totum manerium suum de Spaldyng cum redditibus pertinentibus, et servitiis suis universis in perpetuam eleemosynam concessit, et inde chirographum suum fecit. Transmissisque sex monachis de monasterio nostro cum dicto Thoroldo, refectorium multum relevatum est. Ipse autem instituit ardentem de dicto manerio suam familiam amovere, deinde capellam suam honestiorem facere, et suam aulam in refectorium, cameramque in dormitorium, et in claustrum monachorum suum deambulatorium immutare. Insuper, jumenta manerii agriculturæ apta, aliaque coquinæ, brachini, et pistrini vasa talibus officiis necessaria, ac utensilia monachis contulit universa."

Hist. Ingulphi, edit. Gale, p. 65.

^b It is sometimes spoken of as dedicated to St. Mary, and sometimes to St. Nicholas. A charter of Henry II. (MS. Cole, vol. xliii. p. 223) calls the church "Ecclesia Sanctæ Mariæ et Sancti Nicolai de Spalding."

^d Ingulphus, speaking of the injuries sustained from Yvo Tailboys by the monastery of Croyland, says,

"Contra vero monasterium nostrum, ac omnes Croylandenses diabolico instinctu tanto furore efferatus est, ut varia Croylandensium animalia in mariscis cum canibus suis insectans, longius effugaret, lacubus immergeret, nonnulla caudis, auribus mutilaret, et crebro spinis ac tibiis jumentorum contractis, penitus inutilia redderet. Dominum etiam Ulketulum prædecessorem meum tunc abbatem pro viribus destrueret jugiter incursans, et injurians deterreret, ac demum accusans deponeret, et depositum claustrum Glastoniæ, ne aliquo solatio frueretur suæ patriæ, procul et impiissime deputeret."—"In cellam quippe nostram, fratresque nostros, suos convicaneos, Priorem, et commonachos in ejus januis commorantes, et tota die in ejus facie conversantes, tanta tyrannide debacchatur, ut jumentis eorum, tam bobus, quam equis multoties mutilatis, ovibus ac avibus quotidie imparcatis, porcis et porcellis innumeris percussis, perditis, et necatis etiam frequentissime, famuli Prioris in curia Comitum exactionibus importabilibus opprimerentur, gladiis et fustibus in compitis sæpius caderentur, ac aliquoties occiderentur. Hinc PRIOR, et monachus post preces, et zenia, post innumera suis ministris donaria, post peracta omnia, quæ pati putabant necessaria, cum nihil valeret eorum industria, sed semper incresceret tyranni nequitia, et ministrorum suorum ferens malitia; assumptis secum sacris calicibus, libris, ac suis lectisterniis, RELICTA CELLA IN MANU DOMINI, excutientes pulverem pedum suorum in filios ignis æterni, AD SUUM MONASTERIUM CROYLANDIAM revertuntur. Transmittentes ergo quotidie deinceps ad capellam ligneam SANCTÆ MARIE unum monachum de Croylandia, qui divina ibidem populo celebraret; laborem immensum et supra vires tædium arbitantes tam abbas Wulketulus, quam totus suus conventus, alternis diebus monachum denuo transmittendum communi consilio decreverunt. Ubi hoc aliquandiu agebatur, (prout apud omnes compatriotas nimis est cognitum et notorium) in festo sanctæ Lucie virginis summo mane exorta maxima tempestate, similiter et ledone in naviculam irruente, transmissus monachus dominus Manerius, venerabilis senex, et valde religiosus, apud Wodelode est submersus. Tanto namque infortunio turbati, et terri nimum omnes monachi monasterii Croylandie, DEINCEPS QUENQUAM TRANSMITTERE LONGO TEMPORE CESSAVERUNT. Yvo vero comes gaudens, quod Dominus etiam secum quasi videretur contra nostrum monasterium dimicare, Andegaviam mittit ad dominum Natalem abbatem sancti Nicolai, exorans, quatenus monachos dirigat; et cellam honestam ac sufficientem pro uno priore, et quinque monachis in sua villa de Spaldyng paratam et ædificatam, etiam terris et tenementis satis ditatam, spondet et promittit. Veniunt itaque Andegavenses monachi, et cellam nostram occupant, alienique coram nobis terras nostras devorant. Et domino Wulketulo abbate super hoc in curia regis calumniam movente, omnes Normanni mutuo fœderati, prædas et pressuras, cædes et cæteras injurias universas Yvonis Talbois contra Croylandenses justificant, et acceptant; et velut in corpore Behemoth squama squamæ conjuncta fuisset, veritatis omne spiraculum refutant."

Ingulphus, at the time he obtained from King William the Conqueror the confirmation of the liberties and privileges of Croyland abbey, attempted to recover the cell of Spalding, but without success.^a

The Countess Lucia, subsequent to the death of Ralph earl of Chester, her third and last husband, that is, after the year 1129, granted a fresh confirmation of the manor and liberties of Spalding to the monks of Angiers.^b

King John granted a charter in the first year of his reign, addressed jointly to the abbat of Angiers and the prior and convent of Spalding, confirming not only the possessions held by the cell in Lincolnshire, but generally all those, in Cheshire and elsewhere, the property of Angiers abbey.^c

Of the royal Grants and Confirmations preserved in the principal Register of Spalding, as relating to the subordinate priory alone, the following deserve particular notice, previous to the reign of Henry III.: a charter of William Rufus, "ut homines de Spalding juste reddant monachis de Spalding firmam suam et censum:"^d a charter of Henry the First, protecting the monks of Spalding in their fen property from the encroachments of the abbat of Croyland:^e one of Stephen, "quod prior et conventus sint quieti de theloneo et passagio:"^f and a renewed confirmation of general possessions, the original grant of which was made in 1189, but which has this remarkable termination; "Hujus erat tenor Cartæ nostræ in primo sigillo nostro, quodque aliquando perditum fuit, et dum capti fuimus in Almannia in aliena potestate constituti mutatum est; innovationis autem hujus hii sunt testes, Sampson abbas sancti Edmundi, &c. Dat. per manum Eliensis episcopi Eustachii cancellarii nostri apud Chaangn. xxiii. die Januarii anno regni nostri decimo."^g There is also a charter of King John, "de libertatibus forestæ."^h

The first charter of considerable extent confirmatory of other charters in the way of Inspecimus is that of 1269, 54 Hen. III., which recites no fewer than eight distinct grants; enumerating among the benefactors to the monastery Gilbert de Gaunt son of Gilbert earl of Lincoln, Baldwine de Wake, Adam de Hakebech, knight, Ralph de St. Laud, Geoffrey de Surflet, Geoffrey de Button, Alexander de St. Botolph, and John de Brencurt.ⁱ

The same king had previously granted to the monks free warren in Spalding, Pinchbek, Weston, and Multon, in the twentieth year of his reign, A. D. 1235; and a market at Spalding on Fridays, in the 26th of his reign, A. D. 1241.^k

The next charter of Inspecimus obtained by the prior and convent of Spalding was in the fourth of Edward the Third, A. D. 1330, in which no fewer than twenty-three Instruments are recited: the last of which is a charter from Henry de Lacy earl of Lincoln, "facta priori et conventui de Spalding pro custodia prioratus tempore vacationis," dated at Pontefract, July 17th, 1310, 3 Edw. II.^l

The Patent Roll of the 5th Edw. III. contains a royal charter to the prior and convent, of considerable length,

"de diversis possessionibus:"^m and in the 7th of that king a licence was obtained for fortifying and embattelling the monastery.ⁿ

Although the licences granted for the acquisition of territory to this monastery subsequent to the passing of the statute of Mortmain were many, the lands and tenements so acquired were neither extensive nor important. By a charter dated August 8th, 6th Edw. III., the prior and convent were allowed to add to their possessions lands to the value of twenty pounds a year:^o and in the 13th of Edw. III. they obtained twenty acres of land in Weston:^p but these were among the largest of such acquisitions: the greater part consisting of messuages, tenements, or parcels of land, for the most part adjoining the domain of the monastery, but small and insignificant.^q

In the 14th of Henry the Sixth another charter of confirmation was obtained, which, beside confirming the different possessions and liberties, recited the perambulation of bounds in regard to the property of the priory in the parts of Holland and Kesteven:^r two other charters of confirmation, of an ample kind, were also obtained in the first and second years of King Edward the Fourth.^s

Of papal bulls relating to the priory of Spalding, that of confirmation from Pope Alexander the Third in 1177 will be found in the Appendix of Instruments;^t with one from Pope Gregory the Ninth, in 1232, respecting the practice of the noviciates of Spalding going to Angiers to make their profession.^u Another bull of general confirmation of the possessions of Spalding was granted by Honorius the Fourth in 1287.^x A few other papal instruments occur, but chiefly relating to churches in the patronage of the monastery.^y From the time of the first union of Spalding with the abbey of Angiers to the middle of the thirteenth century, the abbats of that monastery appear to have had the complete rule of Spalding, nominating or removing the priors of the cell at their pleasure. Those who were recalled usually collected all they could from the goods of the priory, carried their gains abroad, and left the revenues of the house in a state of almost constant dilapidation. To remedy this defect, a Composition was entered into in 1232, in the time of prior Simon, between Hugh bishop of Lincoln and the Prior and convent of Spalding on the one part, and Ralph, earl of Chester and Lincoln and the Abbat and convent of Angiers on the other; when it was agreed that the priors should be no longer dative, but perpetual; that they should be elected by the convent of Spalding, and admitted and instituted by the bishop of Lincoln. In matters relating to the rule of the order, the priory to be still subject to the abbey of Angiers; but the abbat to have the presentation of four monks to the priory of Spalding.^z

Constantius, at that time abbat of Angiers, in the first instance became discontented with the composition which he had himself entered into. But the chief opposition to it was made by abbat James, his successor. After a struggle in the Papal Court which lasted many years, abbat James became a party to a second Composition, which was confirmed by Pope Innocent IV. in 1243. In this Deed the chief points of agreement named in the former composition were recognized and more fully explained; and partly in consequence of expences incurred in the suit, and partly to relieve the charges of the abbat in coming over to his visitations, it was determined that an annual pension of sixty marks, or forty pounds, should be paid to him by the prior and convent.^a

It may not be irrelevant to remark here that the alien priories of England were anciently of two kinds. One consisted of such cells as transmitted all their revenues to the foreign head houses. The other, of such as had a prior of their own choosing, whence they were usually termed conventual priories: they managed their own estates for their own immediate benefit; and, after reserving certain privileges to the head house, paid it a stipulated sum only by way of acknowledgment, as was the case with Spalding priory. The cells to foreign houses of the first description were generally seized upon the breaking out of a war between England and France, and restored to them again upon the return of peace. Those of the second description had such privileges only as belonged to the foreign house suspended, and any revenue or annual acknowledgment due to it was paid into the Exchequer for the king's use; the privileges and the revenue being again restored upon the war ceasing. The advowsons of the cells of this latter description usually belonged to the descendants of the founder, who were termed patrons. Henry de Lacy earl of Lincoln's letter to King Edward the First,^b upon the seizure of Spalding priory as ALIEN in 1295, will be found in the Appendix of Instruments;^c with the subsequent enrolment for its liberation.^d In the eighteenth of Edward the Second the alien priories were again seized; when a commission issued for taking into the king's hands the priory of Spalding. The prior petitioned the king that the evidences of his house might be examined, as they would show that it was no farther subordinate to the abbey of Angiers than respected the payment of the annuity of forty pounds, and the reception and support of four monks nominated by the foreign abbat. A commission for this purpose accordingly issued, dated at Eltham, June 20th, 18 Edw. II., when it was found, by inquisition, that the priory of Spalding was in fact denizen, that it was of the patronage of Eubulo Lord Strange of Knocking, who had married Alice, daughter of Henry Lacy earl of Lincoln, and belonged in no respect to the abbey of Angiers as a demesne possession. The different instruments on this occasion are important in the History of Spalding.^e Tanner,^f Ducarel,^g and Mr. Gough^h all agree in stating that the priory of Spalding was not only made "prioratus indigena," i. e. naturalized, but even constituted into an ABBEY by King Edward the Fourth. They have not, however, produced a single document in proof of their averment; nor can any such, of the time of King Edward the Fourth, be found. The denization of this priory was evidently found by inquisition, as has been above stated, in the reign of

Edward the Second; and as to the change from a priory to an abbey, it need only to be stated that in the latest document of the monastery to the very time of its Suppression the PRIOR was never acknowledged, or even mentioned, by any other designation.

Bishop Tanner, however, in his account of this monastery, has committed an error of a more material kind. Speaking of it as an alien priory to Angiers, he says, "It was given 20 Hen. VI. to King's college in Cambridge, and 1 Edw. IV. to Sion abbey." The alien priories, it will be remembered, were all dissolved by act of parliament in the 2d Hen. V. and all their estates vested in the crown except some lands granted to the college of Fotheringay.ⁱ Upon an examination of the Patent Rolls in the Tower of London referred to by Bishop Tanner, it appears that certain lands in Spalding, belonging to the abbey of St. Nicholas of Angiers, were granted, in consequence of the general suppression of the alien priories and their possessions, by King Henry the Sixth, to St. Nicholas's college, as his foundation was then termed, in Cambridge.^k The patent of Edward the Fourth referred to, speaks of lands, tenements, annuities, &c., in Spalding and Pynchebek, granted to Syon abbey; some of which had belonged to the alien priory of Cosham in Wiltshire, and some to the abbey of St. Nicholas at Angiers.^l No mention whatever occurs in either of these patents of the priory of Spalding: so that the inference is irrefragable that the lands in question must have been possessions of an independent nature.

The priory of Spalding continued undiminished in its consequence and its revenues till the period of the General Dissolution. The prior together with the heads of most of the religious houses in England, was summoned by Simon de Montfort to the rebellious parliament of 1264.^m In the second year of Edward the Second the Prior was again summoned to parliament:ⁿ but no subsequent instance of a summons is to be found any where.

PRIORS of SPALDING.

The names of some of the earliest priors of Spalding, in all probability, are not now to be recovered. Till the time of abbat Simon de Hauteberge they were called "PRIORES DATIVI," as being of the gift or nomination of the abbats of Angiers; deputed rather to manage the property than the rule of the monastery, and removeable at pleasure.

HERBERTUS is the first prior upon record. He occurs in 1149, and again in 1156.^o He obtained for his priory the appropriation of the churches of Spalding, Pinchebek, Multon, and Hauteberg.^p

GAUFRIDUS, or GALFRID, was the next prior.^q

REGINALD was elected in 1176.^r

GARINUS, or GUARINUS, occurs in 1182.^s

JOLLANUS was prior in the time of Richard I. according to an instrument relating to the advowson of Pinchebek.^t

JOHN, a Spaniard, called JOHANNES HISPANUS, also occurs in the time of King Richard the First.^a

NICHOLAS, in an ancient list of the priors, is expressly named as holding the rule of the monastery in the time of King John;^b though Willis speaks of him as prior in 1189.^c

RALPH, called by Willis RALPH MANSELL, also occurs as prior in the reign of King John.^d Upon his death, in 1229,

SIMON DE HAUTEBARGE became prior. In the Spalding Register he is called SIMON DE HAUT.^e Willis calls him SIMON DE HUNTON.^f He was first appointed by the abbat of Angiers, but was afterwards, in consequence of a Composition which has been already mentioned,^g confirmed by the bishop of Lincoln in perpetuity. He was, in fact, the last of the priors dative. He appears to have begun the rebuilding of the church of his monastery, adding a new cloister, dormitory, infirmary, prior's chamber, and guest-house. He died in 1252;^h or, according to the Register of Spalding, in 1253.ⁱ He was succeeded by

JOHN the Almoner. Of this prior the Spalding Register is lavish in its praises.^k The list of his purchases and acquisitions for the benefit of his convent^l shows not only his own economy and industry, but explains how necessary an Act of Mortmain was, to put a stop, in some degree, to so unbounded a liberty as was once enjoyed by religious houses in acquiring property. He died at St. Denis, in France, on the 8th of the kalends of October, 1274.^m

WILLIAM DE LYTTLEPORT, cellarer of the House, was the next prior: he was chosen on the 5th of December following.ⁿ He appears to have received his sur-name from the place of his birth in the isle of Ely. The Spalding Register gives a particular account of the ceremony attending his election.^o How great a benefactor he was to his monastery may be seen in Robert de Boston's Chronicle, an extract from which will be hereafter given in a Note.

The rebuilding of the conventual church appears to have been completed in his time; many of the buildings around which had been greatly damaged by an overflow of the sea in 1288. He also rebuilt and procured the appropriation to his monastery of the church of Weston; and, with the convent, rebuilt for the parishioners the parochial church of Spalding.^p He died in 1293.^q

^h The following is the account of him given in the Chronicle of abbat John of Peterborough: “Anno MCCLII. Obiit Symon, prior Spaldyngie, qui licet a principio erat dativus, ad instantiam tamen et executionem sollicitam, ac tractatum diligentem, bonæ memoriæ, Hugonis Lincolnensis, episcopi secundi, et nobilis viri Ranulphi, comitis Cestrie et Lincolnie ejusdem loci patroni, cum Constantio abbate Andegavensi, mandatum sufficiens a Conventu Andegavensi componendi tunc habente, super nonnullis oppressionibus et gravaminibus dicti prioratis, ad amicabilem compositionem erat ductus. Qui quidem abbas Constantius et Symon prior, de consensu dictorum diocesanorum et patroni, sic composuerunt apud Bramptone juxta Huntynghedone, ut ex tunc priores Spaldyngie per diocesanum instituerentur, ac immobiles permanentes, plenam administrationem in spiritualibus et temporalibus obtinerent. Per quam quidem compositionem, idem prior Symon confirmatus primo erat per dictum episcopum, et pro suo perpetuo institutus. Mortuo quoque memorato abbate Constantio, successit eidem quidam Jacobus; volens hujusmodi compositionem totaliter infirmare, ac etiam penitus ex toto cassare, venit ad Prioratum Spaldyngie, prædictumque Symonem priorem sic perpetuum, et alios dictæ domus ministros, contra eandem compositionem, voluit finaliter deposuisse. Super quo idem prior Symon, et suus conventus, prædictum Jacobum abbatem et suum conventum ad curiam papalem procurarunt evocari; ubi dicti Jacobus abbas, et conventus Andegavensis, coram domino Papa Innocentio IV. proposuerunt se et monasterium suum, per eosdem Symonem priorem, et conventum Spaldyngie, a subjectione prioratus sui in spiritualibus et temporalibus spoliatis, petentes a domino papa ad hujusmodi subjectionem se plene restitui. Qua lite in dicta curia per quindecim annos sic pendente, ac ipsi abbat et conventu extra omnimodam possessionem spiritualium et temporalium prioratus Spaldyngie, juxta eorum propriam assertionem judicialiter factam, extentibus; secundo compositum extiterat inter partes; per quam compositionem eisdem abbati et conventui nihil attribuitur temporale, nisi quedam annua præstatio quadraginta librarum, et mora quatuor monachorum: quæ quidem compositio, per dominum Papam facta, Lugduni confirmatur, de verbo in verbum totaliter recitata. Omnes vero priores Spaldyngie, ante tempus istius Symonis, primo electi et perpetui missi fuerant ab abbate Andegavensi, et ad ejus libitum, quando sibi placeret, amovebantur: omnes etiam decanos ecclesiæ instituit et amovit; qui cum sic amoti fuissent, quicquid de officiis suis colligere poterant, versus partes transmarinas asportabant, et in suos proprios usus expendebant. Erat autem iste prior Symon ex genere militari satis clarus, ecclesiamque suam a servitute gravissima liberavit, et jura quamplurima amissa recuperavit. Superborum rusticorum suorum adversus eum erigentium colla ita propria virtute calcavit, ut ex hoc liberi homines terrentur. In omnibus hiis curiam prioratus ampliavit, domus ædificavit, ecclesiam veterem in novam construxit, et claustrum novum, dormitorium, infirmary, cameram suam, domus hospitum; et magna vasa ænea in brachia de novo emit: et in omnibus hiis semper fructuose abundavit, et gratia Dei cum illo erat. Erat autem inter omnes prælatos munificus. Ipse autem ad suum convivium in civitate Londoniensi regem invitavit, cum comitibus et baronibus; et, ut hoc obtineret, munera larga diversis magnatibus dedit: quapropter episcopus Lincolnie multum sibi erat infestus, et eum deposuisse voluit a sede sua. Multa quidem alia bona tempore suo fecit, quæ hic non sunt scripta: rexitque ecclesiam suam, vivens in mandatis Domini, annis viginti tribus; et obiit in senectute bona, pridie idus Martii: sepultusque est in ecclesia, quam ipse construxit in dextera parte ipsius aula: cui successit Johannes, domus ejusdem tunc elemosynarius, et in eadem villa natus et nutritus.” Chron. Joh. ab. S. Petri de Burgo, ed. Sparkes, pp. 111, 112.

^k “Non est autem silendum qualiter se gessit in officio elemosynarii. Permissione prioris emit terras, ædificavit domos et capellam, fecit ortum, plantavit vineam et pomaria, congregavit miseros, præbens eis necessaria alimenta. Et si sollertius se gessit in officio prædicto, sollertius se gessit in officio subsecuto. Emit boscum, emit terras, quas constituit ad anniversarium suum: statuit Pitanciarium, et multa alia bona fecit quæ non sunt scripta. Rexit autem domum suam bene et in pace, custodiens eam a lupis irruentibus. Et cum complisset annum xxj. incidit in animum ejus peregrinari apud Pontiniacum in Galliis. Peregrinatione peracta, ipsoque revertente apud Sanctum Dionisium vitam finivit octavo kalendarum Octobris. Fratres autem qui cum eo erant, deposuerunt sollerter corpus ejus in medium pannorum, et sic cis mare transtulerunt, ad Domum propriam portaverunt, ibique sepultus est cum honore in sinistra parte ecclesiæ ante altare. Vixit autem in prioratu xxij. annos.” MS. Cole, vol. xliii. pp. 92, 93.

^q “Obiit Willielmus de Lyttelport, prior Spaldyngie, quæ statim post suam creationem, anno videlicet regni regis Edwardi, filii regis Henrici, sexto, de Radulpho abbate Croylandie petiit, ut jus ecclesiæ suæ de Spaldyngia, centum et decem acras bosci, et mille septingentas et sexaginta acras marisci, cum pertinentiis, in præcinctibus Croylandie, tanquam in parochiis de Multon, Weston, et Spaldyngia, de quibus quidam Wazinus, prior dativus, prædecessor suus, fuit sesitus; quem quidem numerum acrarum supradictum, per tractatum diligentem, et sui monasterii commodum immensum et quietem, pro quingentis et quinquaginta marcis, sterlingorum, et remissione et relaxatione unius mesuagii et unius carucatæ terræ in Spaldyngia, ac duodecim acras terræ cum pertinentiis in Wyberton, quas dictus abbas versus eundem Willielmum priorem petiit, tanquam jus ecclesiæ suæ de Croylandia, per quandam concordiam et finem inde levatum præfato abbati et suis successoribus, imperpetuum relaxavit: cum qua etiam pecunia ecclesiam suam conventualem ad Dei laudem mirifice inchoavit et construxit; donavitque fabricæ ejusdem ecclesiæ perficiendæ decimam lini et lanæ de Pyncebek, quas a domino Papa, sua propria industria, in augmentum portionis suæ præhabita, impetravit. Donavit etiam fabricæ ejusdem ecclesiæ decimam lanæ de Weston. Postquam dictam ecclesiam de Weston, diu ante sua tempora appropriatam, et per crebram præsentationem suorum prædecessorum, in variis vacationibus ejusdem, negligentia et de jure perditam, ab Honorio papa anno suo secundo, hujusmodi appropriationis reformationem gratiose impetravit, et ejus corporalem possessionem, licet per episcopum Lincolnensem plurimum impeditus, prima vacatione ejusdem acceptavit, eam ex tunc pacifice et de jure justo occupando. Item decimam lanæ et lini de Spaldyngia, per priores Symonem et Johannem, ad eorum usum toto eorum tempore occupatam et detentam, officio sacristiæ, de quo ipsam, occasione litis et onerum sibi incumbendum, iidem priores abstulerunt, imperpetuum communi sui conventus assensu reassignavit; salvo tamen residuo, si quid esset, in dicto officio super compotum annuatim remanens, fabricæ dictæ ecclesiæ Conventuali indilate assignando. Item terras et tenementa multa in Sutton, Spaldyng, Pyncebeck, Weston, et Quappelod, tempore suo perquisivit. Ædificia formosa in curia prioratus, et maneriis de Caldebeche, Novæ Aulae, et Quappelode, propriis sumptibus ædificavit. Jura multa per negligentiam prædecessorum diu amissa, ac

CLEMENT DE HATFIELD succeeded upon Lyttleport's death.^a His good deeds, in reference to his monastery, are also recorded in Robert de Boston's Chronicle. He appears to have contributed much toward the improvement of the different manors belonging to the monastery. King Edward II. paid Spalding priory a visit in his time, Oct. 24th, 1315. Prior Clement de Hatfield died on the 11th of the kalends of November, 1318.^b He was the Prior noticed in a former page as summoned to Parliament by K. Edward II.

WALTER DE HALTON was elected on the 5th of the kalends of January following. Cole has transcribed a laboured account of the proceedings at his election.^c

THOMAS DE NASSINGTON is said by Willis to have succeeded Halton. He died in 1335.^d

JOHN, whom Mr. Johnson calls JOHN ESTFIELD,^e occurs prior of Spalding in the latter part of the reign of King Edward the Third.^f And another

JOHN, according to Mr. Johnson surnamed DE MOULTON,^g in the time of Richard the Second.^h Willis says,

THOMAS occurs Prior in 1393.ⁱ

ROBERT DE HOLLAND occurs prior in 1424; in whose time the customs, rents, suits, and services of the tenants not only of the manor of Spalding but of all the manors belonging to the convent, were settled upon the footing on which they now stand.^k

WILLIAM DE PINCHBEK is spoken of by Mr. Johnson as the next prior.^l And then another

THOMAS succeeded, surnamed DE SPALDING. A fourth

THOMAS occurs as prior in 1472,^m and again in 1490.ⁿ Mr. Johnson says he was surnamed DE MOULTON.

ROBERT is mentioned as prior by Willis in 1504.^o Willis speaks of

RICHARD NELSON as prior A. D. 1529.^p

THOMAS SPALDYNG, prior; Robert Pynchbek, sub-prior; John Boston senior, master of the chapel; and eighteen other monks, subscribed a recognition of King Henry the Eighth's supremacy on the last day of July, 1534. Willis, in his Mitred Abbies, vol. ii. p. 122, calls this prior THOMAS WHITE. He appears to have resigned his office for a small pension, which, as will be seen in the Note below, he continued to enjoy under the latter of his names, in 1553.

RICHARD ELSYN, alias PALMER, was the last prior of Spalding. He surrendered his monastery to the king Dec. 8th, 1539, 30th of Henry VIII. The pensions granted to the prior, sub-prior, and monks on this occasion will be found detailed in the Appendix of Instruments.^q

The yearly income of this monastery was rated, according to Dugdale, at 767*l.* 8*s.* 11*d.*; according to Speed, at 878*l.* 18*s.* 3*d.*^r

The site of the priory of Spalding was granted by King Edward the Sixth, in the third year of his reign, to Sir John Cheke, his tutor, "propter industriam in instituenda Adolescentia domini Regis."^s

Mr. Gough says, "Chaucer and his brother-in-law John of Gaunt were frequently at Spalding, and took a corrody on a visit to the Prior. Probably Chaucer alludes to it in his lost satire beginning

'In Lincolnshire fast by a spacious fenn Stands a religious house, who doth it ken.'

etiam unum mesuagium, cum centum et septem acris terræ in curia de Bolynbroke, per priores dativos minus juste alienatas, recuperavit. Pietantiam conventus suis terris multis redditibus, et tenementis variis augmentavit: sicque novemdecim annis in cura pastorali gregem sibi commissum prudenter gubernavit, multisque aliis bonis per ipsum interim perpetratis, et hic de facili seriatim non exprimendis, feliciter in Domino obdormivit octavo kalendarum Februarii, sepultusque est in medio chori coram gradibus magni altaris. Successit eidem Clemens." Chron. Angliæ per Rob. de Boston, ed Sparkes, p. 124.

The Spalding Register quoted by Cole, vol. xliii. p. 103, says,

"Et quia non inclinavit cor suum in avaritiam ad congregandas pecunias in thesauros absconditos testantur emptiones terrarum, ne alieni intrarent in finibus suis, præcipue Fulne."—"Testantur etiam ædificiones domorum in maneriis, videlicet, Quappelade, Caldeb', Novus Locus, curia Spalding, maxime autem ecclesia nova, quam de novo ædificavit, et ad eam consummandam singulis annis constituit decimam lini et lanæ provenientes de ecclesia de Pincebek, quas optinuit ecclesia Romana; et quod alii abstulerunt ipse restituit."—"Tamen non est sub silentio transeundum qualiter idem Prior Willielmus ecclesiæ de Weston appropriationem finalem per multa tempora per episcopum Linc. impeditam, Domui suæ Spalding effectualiter adquisivit. Necnon unum molendinum cum decem acris terræ de Hugone Cacheflaunc. Ac etiam varias terras, redditus, et tenementa de Willielmo Bretoun in Weston, Spalding, et Pincebek. Ac etiam quod idem Willielmus prior adquisivit taxationem vicariæ de Pincebek, per quam accrevit domui suæ linum et lanam, ac agnos decimæ ejusdem villæ; quam quidem decimam assignavit ad fabricam ecclesiæ conventus. Recuperavit etiam C. et vij. acr. cum mesuag. in curia de Bolingbroc, versus diversas personas, quas priores dativi, prædecessores sui alienaverunt minus juste."

^b "Anno M.CCC.XVIII. Obiit Clemens de Hattefeld, prior Spaldyngiæ. Vir iste bene a clementia Clemens est dictus, multipliciter morigeratus, qui non solum capellam de Wykham non modice sumptuosam, verum etiam totum manerium sive mansum ibidem, prout ædificatum est, terris ac pasturis ditavit, arboresque in eo decenter plantavit: ac etiam manerium de Thornholm, cum fossatione et elevatione terrarum, tam ibidem quam apud Wykham, et alibi in diversis locis, firmavit. Construxit etiam horreum de Golwilw sumptuose, et novam cameram prioris in prioratu. Et licet tempore suo adquisiciones terrarum, tenementorum, et reddituum, propter statutum regni de terris et tenementis ad manum mortuam minime devolvendis editum, difficiles forent atque graves: idem tamen Clemens prior terras et redditus apud Obthorp de Ranulpho Drynkedregges adquisivit, et pietantiarum domus suæ accrevit de eisdem, una cum domibus in villa Sancti Botulphi, quas tempore suo de novo construxit. Ordinavit etiam certas minutiones per conventum ipsum dividendo in quatuor partes successivas, certum solatium tribus in ebdomada diebus eisdem curialiter assignando. Ordinavit insuper et alia per conventum utilia multipliciter et honesta, sicut trenchoria in refectorio, et alibi pro conventu, et alia commendanda tam in mensa pro comestione, quam post refectionem." They are Spalding, Pinchbeck, and Deeping fens lying undivided. All the towns whose lands lie next adjoining are intitled to this right, and some more distant, comprehended in this old distich:

Uffington, Tallyngton, Barham, and Stowe;
One house in Gretford, and ne're an ene moe.

But they can only put on their own respectively, though strays are not liable to be pounded or taken in drift by the fen reeves to prevent suits. The soil and game belong to the lords, though the tenants have right to the brorage (i. e. browsing) fodder, fishings, reed-gatherings, fowltakings, and other fen profits. of the seal of this priory, appendant to the Recognition of King Henry the Eighth's supremacy,^a is still preserved in the chapter-house at Westminster. The area of one side represents the Virgin and Child: that of the other the figure of a bishop, presumed to be St. Nicholas, with his right hand uplifted, as in the act of giving benediction. In 1789 the REMAINS of Spalding Priory consisted of some cottages with gothic windows, and part of the church and gateway;^c but these have been since diminished.

Gough says, "Here were buried Ivo Tailbois, 1104, and his wife Lucia, 1141, and twenty six priors, besides benefactors of the families of Multon, Ayscough, Gayton, Lambart, Pinchbek, Aylwyn, Ross, Ogle, Lemoyne, Thur-

Both Bishop Tanner and Mr. Johnson quote a "Commissio ad privandum priorem de Spalding, ac ad procedendum ad electionem novi prioris," in bibl. Yelverton, vol. xxv. fol. 93, subsequently in the earl of Sussex's library. See Cat. MSS. Angl. et Hib. tom. ii. fol. 131.

Anno mlix. Wlfketulus, abbas Croylandiæ, instigante inclito comite Algaro, ad hospitalitatem, more monasteriali, in cella sua de Spaldyng adventantibus Christi fidelibus exhibendam, ligneam capellam suam ejusdem villæ, cum certis redditibus in eadem villa situatis, dedit monachis suis Spaldyngensibus; et dictus comes portionem eorundem in multis ampliavit.

Anno mxxij. Edwinus et Morcarus, filii Algari, filii Leofrici comitis Leicestriæ, sæpius capti, sed semper miseratione regis, et gratia suæ nobilitatis impune demissi, postremò, non vi nec dolo hostium, sed suorum perfidiâ trucidati, regem etiam ad lachrymas coegere, quorum sororem nomine Luciam cum omnibus terris eorum Yvoni Taylboys, tunc Andegavensi comiti, maritavit.

Anno mxxij. Yvo Taylboys, comes Andegavensis, dominus Spaldyngæ et totius Holandiæ, monachis sancti Nicholai Andegaviæ, Natale tunc abbate, cellam Spaldyng^d primo dedit. Iste Yvo, maritus Lucie comitissæ, decimas ac donationes quas Toraldus avunculus ejusdem Lucie, filie Algari comitis Leicestriæ, monachis Spaldyngiæ dederat evidenter fecit confirmari; donavitque eisdem monachis decimam thelonei et salinarum de Spaldyng, et piscariam de Westlode cum uno piscatore, et decimam piscium quæ in toto ejus terra caperentur, ac decimam bestiarum suarum silvestrium ubicunque essent. Donavit etiam dictis monachis de Spaldyng decimas particulares in Totteneye, Alkebarowe, Normanby, Weltysford, et Bolyngbroke, et in qualibet earundem unum rusticum pro hujusmodi decimis colligendis. Et ad instanciam prædicti Yvoni Taylboys, Willielmus rex Angliæ Conquestor, Willielmus, et Henricus, reges et filii dicti Willielmi Conquestoris, confirmarunt monachis de Spaldyng manerium de Spaldyng cum omnibus appenditiis et pertinentiis suis quibuscunque, et omnia quæ in regno Angliæ tunc habebant.

[Ex Registro de Spalding, penès Joh. Oldfield arm. an. 1659.]

Ex cartis et munimentis, tangentibus fundationem sive inchoationem prioratus Spaldingensis, colligi potest, quod quidam Thoroldus, Lucie comitissæ antecessor, dedit beato Nicholao, et ecclesiæ, et monachis de Spalding, decimas in Tetenay, Alkeberg, Normanby, Beltisford, et Scamelisby. Et tempore istius Thoroldi, habuerunt monachi Spaldingenses, boscum et mariscum, ut in carta regis Henrici primi patet. Cumque postmodum rex Willielmus adquisivisset regnum Angliæ per conquestum, mortuoque dicto Thoroldo; relicta sibi hærede Lucie prædictâ, et Yvo Talboys eandem Luciam duxerat in uxorem; cui Yvoni, dictus dominus rex dedit licentiam et concessit quod ipse manerium suum Spaldingense dare possit beato Nicholao civitatis Andegavensis; ita tamen, quod ecclesia Spaldingensis, in manerio suo sita, et servitores ejusdem, dictum manerium habeant, cum omnibus appendiciis suis, cum sokâ et sakâ, tol et them, et infangthef, et omnibus libertatibus et consuetudinibus suis, sicut aliquis antecessorum suorum illud melius habuit; ita tamen, quod habeat in vitâ dicti Yvoni, vel post mortem suam, prout voluerit. Dictus verò Yvo postmodum apud Gloucestriam, concessit Natali abbati S. Nicholai, et monachis Andegaviæ, ecclesiam de Spalding, cum unâ carucatâ terræ, et omnibus quæ ad ecclesiam pertinent; ita tamen, quod iidem monachi recognoscant hujusmodi donationem sibi factam ab eodem Yvone, tanquam primam donationem, excluso quodammodo dono facto prius per Thoroldum: cui tamen ecclesiæ Spaldingensi, et ipsius ministris, dicti abbas et monachi Andegavenses assignaverunt et concesserunt decimas, quas prædictus Thoroldus, et sui, S. Nicholao prius dederunt.

Dictus Yvo nichilominus, pro hujusmodi decimis custodiendis, de suis hominibus assignavit et donavit monachis Spaldingæ, in Teteney, unum rusticum, in Alkebar, unum rusticum, et Normanby; unum rusticum, et decimam telonii et salinarum suarum; et unam de piscariis suis, Westlode; et multa alia. Defuncto verò Yvone eadem domina Lucia successive sumpsit sibi alios viros; scilicet Rogerum filium Geroldi, et comitem Cestriæ Ranulphum. Mortuis quoque domino rege Willielmo et maritis dominæ Lucie supradictis; ipsa, in viduitate suâ dunavit monachis Spaldingiae, manerium suum Spaldingiae, cum sokâ et sakâ, tol et them, et infangenethef, et omnibus aliis libertatibus; quod donum Willielmus de Romarâ, filius Luciae comitissae, et Willielmus nepos et hæres ejusdem Willielmi, et Ranulphus comes Cestriae et Linc. successores dictae Luciae confirmârunt.

Præfectis postmodum diversis prioribus temporalibus, successivè in prioratu Spaldingensi, per abbates Andegaviae, celariis, et sacristis, aliisque ministris variis dictae domus; ac ipsis, pro voluntate dictorum, abbatiam à suis officiariis depositis et amotis, ipsi in recessu suo ab eodem prioratu recedentes, et se ad partes alienigenas transferentes; quicquid de eisdem officiis colligere poterant, asportârunt, in dicti prioratus præjudicium non modicum et gravamen: super quo, bonae memoriae Hugo Lincolnensis episcopus secundus, dicti prioratus diocesanus, immo nobilis vir, dominus Ranulphus comes Cestriae et Lincolniae, ejusdem loci patronus, meritò condolentes, Constantium abbatem, tunc temporis Andegaviae; et Simonem, Spaldingiae, tunc priorem, super præmissis, ad compositionem amicabilem perduxerunt. Qui quidem abbas Constantius et Simon prior habentes à suis conventibus mandata sufficientia componendi super præmissis, de consensu eorundem diocesani et patroni, composuerunt ut priores de cætero Spaldingiae per diocesanum instituerentur, ac immobiles permanentes, plenam administrationem in spiritualibus et temporalibus optinerent. Mortuo verò abbate Constantio memorato, Jacobus ejusdem successor, dictam compositionem volens totaliter infirmare; veniens Spaldingiae, Simonem priorem, per episcopum, juxta compositionem præmissam institutum, ac alios dictae domus ministros, contra eandem compositionem voluit deposuisse. Cui dictus prior et ipsius conventus resistentes, per eundem abbatem et suum conventum procurabantur ad sedem apostolicam evocari. Dicti verò abbas et conventus suus, coram domino papâ, contra eosdem priorem et conventum suum proposuerunt, se et monasterium suum, per eosdem priorem et conventum à subjectione prioratus Spaldingiae in spiritualibus et temporalibus spoliatos, petentes per papam se restitui ad hujusmodi subjectionem; lite verò pendente prædictâ, ac ipsis abbate et suo conventu, extra omnimodam possessionem spiritualium et temporalium prioratus Spaldingiae, juxta assertionem suam propriam factam judicialiter existentibus, compositum secundo extitit inter partes, quam compositionem eisdem abbati et conventui nichil attribuitur temporale, nisi quaedam præstatio annua ^{xl^{li}}. et mora quatuor monachorum; quæ quidem compositio per sedem apostolicam confirmatur, de verbo ad verbum totaliter recitata.

[Ibid.]

ANNO incarnationis Domini millesimo octogesimo quinto, concessit Ivo Taleboys ecclesiae sancti Nicholai Andegaviae, ecclesiam in villa sua quæ Spaldingia vocatur, cum una carucata terræ, et bobus et omnibus quæ ecclesiae pertinent, pro Willielmi regis, ac Matildæ reginæ uxoris suæ animabus, necnon pro sui ipsius, et conjugis suæ Luciae, et antecessorum Toraldi, scilicet uxoris ejus, requie: tali pacto, ut monachi sancti Nicholai, sub manu regis, ab Ivone hujus elemosinæ primam donationem recognoscant. In qua ecclesia tres monachi, electione abbatis, totiusque conventus, assiduè erunt, cui ecclesiae Spaldingi, abbate et monachis, decimas quas Toraldus, sui que homines dederant, beato Nicholao concesserunt. Si autem Domino largiente ecclesiae substantia copiosissimè multiplicata fuerit, monachorum numerus augmentetur, de cujus substantia, in unoquoque anno, fratribus cœnobii sancti Nicholai Andegaviae, charitatem quam poterant reddent.

Hanc conventionem fecit Ivo cum Natali abbate, et monachis sancti Nicholai Andegaviae apud Gloucestriam, concedente Willielmo rege Anglorum, testimonio Remigii episcopi Lincolnensis, Willielmi episcopi Dunelmensis, Hugonis, Walderici et Normanni Crassi, Johannis militis ipsius abbatis, et Nigelli militis, Ivonis militis, Hormeri presbiteri. Post hæc dedit tholoneum Spaldingiae et salinas, et quandam aquam quæ vocatur Westelade, cum piscariis. Dedit etiam eis de suis propriis piscationibus in expensis fratrum, unoquoque anno duo millia anguillarum, et decimam piscium marinarum, qui in omni terra sua capientur, decimam pullorum equarum suarum silvestrium ubicunque fuerant. In Tatenaya unum rusticum, in Weldeford unum rusticum ad custodiendum decimas, ad lucernam monasterii, et dormitorii. Et pascua pecoribus monachorum, sicut suis propriis annuatim, et unam carucatam terræ in Obthorp, cum tribus rusticis, et carucatam boum cum seruo.

GREGORIUS episcopus, servus servorum Dei, venerabili fratri episcopo et dilectis filiis priori et archidiacono Coventren. salutem et apostolicam benedictionem. Significantiis dilectis filiis Abbate et Conventu Monasterii Sancti Nicholai Andeg. ordinis sancti Benedicti. Nos noveritis accepisse quod cum universi priores monasterio eidem subiecti, super statu suorum Prioratuum cum eis habituri tractatum, ut per eundem abbatem corrigantur et reformantur quæ corrigenda et reformanda fuerint in Prioratibus supradictis, apud Monasterium, certis sicut debent temporibus conveniant, memoratum, de Kirkeby et de Spalding priores Linc. et Coventren. dioc. Monasterio subiecti prædicto, in quorum Prioratibus multa interdum religioni et honestati contraria committuntur, quæ facile possent corrigi, si ad ejusdem Abbatis audientiam proferrentur, ad jam dictum Monasterium temporibus quibus alii ad idem accedunt, prout tenentur, accedere negligunt, pro suæ arbitrio voluntatis: propter quod tam ipsi quam alii subditi eorundem tanto facilius ad illicita prolabantur quanto minus corrigi pertimescunt. Quia vero hæc si vera sunt conniventibus oculis pertransire, nec volumus nec debemus. Discretionem vestram per apostolica scripta mandamus, quatinus si est ita, priores præfatos ut apud monasterium de termino in terminum, sicut debent, conveniant supradictam, monitione præmissa, per censuram ecclesiasticam, appellatione remota, sicut justum fuerit, compellatis. Testes autem qui fuerint nominati, si se gratia, odio, vel timore subtraxerint, per censuram eandem, appellatione cessante, cogatis veritati testimonium perhibere. Quod si non omnes hiis exequendis potueritis interesse, tu frater Episcopo, cum eorum altero, ea nihilominus exequaris. Dat. Reate, xv. kal. Octobr. pontificatus nostri anno quinto.

Secunda Compositio inter Abbatem Andeg. et Priorem Spalding, quod idem Prior eligatur per Conventum Spalding, et habeat plenam Administrationem in Spiritualibus et Temporalibus reservatis Abbati, visitatione, professione Noviciorum Spalding ibidem facienda, et mora iij. Monachorum, una cum Pensione xl. Marcarum annuatim, quæ Compositio confirmata est per Sedem Apostolicam.

INNOCENTIUS episcopus, servus servorum Dei, dilectis filiis priori et conventui de Spalding, ordinis sancti Benedicti, Linc. dioc. salutem et apostolicam benedictionem. Ea quæ iudicio vel concordia terminantur firma debent et illibata persistere, et ne in recidivæ contentionis scrupulum relabantur, apostolico convenit præsidio communiri: ex parte siquidem vestra fuit propositum coram nobis, quod cum olim inter vos ex parte una, et abbatem et conventum sancti Nicholai Andeg. ordinis sancti Benedicti ex altera, super eo quod ipsi dicebant vos eos possessione subjectionis prioratus unde contra justitiam spoliasset, ac rebus aliis suborta fuisset materia quæstionis; tandem postquam fuit hinc inde diutius litigatum, de assensu et auctoritate diocesanorum utriusque partis, et capitulorum ipsorum, ac patronorum vestrorum, amicaliter inter partes compositio intercessit, prout in instrumento inde confecto, cujus tenorem de verbo ad verbum præsentibus inseri fecimus, plenius dinoscitur contineri, quam Apostolico roborari munimine petistis. Nos igitur vestris supplicationibus inclinati, com-positionem ipsam sine pravitate provide facta, et ab utraque parte sponte receptam, et hactenus pacifice observatam, auctoritate apostolica confirmamus, et præsentis scripti patrocinio communimus. Tenor autem instrumenti prædicti talis est. Cum inter monasterium beati Nicholai Andeg. et una parte, et prioratum Spalding Linc. dioc. ex altera, coram domino Papa Quæstio verteretur super eo quod dictum monasterium beati Nicholai Andeg. se petebat plene restitui per procuratorem ad possessionem vel quasi subjectionis prioratus Spalding in temporalibus et spiritualibus, qua se dicebat per priorem et monachos dicti prioratus tempore spoliatum petebat enim tam sententiam canonicis, quam sententiam abbatis usque ad satisfactionem condignam inviolabiliter observari, et eos ex officio domini papæ puniri qui hactenus eas non observaverant. Item petebat sibi restitui omnes expensas quas abbas et monachi incurrerant hactenus propter eos quas estimaverat mille marcas, salvis omnibus expensis usque ad finem negotii faciendam. Petebat similiter compositionem quæ dicebatur esse factam a Constantio quondam abbate cum redundaret in grave prejudicium monasterii beati Nicholai Andeg. et de jure stare non posset, cassam et irritam nunciari, et ad ipsam servandam Monasterium non teneri. Quæ omnia procurator prioris et conventus Spalding litem contestando, vera esse negavit, et petita fieri non debere respondit; qui postmodo in modum exceptionis proponens præfatam compositionem partem adversam in omnibus quæ in dicto prioratu, tam super petitorio, quam super possessorio posset petere in præfata compositione non comprehensis intendebat excludere. Tandem inspirante divina gratia post multos labores et multa litigia et graves expensas factas tam in curia Romana quam extra, de prudentium virorum consilio, partes non solum a lite prædicta volentes recedere, verum omnem disceptationis materiam in posterum amputare, quæ inter abbatem et conventum beati Nicholai Andegaviæ, nomine ipsius monasterii, et priorem et conventum Spalding, nomine ipsius prioratus, tam super petitorio quam super possessorio, simul vel separatim posset contingere, præfati abbas et conventus monasterii beati Nicholai Andeg. et prior et conventus Spalding ordinaverunt et amicaliter composuerunt sub forma infra scripta, quæ talis est. 'Hæc est amicalis Compositio et Pacis Reformatio realis et perpetua, Andeg. facta, anno gratiæ m^o.cc^o. quadragesimo secundo, in Palatio domini Episcopi, quarto non. Januarii, inter Jacobum Dei gratia abbatem Monasterii beati Nicholai Andeg. ejusdemque loci conventum, ex una parte, et Simonem venerabilem priorem Monasterii beatæ Mariæ et beati Nicholai Spalding, ejusdemque loci conventum ex altera, de consensu et auctoritate venerabilis patris Michaelis Dei gratia episcopi et capituli Andegavensis, et consensu, necnon auctoritate venerabilis patris Roberti Dei gratia episcopi et capituli Linc. et nobilis comitis Walteri Marescalli ac nobilis comitissæ Margaretæ uxoris ejusdem comitis, præfati prioratus patronæ, videlicet quod salvo jure, plene et integre, imperpetuum prædictis comiti et comitissæ et successoribus suis, quantum ad patronatum pertinet, et salvo jure episcopali in admissione et institutione prioris et visitatione prioratus Spalding, et aliis ad episcopum spectantibus integre et plene et perpetuo Episcopo prædicto Linc. et successoribus suis quo ad legem diocesanam et jurisdictionem episcopalem, et salvo jure prædicto abbati et successoribus suis in hiis quæ spectant ad observantiam Regularum et disciplinam Monachalem in eodem prioratu, salvisque etiam jure et possessione prioris Spalding qui nunc est, et sibi succedentium, ut toto tempore vitæ suæ postquam ab episcopo Linc. fuerint instituti, tanquam priores immobiles in spiritualibus et temporalibus, et beneficiis conferendis, et præsentationibus ad illa, et receptione monachorum quo ad habitum, plenam habeant potestatem, non amovendi absque causa canonica, cognita, et approbata. Cum autem dictum prioratum vacare contigerit, conventus Spalding infra triduum a tempore vacationis mittat nuntium specialem ad abbatem sancti Nicholai Andegaviæ cum literis patentibus sigillo capituli Spalding sigillatis, continentibus vacationem dicti prioratus et vocationem abbatis qui pro tempore fuerit in ecclesia beati Nicholai Andeg. electionem in dicto prioratu una cum Conventu faciendam de priore. Qui abbas infra quadraginta dies a tempore susceptionis hujusmodi literarum per se vel per procuratorem ad hoc, cum literis sigillo ipsius Abbatis sigillatis, specialiter destinatum, ad prioratum Spaldingiae accedat, ut iidem Abbas et Conventus Spaldingiae, vel procurator abbatis libere et canonice ad electionem ibidem procedant, petita prius per dictum abbatem, vel procuratorem ejus, et conventum Spalding, a patrono qui pro tempore fuerit, licentia eligendi. Si autem Abbas per se vel per procuratorem ejus infra praedictum terminum, vel non possit accedere, vel non velit, ad electionem praedictam, prout praedictum est evocatus, dicto termino elapso, praedictus Conventus Spalding eligendi sibi priorem liberam habeat facultatem. Ita tamen quod propter hujusmodi absentiam, ipsi abbati vel successoribus suis, quantum ad electiones futuras, nullum praedictum imposterum generetur. Si autem utramque ecclesiam eodem tempore vacare contigit, juxta praedictum modum facta denunciatione et vocatione conventus beati Nicholai Andegaviae, mittat procuratorem cum literis suo sigillo sigillatus, ad dictum prioratum infra praedictum terminum, ad faciendum circa electionem quod esset factururus. Procurator abbatis nullo ex hoc dicto conventui beati Nicholai Andegaviae jure adquisito, nisi solum temporibus vacationum, vel dicto prioratui Spalding propter hoc nullo praedictum generato, vel in posterum generando. Celebrata quoque electione in dicta ecclesia tanquam conventuali, dictus Abbas vel procurator ejus, vel procurator conventus beati Nicholai Andeg. tempore vacationis, et conventus Spalding electum in priorem et electionem ipsam, petito assensu Patroni qui pro tempore fuerit, cum literis assensum suum continentibus, si easdem dare voluerit, requisitus, episcopo Linc. presentabunt, ut tunc circa electionem et electum quod suum fuerit exequatur. Et cum prior fuerit institutus per episcopum Linc. non amoveatur absque causa canonica, cognita, et probata. Item omnes priores qui pro tempore fuerint in prioratu Spalding promittent in ipsa sui institutione abbati qui pro tempore fuerit, vel ejus procuratori, vel procuratori conventus beati Nicholai Andegaviae tempore vacationis, nomine abbatis, secundum regulam beati Benedicti, obedientiam, reverentiam, et honorem, tanquam Abbati suo, salvo tenore praesentis compositionis. Dictus autem abbas et successores sui, cum opus fuerit, aut viderint expedire, ad minus de triennio in triennium, nisi fuerint legitime impediti, ad dictum prioratum causa visitationis faciendae pro hiis quae sunt ordinis et regulae, tanquam abbates habentes professiones noviciorum dictae domus, et alia quae pertinent ad observantiam regularem, venient cum quindecim equitatis moram ibidem facturi per mensem interpolatim vel continue, si voluerint, ad expensas omnimodas prioratus Spalding. Qui, quocienscunque ad praedictas causas advenierint, videlicet electionis vel visitationis ibidem faciendae, recipientur cum processione sollempni: qui cum ibidem praedicto modo recepti fuerint, Noviciorum professiones ibidem infra mensem recipiant, si quae fuerint faciendae. Si vero abbas qui pro tempore fuerit infra praedictum terminum ad praedictum prioratum personaliter non accedat, committet cuicunque personae idoneae receptiones professionum Noviciorum, qui nomine abbatis dictas professiones recipiet. Et idem abbas, vel ille cui committet, omni tempore ibidem, et non alibi, Noviciorum professiones recipiet antedictas. Praeterea si in adventu abbatis, tempore visitationis, aliquis vel aliqui de conventu Spalding ammovendus vel ammovendi fuerint, per Abbatem in Capitulo, causa cognita, juxta regulam sancti Benedicti ammoveatur vel ammoveantur; restitutione tamen abbati reservata, si misericorditer agere velit circaa motum ante poenitentiam peractam: et poenitentia peracta liceat priori eundem revocare: sed ante restitutionem vel revocationem amoto providebitur in omnibus per priorem. Si autem Prior Spalding non esset praesens in adventu abbatis, causa visitationis vel correctionis faciendae, expectabitur ab abbate ad expensas dicti prioratus per octo dies ad inchoandam visitationem et correctionem, et ex tunc sive praesens sive absens, dictus prior fuerit, libere poterit dictus abbas visitare et corrigere, nichilominus etiam habebit ex tunc mensem integrum ad inchoandam et perficiendam visitationem et moram ibidem faciendam si voluerit interpolatim vel continue dictis octo diebus non computatis in praedicto mense. Porro dictus abbas et successores sui de partibus transmarinis oriundos monachos quatuor et non plures de quacunque natione ad prioratum Spalding transmittere poterunt pro mora ibidem faciendae: qui cum venerint, recipiantur in capitulo et extra, et postquam recepti fuerint, tractentur et admittantur ad

positionem, bona fide et sine fraude in omnibus supradictis articulis et singulis firmiter observare, et eadem se contentum esse, et per se, vel per alium de cætero nullatenus, contraire, jurabit Prior Spalding qui pro tempore fuerit, in ipsa institutione episcopo Linc. vel ejus procuratori, abbate absente,^a vel ejus procuratore, vel procuratore conventus beati Nicholai Andegaviæ tempore vacationis, et unus ex monachis conventus Spalding, a Priore et Conventu ad hoc specialiter electus, in animas singulorum eodem modo jurabit. Et hoc idem abbas qui pro tempore fuerit similiter jurabit in ipsa sui institutione Episcopo Andegaviæ, vel ejus procuratori, et nichilominus in suo primo adventu, postquam in Prioratu Spalding, sollempni processione receptus fuerit, similiter dictam Compositionem in omnibus supradictis articulis et singulis jurabit firmiter observare pro se et conventu suo beati Nicholai Andegaviæ, in animas singulorum, et eadem tam se quam conventum suum contentos esse, et per se, seu per alium vel per alios nullatenus contraire. Si autem dictus abbas vel procurator ejus, vel procurator conventus beati Nicholai Andegaviæ, si ecclesiam vacare contigerit, in ipsa institutione prioris, impeditus interesse non posset, nihilominus præsentem postea abbate, vel procuratore ejus, vel procuratore Conventus tempore vacationis, in adventu eorum, jurabunt dictus Prior per se, et Conventus per alium, prout superius est expressum, se servaturos dictam compositionem in perpetuum in omnibus et singulis articulis supradictis. Si vero abbas qui pro tempore fuerit, vel Prior qui pro tempore fuerit, non vellet jurare hanc Compositionem, sicut superius est expressum, concessit abbas, et tunc præsens consensit Episcopus Andegaviæ, ut censura ecclesiastica compelleretur per Episcopum Lincolnensem: et Prior et Conventus Spalding concesserunt, ut ad præstationem juramenti, prout superius est expressum, eadem censura compelleretur per Abbatem. Ad majorem autem firmitatem, et ad perpetuam rei gestæ memoriam, prædicti venerabiles patres, Dei gratia episcopi Robertus Linc. et Michael Andegav. et tam Linc. quam Andegav. capitula, necnon religiosus Jacobus abbas beati Nicholai Andegaviæ et conventus ejusdem monasterii, et nobilis Walterus comes mariscallus, et Margareta comitissa uxor ejus, prædicti Prioratus patroni, et ejusdem loci Simon prior et Conventus huic Compositioni et Pacis Reformationi Sigilla sua apposuerunt. Testibus infrascriptis, tam scolaribus quam aliis, tunc Andeg. existentibus, videlicet, magistro Eudone de Templo tunc officiali Andeg. domino Roberto Sorel, magistro Bern. Senen. canonico sancti Martini Andegaven. Stephano de Cenom. Galfrido Britone, et magistro Willelmo de Lichefelde canonico Londoniens. Philippo de Gildeford canonico Willenen. Johanne Cornubien. Nullo igitur omnino hominum liceat hanc paginam nostræ confirmationis infringere, vel ei ausu temerario contraire. Si quis autem hoc attemptare presumpserit, indignationem omnipotentis Dei, et beatorum Petri et Pauli apostolorum ejus se noverit incursurum. Dat. Lugdon. idus Julii Pontificatus nostri anno tertio.

Irrotulatio pro Liberatione Prioratus Spalding, ne idem Prioratus detineatur in Manu Regis tanquam Domus subjecta Regi Franciæ vel alii de potestate et dominio dicti Regi Franciæ.

QUIA per literas Henrici de Lacy comitis Linc. domino regi missas, quas rex postmodum misit hic ad scaccarium, et quæ irrotulantur in rotulo hujus relig. anno xxiiij. Rex accepit, quod dictus prioratus Spalding, qui est de patronatu antecessorum dicti comitis et suo fundatus, in nullo regi Franciæ est subjectus, aut aliis de potestate ejusdem regis Franciæ existentibus aliquo modo astrictus nisi tantum in eo quod priores ejusdem prioratus qui pro tempore fuerunt, quadraginta li. abbati de Aungers, qui est de potestate regis Franciæ, occasione quorundam tractatum inter prædecessores prædictorum abbatis et prioris in curia Romana factorum, singulis annis reddere tenentur: et etiam ad sustentationem quatuor monachorum de Domo ipsius abbatis de Aungers per ipsum abbatem in Anglia ad dictum prioratum de Spalding destinandum; per quod rex, nono die Decembris, prædicto anno xxiiij. per Breve suum quod irrotulatur ibidem mandavit Willelmo de Harton tunc Custodi Domorum relig. in com. prædicto, quod de terris et tenementis, bonis et catallis dicti prioris, quæ rex ob aliquas certas causas in manum suam capi fecit, in nullo se extunc intromitteret, sed exitus, si quos de eisdem terris et tenementis ad opus regis levaverit, eidem priori sine delatione restitueret. Ideo dictus prior exnunc de aliquo fine faciendo, vel hic ad scaccarium reddendo pro exitu dicti prioratus minime oneretur. Ita tamen quod idem prior dictas xl. libras quas præfato abbati de Aungers annuatim, ut prædicatur, reddere solebat, regi hic reddat ad scaccarium, quamdiu hujus possessiones alienigenarum in manu regis occasione guerræ inter regem et regem Franciæ jam initæ extiterint.

Et ideo vobis mandamus quod si ita est, tunc sine dilatione dictam domum in manum nostram seisiri et eam custodiri faciatis juxta vim et effectum literarum nostrarum patentium vobis nuper de domibus hujus relig. alienig. in manum nostram capiend. confectarum, et formæ per nos et concilium nostrum super eo ordinatæ, et vobis liberatæ, et omnes terras et tenementa ad dictam domum spectantia extendi faciatis per sacramentum proborum et legalium hominum locorum ubi dictæ terræ existunt, quid videlicet et quantum valeant per annum in omnibus exitibus, salvis servitiis dominorum inde debitis. Inquisitio facta coram W. de Bayouse et E. de Askeby an Prioratus Spalding sit Cella Sancti Nicholai Andegaviæ.

INQUISITIO capta coram magistro W. de Bayouse et Edmundo de Askeby custodibus domorum relig. alienigenarum de potestate et dominio regis Franciæ in comitatu Linc. apud Spalding decimo octavo die Aprilis anno regni regis Edwardi filii regis Edwardi decimo octavo, per sacramentum Willielmi filii Johannis de Quappelade, Roberti filii Willielmi de eadem, Johannis Bolle de eadem, Willielmi Milis de eadem, Willielmi Belleward de Multon, Willielmi de Welle de eadem, Thomæ de Bernewell de Weston, Alani Berford de Spalding, Johannis de Bradhowe de eadem, Walteri Rawheved de eadem, Willielmi le Clerk de Pincebek, et Willielmi Blackwelle de Holbech, qui dicunt super sacramentum suum quod prioratus Spalding non est Cella abbatiae sancti Nicholai Andegaviæ in Normannia, nec in aliquo dictæ abbatiae tanquam Cella subjectus nec astrictus potestati regis Franciæ, sed quod est omnino ad fidem et subjectionem domini regis Angliæ; nisi quod dicti prior et conventus Spalding tenentur annuatim solvere abbati Andeg. quandam annuam pensionem quadraginta librarum argenti ad festum sancti Johannis Baptistæ vel infra octab. dicti festi, et ad sustentationem quatuor monachorum per dictum abbatem Andeg. ibidem mittendorum, et in dicto Prioratu commemorantium, et hoc occasione quorundam Tractatum inter prædecessores prædictorum Abbatis et Prioris in Curia Romana compositorum sive factorum. In cujus rei testimonium Juratores sua sigilla apposuerunt. Datum apud Spalding die et anno supradictis.

NUM. XXVII.

[Ibid.]

THESAURARIO et baronibus de scaccario domini regis ex parte prioris et conventus de Spalding est ostensum, quod cum ipsi sint fundati per antecessores dominæ Alesie comitissæ Linc. nec aliquid tenent de abbate sancti Nicholai Andegaviæ, nec de alio de dominio et potestate regis Franciæ existente, nec in alio astricti nec subjecti, nisi tantum in quadam annua pensione xl. librarum dicto abbati infra octabas sancti Johannis Baptistæ apud Spalding singulis annis persolvendis, et in sustentatione quatuor Monachorum ibidem per dictum abbatem destinandorum, et hoc per quamdam Compositionem ab antiquo habitam in Curia Romana inter prædecessores abbatis et prioris qui nunc sunt, et auctoritate domini papæ confirmatam. Et dictus prior est per electionem canonicam et confirmationem diocesani episcopi perpetuus installatus, et de fide omnino domini Regis Angliæ: et omnes concessionem, donationes, et ecclesiarum appropriationes factæ sunt eisdem relig. Spalding, nulla mentione habita de abbate prædicto: et possessiones et omnia bona dicti prioratus sunt distincta et divisa a bonis dicti abbatis: et iidem prior et conventus agunt et conveniunt in omnibus cur.^a secularibus et ecclesiasticis sine abbate prædicto. Præmissis vero non obstantibus, quoddam Breve ad suggestionem quorundam suggerentium quod prioratus Spalding sit cella abbatie sancti Nicholai Andegaviæ, ut dicebatur, mandatum fuit magistro Willielmo de Baiocis et Edmundo de Askeby, quod si ita esset, tunc dictum Prioratum in manum regis caperent tamquam Cellam, et inde ulterius facerent juxta mandatum eisdem directum. Qui quidem inquisitionem inde ceperunt, per quam compertum est, quod dictus Prioratus non sit cella, nec alicui de dominio regis Franciæ subjectus, nisi in prædicta pensione et mora dictorum quatuor monachorum, ut prædictum est. Quare dicti prior et conventus petunt sibi justitiam fieri in hac parte; et præcipue cum alias tempore guerræ habitæ inter reges Angliæ et Franciæ dictus Prioratus in manu regis seisisus, extitit liberatus per breve domini regis quod irrotulatur in Rotulo Religiosorum Alienigenarum, anno regni Regis Edwardi nunc xxiii^o. per quod patet ut supra.

Commissio facta Thesaurario et Baronibus de Scaccario per Dominum Regem quod si eis per Inquisitionem vel alio modo constare possit quod Prioratus Spalding sit de Advocatione E. Lestrangle et A. uxoris suæ, &c. quod tunc permittant Priorem pacem habere.

EDWARDUS Dei gratia rex Angliæ, dominus Hybernæ, et dux Aquitanniæ, thesaurario et baronibus suis de scaccario salutem. Monstraverunt nobis Ebulo Lestrangle et Alesia uxor ejus quod licet prioratus de Spalding sit de advocatione ipsorum Ebulonis et Alesie tamquam pertinens ad Honorem de Bolingbrok, quem iidem Ebulo et Alesia tenent ad terminum vitæ ipsius Alesie ex concessione nostra; ita quod dictus Honor cum pertinentiis, et advocatione prædicta dilecto et fidei nostro Hugoni le Despenser fil. Custodes tamen Domorum religiosorum alienigenarum in comitatu Linc. in manu nostra existentium præcedentes Prioratum prædictum pro eo quod idem prior et aliqui prædecessorum suorum quandam annuam pensionem quadraginta librarum, et sustentationem quorundam monachorum per abbatem de Aungers qui pro tempore fuerit ibidem destinandorum, virtute cujusdam contractus inter aliquos prædecessorum prædictorum abbatis et prioris in curia Romana initi hactenus fecit abbatie de Aungers, quæ de dominio et potestate dicti regis existit, subjectum esse Priorem prioratus illius, ad finem nobiscum pro exitibus prioratus illius faciendam a tempore quo hujusmodi domos religiosorum alienigenarum in manum nostram capi mandavimus; ac si prioratus prædictus dictæ abbatie, aut alteri Domui religiosæ de regno Franciæ subjectus fuisset, cum non sit, graviter distringunt et ipsum, ea occasione, multipliciter inquietant et gravant, minus juste, in ipsius prioris dampnum non modicum et gravamen, et prædictorum Ebulonis et Alesie præjudicium, ac prædicti Hugonis exhæredationis periculum manifestum: super quo nobis est supplicatum, ut super præmissis remedium congruum apponi faciamus. Nos volentes inde fieri quod est justum, vobis mandamus quod si per Inquisitionem aut alio modo legitimo vobis constare poterit prioratum prædictum esse de advocatione ipsorum Ebulonis et Alesie tamquam pertinentem ad Honorem prædictum ad totam vitam ipsius Alesie, et post ejus mortem de advocatione prædicti Hugonis, et non de dominio et potestate dicti regis Franciæ, nec alicui Domui religiosæ de regno Franciæ subjectum, tunc præfatum custodem ad hujus distractionibus et inquietationibus præfato priori, occasione prædicta faciend. desistere faciatis, ipsum Priorem super præmissis pacem habere permittatis: proviso, quod de prædictis quadraginta libris quas idem Prior præfato Abbati solvere consuevit, a tempore quo possessiones Religiosorum Alienigenarum capi fecimus in manum nostram, et exnunc quamdiu hujus possessiones in manu nostra remanere contigit, nobis ad idem scaccarium plene respondeatur. Teste meipso apud Eltham xx. die Junii anno regni nostri decimo octavo.

NOVERINT universi ad quos præsentis literæ pervenerint quod cum ecclesia parochialis de Spalding propter ipsius loci vitium aut operis defectum, adeo deficere inceperit, quod de casu ipsius proximo, seu ruina imminente admodum timeretur, adjacensque cimiterium, in quo parochiani de Spalding de speciali gratia et permissione prioris et conventus ejusdem loci quandoque sepeliebantur adeo strictum fuerit et insufficiens, quod cum quorundam mortuorum corpora ibidem sepeliri oporteret, aliorum cadavera plerumque contingeret exhumari; et ex hiis et aliis urgentibus causis, nedum super nova ipsius ecclesiæ constructione, sed et de ejus translatione, inter priorem et conventum de Spalding et parochianos ejusdem villæ frequentius tractatum extiterit: tandem de consilio amicorum communium, interveniente auctoritate venerabilis patris domini Linc. episcopi, loci diocesani, et consensu vicarii de Spalding, convenerunt in forma subscripta, videlicet, quod memorati prior et conventus construent dictis parochianis unam ecclesiam absque campanario ex altera parte aquæ versus orientem in magno cimiterio ubi quondam erat quædam capella quæ vocabatur capella beati Thomæ martyris prope vicum qui vocatur Chapelgate, de tignis scilicet lapidibus et cementis prædictæ parochialis ecclesiæ, quæ sita

erat infra septa eorum monasterii, et si quid ulterius defuerit ad ipsius ecclesie structuram perficiendam, ipsi prior et conventus supplebunt et perficient de suo, suisque propriis sumptibus et expensis. Quae quidem ecclesia habebit in longitudine cum cruce, octies viginti pedes praeter cancellum: ita scilicet quod corpus ecclesie continebit usque ad cancellum quinquies viginti pedes, et crux ex parte boreali continebit triginta pedes, et alios triginta ex parte australi, cum altitudine et latitudine ad modum ecclesie de Multon. Cooperiant etiam ipsam de petra, eamque fenestrabunt cum vitro, et ferramenta ad fenestras invenient, parietes dealbabunt, corbellos decenter implebunt, et ipsam ecclesiam in omnibus perficient competenter. Cumque ipsa ecclesia constructa fuerit, memorati religiosi aut eorum successores, sine assensu et voluntate parochianorum, dictam ecclesiam nullatenus demoliri, vel ad alium locum transferri, sed arbores in illo cimiterio crescentes succidi facient, et remanebunt ad usus et commodum ipsius ecclesie et cancelli, et herbagium habebit Sacrista: ita tamen quod non immittat animalia quae depascantur ibidem. In qua quidem ecclesia, de permissione prioris et conventus, erit baptisterium, ibique parochiani divina audient officia, et ecclesiastica suscipient sacramenta, ipsamque de caetero habebunt quasi ecclesiam suam parochialem, dependentem tamen in omnibus ab ecclesia conventuali dictorum prioris et conventus, tanquam a sua matrice ecclesia, sicut prius dependebat quando fundata erat infra septa supradicta monasterii, et quando baptisterium erat in ecclesia conventuali. Ita tamen quod praedictis priori et conventui, aut eorum successoribus aliquibus occasione praesentis facti seu consensus sui adhibiti, seu praetextu transmutationis ipsius ecclesie vel coemiterii aut baptisterii de loco ad locum, nullum penitus prejudicium generetur in aliquibus quae pertinent aut pertinere consueverunt ad monasterium supradictum. In cujus rei testimonium ipsi parochiani suas facient oblationes ad magnum altare conventualis ecclesie ad tria festa principalia per annum, prout hactenus facere consueverunt a tempore cujus non extat memoria, videlicet ad Natale Domini, ad festum Assumptionis beatae Mariae Virginis, et ad festum Omnium Sanctorum: sed in die Dominicae resurrectionis ob reverentiam corporis Domini, quod ipsi eodem die in ecclesia praedicta sua percepturi sunt, ibidem suas facient oblationes. Item praefati prior et conventus dabunt dictis parochianis unam placeam terrae de dimidia acra praedicto coemiterio contiguum ad augmentationem praedicti coemiterii, videlicet ex parte boreali quindecim perticat. ex parte orientali xv. perticat. et ex parte australi quinquaginta perticat. ipsamque terram dictis parochianis warrantizabunt imperpetuum. Item dabunt eis dus campanas pretii viginti librarum sterlingorum. Et ipsi parochiani per se, vel per alios non pulsabunt ad dictam ecclesiam suam tali hora qua conventus quiescat in dormitorio, nisi in die et nocte Natalis Domini, vel pro igne aut inundatione vel aliquo alio gravi infortunio. Ad haec dicti vero parochiani dabunt dictis priori et conventui centum libras sterlingorum, et totum residuum infra annum a die completi operis. Interim autem dum praedicta ecclesia constructur, dicti parochiani divina audient et ecclesiastica percipient sacramenta, in ecclesia conventuali, videlicet, in choro ubi monachi stare solebant; qui quidem locus, a memoratis priore et conventu ad hoc pro ipsis parochianis est interim specialiter deputatus. Et ad haec omnia fideliter obsequenda, dictus prior pro se et suo conventu, et praefati parochiani expresse consenserunt et solempniter promiserunt, praestito super hoc hinc inde corporali sacramento, subicientes se jurisdictioni et coercioni domini Linc. episcopi, qui pro tempore fuerit, ut ipsos absque Libelli vel Articuli datione, et sine strepitu judiciali compellat ad observationem praemissorum. In cujus rei testimonium huic scripto ad modum cirographi confecto sigilla utriusque partis alternatim sunt apposita: cujus una pars, signata sigillo dictorum prioris et conventus residet penes ipsos parochianos, et altera pars signata sigillo communitatis parochianorum Spalding, una cum sigillo memorati vicarii, penes praenominatos priorem et conventum. Hiis testibus, domino Thoma fil. Lamberti de Multon, domino Johanne de Bathon. domino Alexandro de Monteforti, domino Johanne de Hoiland, magistro Thoma vicario de Multon, domino Roberto decano Hoiland, Ricardo de Multon, et aliis.

[MS. Cole, vol. xliii. p. 110.]

EDWARDUS Dei gratia rex Angliæ, dominus Hiberniæ, et dux Aquitanniæ, omnibus ballivis et fidelibus suis ad quos præsentis literæ pervenerint, salutem. Sciatis quod ad requisitionem dilecti clerici nostri Henrici de Edenstowe, de gratia nostra speciali concessimus pro nobis et hæredibus nostris, dilectis nobis in Christo priori et conventui de Spalding, quod ipsi prioratum suum de Spalding muro de petra et calce firmare et kernellare, et prioratum illum sic firmatum et kernellatum tenere possint sibi et successoribus suis imperpetuum, sine occasione vel impedimento nostri vel hæredum nostrorum, justiciariorum, escaetorum, vicecomitum, aut aliorum ballivorum seu ministrorum nostrorum quorumcunque. In cujus rei testimonium has literas nostras fieri fecimus patentes. Teste meipso apud Pontem fractum ij^o. Marcii anno regni nostri septimo.

[Ibid. p. 106.]

INPRIMIS, cum unicus panis trencherius soli subpriori in die pro servicio suo in refectorio, vel ipsius locum ibidem tenenti hactenus deputabatur, Nos pro hujus defectu supplendo, non tam ad majoris honestatis causam, quam etiam ad elemosinæ nostræ augmentationem, intuitum mentis nostræ dirigentes, volumus et concedimus ipsis de nostra gratia speciali, tam pro nobis quam pro successoribus nostris quod præter prædictum unum panem trencherium pro servicio subprioris, vel ejus locum tenentis in Refectorio deputatum, sex alii consimiles panes trencherii pro servicio totius conventus ibidem de cætero singulis diebus ministrentur.

Item, cum in diebus ferialibus singulis confratribus et commonachis nostris edentibus in refectorio in secundo vel tertio ferculo similiter et in cæna, de quatuor tantummodo ovis, allecibus, et anguillis, aut flundriis, et similiter de aliis piscibus consimilibus in numero duntaxat quaternario hucusque ministrabatur ex consuetudine, Nos pro hujus defectibus supplendis, ex causa præmissa, volumus et concedimus de nostra gratia speciali, tam pro nobis quam pro successoribus nostris, ut quandocumque ipsis de hujus ovis, allecibus, vel aliis supradictis et similibus fuerint in Refectorio ministrand. in numero sexcennario ministretur eisdem.

sorum voluntate unanimi et assensu, statuimus et concedimus, tam pro nobis quam pro successoribus nostris, ut ubi hucusque prædictos tres dies tamen habuerunt causa recreandi, ex forma prænotata, habeant de cætero ex eadem causa quatuor dies in ebdomada, ex nostra gratia speciali, die videlicet Lunæ intermedio dictis tribus diebus coadjuncto; ita quod quilibet pars dicti conventus nostri taliter divisi in die pro sua vice circulariter occurrente beneficium recreationis percipiat suprascriptæ.

Item, quia tempore æstivo conventus noster ex consuetudine post prandium, et gratias dictas, gratia quieti habenda, non lotis manibus, ire solebat in dormitorium, Nos talem consuetudinem tanquam minus honestam censuimus improbandam: et quia tota regula sanctissimi patris et patroni nostri Benedicti est vicina moribus, et honestatis amica, de unanimi consensu et voluntate confratrum nostrorum et commonachorum nostrorum, ordinando statuimus, tam pro nobis quam pro successoribus nostris, ut de cætero singulis annis^a temporibus post prandium habitum in refectorio, et gratias dictas in choro, redeant communiter ad Lavacrum, ut sic post lotionem manuum suarum cætera quæ de permissione Regulæ sibi concessa noverint honestius exequantur.

Ad hæc, cum subpriors hujus domus, de consuetudine ut intelligimus, in absentia prioris, suis confratribus et commonachis exeundi et redeundi licentiam dare consueverunt, ac processu temporis per quosdam Subpriors, qui se supra modum in hujus licentiis concedendis exhibebant difficiles, dicta consuetudo venit in desuetudine, et mansuetudo prænotata versa est in rigorem: Nos, ad frequentem querelam assiduamque instantiam et humiles preces nostri conventus se pius excitati memoratam consuetudinem quæ sub pallio desuetudinis jam latens et languens oppressa fere recessit ab usu detegere et renovare sensitivimus, de unanimi voluntate et assensu nostri capituli, statuentes tam pro nobis quam pro successoribus nostris, ut de cætero Subpriors omnes qui pro tempore fuerint, cum nos vel successores nostri Priores, extra Hoyland, vel apud Sutton abesse contigit, suis confratribus et commonachis, ex justis et legitimis causis, in hujus licentiis dandis et concedendis, ex suo officio, auctoritate præsentis statuti, liberam habeant facultatem: hoc semper adhibito moderamine, ut omnibus hiis, quibus hoc indulgeant, terminum competentem perfigant, infra quem nisi juste fuerint propediti, absque moræ dispendio ad suum monasterium revertantur.

Ad hæc, quia hactenus apud nos de consuetudine approbata est optentum, quod cuicumque monacho et confratri nostro Spalding infirmanti, et ea causa in infirmaria commoranti liceat aliquem socium quem voluerit de licentia Subprioris ejusdem loci qui pro tempore fuerit, sibi advocare causa secum comedendi, ac mutue caritatis et humanitatis solatium in ea parte sibi exhibendi, hujus consuetudinem approbantes, de dictorum fratrum nostrorum unanimi voluntate et assensu adjiciendo statuimus, tam pro nobis quam pro successoribus nostris, ut cum Infirmary dictæ Domus confratribus nostris infirmis in ipsa infirmaria existentibus, intra specialia ex suo officio habeat providere, ut idem infirmarius eo prætextu præsens sit ac magis promptus et paratius ad ministrandum infirmis, liceat sibi in ipsa infirmaria concedere pro suæ libito voluntatis.

Drawn and Engraved by John Gonyea
The Castle of the Kings of Castile, 1818

THE circumstances attending the invasion of England by William duke of Normandy, afterwards King William the Conqueror, appertain so much to general history, that it seems unnecessary to repeat them here. It may suffice to say, that the decisive battle of Hastings was fought upon Oct. 14th, 1066; and that, in the following year, the Conqueror, in consequence of a vow made previous to the battle,^a began to build an Abbey upon the ground on which the victory was obtained, to the honour of the Holy Trinity and St. Martin.^b The high altar was fixed upon the spot where Harold and the royal standard fell.^c The Conqueror's first design was to have had a hundred and forty monks here; but provision appears to have been made for sixty only. The first inhabitants were brought from the monastery of Marmonstier in Normandy.^d

The charters granted to the monks of Battle by King William the Conqueror were numerous; although some of them were confirmations only. Of the thirteen contained in one of the Registers still remaining in Sir Godfrey Webster's possession, three will be found copied in the Appendix to the present Account.^e

The privileges of this monastery detailed in the largest charter, erroneously called "Carta prima," in the Battle Register,^f are great. It was not only to be exempt from episcopal jurisdiction,^g but was to enjoy its exemption in as ample a manner as the metropolitan church of Canterbury. It had the rights of free-warren in all its manors, treasure trove, and even sanctuary. The circuit round the abbey also, called the Leuga, was freed from every kind of tax and service. The manor of Wi, with its appendant royalties, in Kent; the manors of Alsistone in Sussex, Limenesfeld in Surrey, Hov in Sussex, Craumareis in Oxfordshire, and Bristwoldinton in Berkshire; with the churches of Radinges, Culintun, and St. Olave in Exeter; formed the chief endowment.

Two of the Conqueror's charters relating to the general liberties of Battle went each by the name of "Humana Mens;" probably because it was declared in them that the church of Battle should be "libera et quieta in perpetuum ab omni exactione et omnibus quæcunque mens humana cogitare potest." Another liberates the church "ab omni theloneo." There is one "de Corredio Abbatis." Three relate to the liberties of the "Leuga." One to the market granted to the monastery:^h and one reciting the gift of the meadow of Bodeham.

The following is the statement of the abbey property as recorded in the Domesday Survey. The manor of Wi, in Kent, was rated at seven solins. The soc and sac of twenty-two hundreds appertained to it. In Sussex the abbey held Alsistone, which paid geld for forty-four hides and a half; four hides in the hundred of Totenore; six hides and a half, including Bocheham, in the abbat's own rape; and portions of land of a much smaller kind, which were let to the earl of Ow, the earl of Moretaine, and other tenants in Bece, Wasingate, Nirefeld, Penechest, Hov, Pilesham, Cedesfeld, Bollington, Croherst, Witinges, and Holintun. In Surrey, twenty-five hides at Limenesfeld. In Berkshire, the manor of Bristoldestone, which had been Harold's, in whose time it had been rated at ten hides; five "hagæ," or houses, in Wallingford; and the church of Redinges (now Reading), with an appendage of eight hides of land. In Devonshire, the church of Colitone, with

^a Knyghton says, "Nec prætereundum arbitror, quod prima nocte post ingressum Willielmi in terram Angliæ, dum jaceret in papilione, venit ad eum vox dicens, 'Willielme, Willielme, esto bonus homo quia in regni corona prævalebis, et rex Angliæ eris, et cum nostem deviceris fac construi ecclesiam in eodem loco in homine meo tot centenorum pedum in longitudine quot annorum numero semen sanguinis tui regni Angliæ gubernaculum possidebit et in Anglia regnabit.'"

^b In the generality of Instruments granted to the monastery, it is termed the abbey of St. Martin only. It was not many miles from Hastings: which, says Bishop Tanner, was probably the reason of Thomas Rudborne's saying that King William the Conqueror founded "Cenobium in honorem S. Martini apud Hastyng." Angl. Sacr. tom. i. p. 258, Malmesbury, however, had made the same mistake before him:—"Alterum monasterium Hastings ædificavit sancto Martino, quod cognominatur De Bello." Script. post Bedam. fol. 61 b.

^c Malmesbury says, only "Altare ecclesiæ est in loco ubi Haroldi pro patriæ charitate occisi cadaver exanime inventum est." Script. post Bedam, fol. 147. Mr. Gough, in his Additions to Camden, says, "The high altar stood on the spot where Harold's body and standard were found, which is just at the eastern white gate of the yard wall: the foundations were not long since removed, the site having served for a burying place for the catholics." Camd. edit. 1789. vol. i. n. 204.

^d The thought of building this monastery is said to have been first suggested, or rather, it should seem, encouraged, by William Faber, a monk of Marmonstier; though Leland, in his Collectanea, edit. 1770, tom. ii. p. 390, says, "Anno Domini 1085, suadente Remigio episcopo Dorcastrensi, qui prius fuit monachus de Fescamp, Gul. Magnus fundavit abbatiam de Bello."

^e See Numm. IX. X. XI.

^f From the circumstance of Maurice bishop of London being a witness to this charter it is evident that it could not have been granted before A. D. 1085, in which year he was promoted to the see. Compare Chron. Sax. edit. Gibson, p. 184.

^g Wilkins, in his Concilia, tom. i. p. 427—431, has printed the proceedings in the synod of Chichester, A. D. 1157, relating to this exemption. "Synodus Cicestrensis, in qua disceptationes variæ sunt habitæ super eo, quod Willielmus senior regesque subsequentes, abbatem et abbatiam de Bello, in comitatu Sussexiæ, immunes esse regiis suis chartis concesserunt ab omni episcoporum subjectione, etiam Cicestrensis ecclesiæ, cui præ cæteris canonicam deberent reverentiam." a single hide; and the church of St. Olave in Exeter, with seven hides of land appended. In Oxfordshire, five hides at Cravmareis; these also had belonged to Harold. In Essex, one hide at Atahov, and one at Hersa.^a

King William the Conqueror, it appears, did not live to see his foundation at Battle completed. Although an abbat was appointed in 1076, the church of the monastery was not consecrated till 1094. King William Rufus was present at the ceremony of its consecration;^b and, by a charter granted upon that occasion, added the churches of Saforde, Exelingis, Trilaune, Middehala, Nortune, Eilesham, Mendlesham, Bramford, and Brantham, with their several appendages, to the endowment of the monastery. Walkeline bishop of Winchester, Ralph bishop of Chichester, Osmund bishop of Salisbury, John bishop of Bath, William bishop of Durham, Roger bishop of Coutance in Normandy, and Gundulf bishop of Rochester, were all present, with a numerous assemblage of temporal barons, at the consecration.^c

Beside this, and two charters confirming the general liberties of Battle abbey, King William Rufus granted to the monks, first, the manor, and, afterwards, the church of Bromham, in Wiltshire; a distinct charter, confirming the liberties of Wy; a third charter of general privilege, confirming treasure trove; and a charter relating to Bodeham.^d

The charters of Henry the First to Battle abbey were still more numerous than those of his predecessors. Exclusive of his general confirmations, the more important were the charters "pro excambio de Radinge"^e and "de curia habenda per omnia."^f

Other instruments from King Stephen, King Henry the Second, King Richard the First, and King John, are still extant.^g The charter of King John granting the custody of the temporalities and goods of the abbey to the monks upon the deaths of their abbats will be found in the Appendix.^h

King Henry the Third granted two charters to this monastery; one, of general confirmation, and one, "de Justiciariis habendis," in the year 1242.ⁱ

From King Edward the Second the monks of Battle received several charters. He granted them a market and fair at Havekherst; the advowson of the church of Hoton; a licence to acquire lands to the value of forty pounds per annum; and a remission of the fine usually made on the confirmation of a new abbat.^k

In the 12th of Edward the Third the abbat obtained a licence to fortify and embattle his monastery.

Such are the more important of the Royal Charters to the abbey of Battle. The papal and episcopal instruments to this monastery were fewer in number.^m In the earlier period of the history of Battle they were either general confirmations of privileges, or grants of tithes. In the later period they related mostly to appropriations.ⁿ

It need hardly here be added that the abbats of Battle were mitred, and that they were regularly summoned to parliament till the Dissolution.

ABBATS of BATTLE.

King William the Conqueror, upon founding this abbey, designed one Robert Blancard, a monk of Marmonstier (whom he had brought with other monks of that place to England), to have been the first abbat; but he, going back to his monastery to make arrangements before entering upon his new office, was drowned in his return to England.

GAUSBERTUS, another monk of Marmonstier, was thereupon constituted abbat in 1076.^o He died on the 6th of the kalends of August, 1095.^p Bishop Kennett, in his MS. Diptycha, names Walter as the immediate successor of Gausbert, upon the authority of the Annals of Battle; but adds, "et statim obiit." Ordericus Vitalis, p. 505, and the Cotton Manuscript Domitian A. II. name

HENRY as his immediate successor. He was elected on the 3d of the ides of June, 1096. He had been previously prior of Christ Church, Canterbury.^q He died on the 14th of the kalends of July, 1102, and was buried in the chapter-house of his monastery.^r The custody of the abbey during the vacancy after Henry's death was first given to a chaplain of the king named Vivian, and afterwards to one Geoffrey, or Gausfrid, a monk of Carileph.^s

RALPH, a monk of Caen, who had accompanied Archbishop Lanfranc to England, and who had subsequently been prior of Rochester under Bishop Gundulph, was the immediate successor of abbat Henry. He was elected, in 1107, upon the feast of St. Peter ad vincula.^t He died at the age of eighty-four, after having held the rule of the monastery seventeen years and twenty days, on the 4th of the kalends of September, 1124.^u

WARNER, or WARNERIUS, a monk of Christ Church Canterbury, became the next abbat. He was installed on

See also Sim. Dunelm. Script. X. Twysd. col. 219. The Cotton MS. Domitian A. II. fol. 35, says the church was consecrated on the 3d of the ides of Feb. 1095. That a temporary church, however, existed here earlier may be supposed from a passage which will be hereafter quoted from the Cottonian manuscript Domitian A. II. relating to the consecration of abbat Gausbert.

"Gausberto itaque electo, cum ad eum benedicendum episcopus Cicestrensis Stigandus nullatenus assentiret, nisi Cicestriam benedicendus adiret. Regem hac de causa providus abbas caute adivit, causam exposuit, quid agendum foret inquisivit. Quo cognito, indignatus Rex episcopo interminatus præcepit quatinus Abbatem in ecclesia S. Martini de Bello, omni remota calumnia, benediceret, eo etiam modo ut illi ipse vel suorum aliquis eodem die, ex consuetudine, nec hospitaretur, nec cibum quidem sumeret, in testimonium videlicet libertatis ejusdem ecclesiæ. Factum est igitur, et abbate Gausberto ante altare sancti Martini de Bello benedicto, atque in locum suum ab episcopo collocato, memoriale ad posteros transiit, Ecclesiam de Bello ab omni exactione et subjectione Episcoporum Cicestriæ liberam esse, sicut domini Regis Capellam; nec in ea vel in omni possessione ejus quisquam aliquid calumniari possit, nisi gratis et caritative impendatur." the 8th of the kalends of May, 1124, and continued till 1138; in which year he resigned his abbacy, and retired to the monastery of St. Pancras at Lewes.^a

WALTER DE LUCY, brother to Richard de Lucy, a powerful baron of King Stephen's court, was elected abbat on the 6th of the ides of January, 1139.^b His controversy with the Bishop of Chichester respecting exemption from episcopal jurisdiction, in 1157, has been already alluded to.^c He died on the 11th of the kalends of July, 1171. Upon his death, the care of the abbey was committed, during a vacancy of four years, to Richard de Lucy, his brother.^d

Odo, prior of Canterbury, was promoted to the abbacy of Battle on the 6th of the ides of July, 1175. The circumstances of his election are worth notice, as they are detailed in the Cottonian manuscript.^e He died, according to Willis, in the year 1199.^f The Annals of the Church of Winchester say in the month of March, 1200.^g

JOHN OF DOVER, or DE DUVRA, succeeded to the abbacy very soon after Odo's death, on the kalends of May, 1200.^h King John stayed some time in this monastery at Easter in 1206.ⁱ Willis says, that upon John de Duvra's death, which happened on the 12th of the kalends of July, 1213, here was a vacancy for some small time; and then one

HUGH was elected, who was made the third bishop of Carlisle, A. D. 1218.^k I do not know, he adds, whether he held the abbacy in commendam with his bishoprick; but this is certain, that he died anno 1223, at an abbey in Burgundy, on his return from Rome, and that his successor in this abbey was

RICHARD, a monk of this place.^l From the Annals of Dunstable, however, it should seem that Richard was elected abbat of Battle in 1218. He died on the 3d of the kalends of August, 1235.^m

RALPH DE COVENTRY, cellarer of Battle, was the next abbat. The royal assent was given to his election on Nov. 6th, 20 Hen. III.ⁿ

REGINALD, prior of Brecknock, was promoted to the abbacy Nov. 27th, 1261.^o

HENRY DE AYLESFORD had the temporalities of the monastery restored to him as abbat May 28th, 1281.^p Upon his death, in 1297,

JOHN DE THANET, or DE TANETO, was elected abbat: the temporalities were restored to him on January the 30th.^q He resigned in 1307.

JOHN DE WHATLINTON received the king's assent to his election on March the 10th that year.^r Upon his death,

JOHN DE NORTBURN was elected abbat. He received the royal assent May 25th, 1311.^s He resigned in 1318, when

JOHN DE PEVENESE was elected: to whom the temporalities were restored on May 6th that year.^t In the Harleian MS. 6958, p. 267, he is called ROGER DE PEVENO. His death was notified to the king on Jan. 31, 1324, when

ALAN DE KETLYNG was elected abbat: to whom the temporalities of the monastery were restored on March 28th.^u Willis calls him John de Retling.^v Upon his death,

ROBERT DE BELLO was elected abbat. The temporalities were restored to him March 23d, 1351.^w He died in 1364. It is not clear whether the following passage in the Chronicle of Evesham relates to this abbat or to his successor. "Anno MCCCXLIV. Abbas de Bello eundo versus London cuidam damnato ad furcas in mariscalla domini regis obviatus ipsum virtute libertatum suarum a nece liberavit. Et quamvis rex et alii magnates factum graviter tulerint cartas tamen suas per Placitum habuit confirmatas."^x

HAMO DE OFFYNTON received benediction as abbat from Archbishop Islip on the 4th of the kalends of January, 1364.^y In 1375, he was appointed visitor of the monasteries of the Benedictine order in the dioceses of Canterbury and Rochester: and in 1377 defended Winchelsea against the French. Walsingham gives a particular account of his conduct on this occasion.^z Upon Hamo de Offinton's death,

JOHN CRANE was elected abbat. He received the royal assent to his election on March 20th, 1383, and had the temporalities of the monastery restored to him on the 1st of May following.^{aa} Neither Willis nor Stevens make any mention of this abbat. Upon his death,

JOHN LEDBURY was elected. He received the temporalities on March the 1st, 1398.^{ab}

WILLIAM MERSCH received the royal assent as abbat Jan. 16th, and had the temporalities restored on Feb. 1st, 1405.^{ac} He died in the early part of the year 1417.

THOMAS LODELOW, or LUDLOWE, who had been prior of the monastery, was elected his successor. He received the royal assent on May 11th, and had the temporalities on May the 30th, 1417.^{ad}

RICHARD DERTEMOUTH was elected abbat: the royal assent being given to his election May 3d, and the temporalities restored May 15th, 1437.^c

JOHN NEWTON was made abbat in 1463. The temporalities were restored to him on June 14th.^d

RICHARD TOBY, or TOVY, received the temporalities as abbat March 8th, 1490.^e He died Aug. 20th, 1503.

LAURENCE CHAMPYON received the temporalities Dec. 8th, 1508.^h

JOHN HAMOND, the last abbat, was elected in 1529. Fuller and Burnet are by no means favourable to his memory. Fuller, upon the authority of Speed, represents him, with many of the monks of Battle, as laying under an infamous imputation:ⁱ but this is hardly reconcileable with the grant made to this abbat of a pension, at the Dissolution, of a hundred marks;^k particularly as the instrument which bestowed the pension stipulated that it should be vacated in case of the king preferring him. Nor is there any allusion to this charge in the letter of the visitors to Lord Cromwell, when the abbey was dissolved.^l

Abbat Hamond surrendered his monastery to the king May 27th, 30 Hen. VIII.^m

In the 26th of Henry the Eighth, this monastery was valued, according to Dugdale, at 880*l.* 14*s.* 7½*d.*: according to Speed, at 987*l.* 0*s.* 10½*d.*ⁿ

After the dissolution of the greater monasteries, King Henry the Eighth granted the site of Battle abbey, with the manor, by letters patent dated August 15th, in the 31st year of his reign, A. D. 1539, to Sir Anthony Browne.^o

Sir William Burrell preserves the following extract from the will of the Lord Hoo (MS. Coll. Armor. I. 7, fol. 61), relating to the foundation of a chantry at "St. Benyngnys" altar in the abbey-church, in the time of abbat Dertemouth:

"I Thomas Hoo kn^t. lord of Hoo and Hastings the xijth. daye of February the yere of King Henry the Sixt the xxij. being in good mynde, make this my will and ordenaunce after the fourme that followith; first Y will that mine feoffys and myn executors ordeyn xx^{ti}. marks wourth land of yerely vallue, theye to yeve it into mortmayn to the abbot and convent of Batail and to their successors, or to yeve theym money as mine executors can agree with theym; they to fynd two monkes synggyng imperpetuite at Saint Beningnys awtyr, in the said abbey for me and myn awncetours and for suche personnes as myne executors wyll ordeyne."^p

Stowe says, the abbat of Battle's inn in London was between the bridge house and Battle bridge, on the bank of the river Thames; the walks and gardens thereunto appertaining being on the other side of the way. Before the gate of the said house, he adds, was called the Maze: where is now an inn called the Flower de Lys.

Then is Battle bridge, so called of Battle abbey, for that it standeth on the ground, and over a water-course flowing out of the Thames pertaining to that abbey, and was therefore both builded and repaired by the abbats of that house, as being hard adjoining to the abbat's lodging.^q

Leland found the following works in the LIBRARY of Battle abbey:

Of the REGISTERS and other MANUSCRIPTS relating to Battle abbey the following are perhaps the most important now extant:

It is in quarto, written upon a hundred and twenty-nine leaves of vellum; and is of an early date, though imperfect at the end. Dugdale's extracts from it have been extensive.^s

Gough, in his Additions to Camden, vol. i. p. 204, says, "Here were kept the Conqueror's sword and coronation robe, and that curious Roll of the Normans who came over with him. This was seen by Leland, in the first volume of whose Collectanea it is printed: but Sir William Dugdale says all the copies are erroneous by transcribing, or by the frauds of the monks, who enrolled in it any benefactors or eminent persons. ^t By the kindness of John Fuller, Esq., of Rose Hill, the Editors of the present Work have been favoured with the use of two volumes, from the Collections for the History of Sussex, formerly made by the Rev. William Hayley of Brightling; marked Sussex, A. and Sussex, B. The first of these bears the following title:

"Sussex: viz. Registrum Monasterii de Bello; e duobus codicibus MSS. penes honoratissimum dominum dominum Whistlerum Webster baronetum, ejusdem monasterii possessorem, descriptum. Hæc scripsit W. H., A. D. 1762."

At the back of the title is this address to the reader: "Quicquid in hoc libro, et in alio (ad quem ex hoc non raro remittitur lector) continetur, et e Registro monasterii de Bello à me ubicunque describitur; istius et Registri et monasterii possessori, viro utique moribus suavisissimis, comitate summâ, benignitate suâ omnium amorem sibi concilianti, id totum debitum gratum agnosco. Autographa amborum voluminum ipse habet: quorum primum, simul cum ejusdem transcriptione (seu potius imperfectâ et mutilatâ ex scriptione) à Regali et Cottoniano librario Davide Casley facta; ac etiam cum alterius Epitome ab eodem D. C. facta; mihi votis indulgens perhumanitèr mutuum credidit. Primum itaque Volumen ex originali transcripti libro: in altero verò Casleianam Epitomen secutus sum, cujus Autographon mihi nondum contigit videre. W. H."

4. "Registrum Cartarum Monasterii S. Martini de Bello." MS. Harl. Brit. Mus. num. 3586. A volume in small folio, consisting of sixty-three leaves; but imperfect. Its contents consist chiefly of law pleadings, forms of instruments, presentations to livings, manumissions, &c.^a

5. "Rentale et Consuetudinarium de Bello." A manuscript in the Augmentation Office at Westminster; a large and handsome folio volume, on vellum, consisting of two hundred and ninety-two leaves. Bishop Tanner, in his Notitia Monastica, gives the following as its title: "Rentale et Consuetudinarium Hundredæ de Bello cum membris et parcellis spectantibus ad eandem, factum per examin. tenentium et fide dignorum Hundredæ prædictæ, ac etiam Adæ Ywode tunc senesc. et Ricardi Curtays ballivi domini prædicti, temp. venerabilis in Christo patris Thomæ Ludelowe Monasterii de Bello abbatis, et Willielmi Mersh cellar. ejusdem monasterii, anno R. R. Hen. post Conquestum Angliæ sexti 8vo." This title, however, is only applicable to the hundred of Battle. The manuscript has several distinct titles in other parts of the book, showing it to be not merely of the 8th of Henry the Sixth, but of the 2d, 3d, and other years of that king.^b

"Registri Monasterii de Bello. Vol. I."

The first part of the volume here described contains a collection of pleadings and records of liberties, as far as fol. 43 of the original manuscript. The next portion contains Royal charters of lands and liberties; papal bulls of privileges and immunities; &c. Then follows, at p. 127, "Rubicella regendi monasterium monasterio vacante."

The second part of the volume is entitled,

"Epitome Chartarum Monasterii Sancti Martini de Bello: ex autographo, penes honoratissimum dominum dominum Thomam Webster baronetum, reservato; facta per D. Casley bibliothecæ Reg. et Cotton. Custodem. A. D. 1727."

ARMS of BATTLE ABBEY. There are two Coats allotted to this abbey in the second Plate of Arms of Religious Houses in Bishop Tanner's Notitia Monastica, CLXVI. CLXVII. These are both given in the initial Letter to the present Account of the monastery. The first, Ar. on a cross Gu. a mitre in centre, between two orbs or mounds in fesse, and two crowns in pale, Or. The second, Gu. on a cross Or, the text letter t Az. Two crowns in the first and fourth quarters, and two swords erect, points upwards in the second and third quarters. The Notes on the first of these Coats in the last edition of the Notitia Monastica, say: "Thus in the first edition; but Mr. Anstis thinks, that instead of the mounds, there should be two swords in pale, on both sides of the mitre." Reyner, p. 215, and Fuller, Ch. Hist. B. VI. p. 322, both agree in the second Coat; as well as Mr. Le Neve, with this difference, that instead of the text letter in the middle of the cross, he gives a mitre.^b An old Collection of Monastic Heraldry among the Lansdowne manuscripts gives the same Coat as Le Neve, but with different blazonry; the field being Ar.

Various charters, rentals, court-rolls, &c. of Battle abbey were formerly among Lord Montague's muniments at Cowdray.

Rot. Harl. A. 17, referred to by Bishop Tanner as the foundation charter of Battle, in reality is "Computus Ricardi de Reysona de abbate de Bello et de manerio de Hampsted, 4 Edw. III." and the cross Gu.^c The Arms of this abbey are still differently given in the Procession Roll of the Lords to Parliament in 1512, viz. Gu. a cross Ar. In the first quarter a mitre with labels, and in the second a crown, Or.^d A fourth Coat will be presently described.

The SEAL of BATTLE ABBEY affixed to the Surrender, still remaining in the Augmentation Office, represents, on one side, a large and handsome church, with an ornamented gateway and tower, and four turrets, with the legend, SIGILLVM . CONVENTVS . SANCTI . MARTINI . DE . BELLO. The impression, which on this side is of white wax, is on the reverse of red wax (a practice usual with this abbey, and intended most likely to distinguish the common Seal from the abbat's Seal). This side represents under a Gothic canopy, ornamented with the history of St. Martin and his cloak, a whole-length figure of a mitred abbat, having in one hand his crozier, in the other a book: in each of the side compartments are whole-length figures also; one a female with an olive-branch, emblematical of peace, the other a bishop, with his mitre and crozier. Underneath these figures are two shields of Arms; that on the right England and France quarterly, on the left the Arms of the abbey, varying from any of the Coats already described: namely, on a cross, between four crowns, a mitre; Legend, SIGIL . JOHIS . DEI . GRA . ABBATIS . DE . BELLO.

The RUINS of BATTLE ABBEY bear ample testimony to its ancient magnificence. Their circuit is computed at not less than a mile. Gough says, Sir Anthony Browne bought the site of a previous grantee. What his son, the first Lord Montague, built here, he adds, is now the most ruinous part of the abbey; being only the shell of a suite of rooms at the south end, with two towers at the east end, which were standing when Buck's view was taken, 1737, but are now down.^a The grand entrance, a large square building embattled at the top, with a handsome octagon tower at each corner, faces the town of Battle. It is supposed to be of the time of Henry the Sixth. The ground-plot of the abbey church cannot now be traced. Some of the arches of the west end of the cloister remain. The refectory, or abbey hall, above fifty paces long, had a carved roof of Irish oak, which Mr. Gough says was carried to Lord Montague's seat at Cowdray; the walls are now open to the top. There is another building, a little detached from the abbey, of the same kind, having twelve windows on one side and six on the other, presenting the remains of a room a hundred and sixty-six feet by thirty-five. The abbey-kitchen had five fire-places, and was arched at the top.

It may not be irrelevant, here, to mention the parish church of Battle, which stands just without the abbey wall; in a recess of the chancel of which is the monument of Sir Anthony Browne.

Sir William Burrell, in his manuscript Collections for Sussex, says, the parish of Battle, before the Conquest, was called the parish of St. Mary in the Wood; but William the Conqueror, when he built and endowed the abbey, exempted that parish from episcopal jurisdiction, and made the Incumbent, afterwards called the Dean, receive institution and induction from the abbat; by a composition between whom and the bishop, the latter was to grant the dean a licence to enter upon the cure of souls. This, he adds, is what Dean Watson alludes to, when, in his Complete Incumbent, he speaks of the Dean of Battle.^b

Anthony Viscount Montague sold the site and demesnes of the monastery of Battle, with the advowson of the parochial church, to Sir Thomas Webster, Bart.^c whose descendant, Sir Godfrey Webster, is the present owner.

The Priors of ST. NICHOLAS in EXETER, and BRECKNOCK in Wales, were CELLS to BATTLE ABBEY.

sæcularia ex insigni Normannorum ac magni principis Rollonis stemmate piissimus dux Willielmus pater patriæ et limes ducatus et regni merito nominandus, ipso in mundi climate prout lucifer oxortus, cum mira industria per Dei gratiam propria liberalitate, cum Gallicæ nobilitatis favore auctus, principatum proprium hæreditario sibi jure à patre relictum feliciter optinuit, post multos et innumeros calamitatum turbines, illud potenter tandem ad manum pacifica-vit. Interea verò et Anglicæ regnum monarchiæ eidem duci Willielmo, à suo consanguineo rege Edwardo è mundo migrante, hæreditario jure delegatum relinquitur. Quod cum hostiliter à suo perjuro quodam Haraldo invasum me-moratus dux rescisset, ad id vi vel arte obtinendum, suorum consilio et auxilio fultus, animum et vires convertit. Classe igitur parata ingenti plerique comites multi nobiles multi illustres, multi etiam non suæ ditionis proceres vel barones, sed et ex circumjacentium finibus provinciarum innumeri sese ejus comitatu pro sibi innata clementia adjunxerunt.
Dux ergo cum incredibili exercitu, divino comitante favore, navigationem aggressus, prosperè tandem prope castrum
Pevenesel dictum applicuit, exercitu per litoris spacia latè
.^a exilientes Angliæ nonnulli gaudenter te-rere i^a dere, contiget ducem è navi exire . . .
. . . .^a in faciem corruisse, litoreque naso vulnerato aliquantum cruentato, terram protensis primò comprehendisse manibus. Verum cum hinc plerique infausti auspicii fortunam mussitantes pertimescerent, intererat et dapifer ducis, Willielmus filius Osberti cognominatus, vir miræ probitatis et præpollens ingenio; qui mox animos nutantium dejectos hujusmodi audacter relevavit oraculo. 'Desinite,' inquit, 'viri hæc in adversum interpretari, quia profectò hinc prosperitatis datur auspiciu. Hic enim Angliam utrisque palmis complexam conquisivit, propriaque progenie hæreditandam suo cruore signans dicavit, hancque ex divinæ dis-positionis præsagio potenter optinere meruit.'

Sicque pro voto cedentibus causis, dux ibidem non diu moratus, haud longè situm, qui Hastings vocatur cum suis adiit portum, ibique opportunum nactus locum, ligneum agiliter castellum statuens providè munivit. Navium verò parte maxima dispensatoriè jam combusta ne scilicet re-patriandi spe aliqui forsitan negligentius cœptis instarent, dux post modicum rex futurus, sollicitius circumjacentia sibimet subjugare festinabat. Quo agnito, regni invasor Haraldus, collecto maturiùs exercitu, ad eum expellendum, vel potiùs cum suis omnibus exterminandum, ad locum qui nunc Bellum nuncupatur temerariè festinans, venire non formidavit. Occurrit audacter et dux, equitum cuneis circumseptus. Perveniensque ad locum collis qui Hethelande dicitur, à parte Hastingsarum situm, dum sese invicem armis munire contendunt, ac eidem duci lorica ad induendum porrigitur, ex inproviso inversa ipsi oblata est. Quod ad-vertentes qui aderant, dum uti infortunii præsagium execrarentur, mox memoratus ducis dapifer solita cunctos con-stantia compescuit, protestatus et hinc quoque prosperitatis collatum indicium, quod scilicet ea quæ ante restabant, ut postposita securiter illi cessura forent. Sed dux nichil motus vultu placido lorica induens, digna memoriæ concionatus dixit. 'Scio karissimi quod si sortibus crederem bellum hodie nullatenus introirem, sed ego me in omni negotio creatori meo fiducialiter committens, nec sortibus credidi, nec umquam sortilegos amavi. Unde et nunc de ejus auxilio securus, ad vestras qui mei gratia hoc initis certamen corroborandas manus ac mentes, votum facio, me in hoc certaminis loco pro salute cunctorum et hîc nominatim occumbentium, ad honorem Dei et sanctorum ejus quo servi Dei adjuventur, congruum cum digna libertate fun-daturum monasterium, quod ita ut mihi conquirere potero, liberum vel oblatum universis propitiabile fiat asilum.'

Cumque multi auditores, et quidam Majoris-Monasterii monachus Willielmus Faber cognominatus adessent, qui quondam ipsius ducis serviens hinc fabri nomen obtinuit, quod cum sodalibus venatum aliquando profectus, sagittis fortè deficientibus, cum quendam fabrum hujusmodi operis ignarum adissent, ipse malleis arreptis mox sagittam artificio ingenio compegit, postmodumque voluntate mu-tata ad Majus-Monasterium quod tunc quam maximè re-ligionis fama rutilabat, sese contulerat, tunc verò divulgato ipsius ducis in Angliam adventu, gratia commodi ecclesiæ suæ, cum reliquis exercitui sese immiscuerat, mox ut votum audivit procedens, quatinus ut ei pro voto cederent omnia, idem monasterium in venerationem beati pontificis Martini nominatim fundaretur suggessit. Cujus cum votis et dux annuens devotus ita fieri benignè spondisset, post pacem conditionalem à duce per internuncios tertio oblatam et ab hostibus refutatam, denuo juxta Merlini vaticinium, gente Normannica in tunicis ferreis Anglorum audacter deiciente supercilium, armis viriliter decertatum est. Verum cum Anglis indissolubiler cum rege suo collem quo nunc ec-clesia consistit præoccupantibus entur cederet, tandem strenuissimus Boloniæ comes Eustachius clam callida præmeditata arte, fugam cum exercitu, duce simulante, super Anglos sparsim agiliter insequentes cum manu valida à tergo irruit, sicque et duce hostes ferociter invadente ipsis interclusis utrinque prosternuntur innumeri; dispergitur, deprimitur, labitur, laniatur ac necatur inermis ac pedes misera gens Anglica, regeque suo belli fortuito ictu pro-strato, per diversa dissiliens latebras quærit. Innumeri itaque in campo vel potius in fuga prostratis, oculis cunctorum suprema patebat calamitas. Siquidem et inter hostiles gladios miserabile quoddam in proximo spaciosè protentum ex naturali telluris hiatu vel forsitan ex procellarum conca-vatione præcipitium vastè patens, licet uti in vastitate dumis vel tribulis obsitum oculis minus prævideretur, innumeros et maximè Normannorum Anglos persequentium suffocavit, nam dum inscii cum impetu dissilirent, ibidem in præceps acti flebiliter contriti necabantur. Quod quidem baratrum, sortito ex accidenti vocabulo, Malfossed hodieque nuncupatur.

Has inter miserias lugubre patebat spectaculum, arva cadaveribus operiri, nec in girum obtutibus aliud quam sanguinis ruborem offerri, convalles undique defluens cruo-ris rivus replese ad instar fluvii procul videbatur. Quanta putas illic tunc strages facta est de victis, cum et de victoribus decem millium in brevi, ut fertur, supputationem ex-cesserit? O quanta humani cruoris inibi effusa est unda, ubi infortunati non tantum labebantur, sed et necabantur.
Quantus armorum fragor, quantus ictuum stridor, quantus morientium clamor, quantus dolor, quanta suspiria, quot gemitus, quot supremæ calamitatis diræ voces personuerunt dignè quis æstimabit! Verè stupenda proponitur ac deflenda infelicitatis humanæ misera conditio. In horum ergo contemplatione succumbente calamo, subjungendum jam videtur, quod tandem finito certamine, Normannis Anglia cessit cum triumpho. Designato igitur loco quo hostilis temerariæ invasionis cecidit signum, dux ulterius properè progrediens quæcumque adire valebat suo juri mancipari festinabat. Tandem ergo ad regni metropolim perveniens Lundoniam, rationisque ac pacis confederatione civibus ob-lata, ac demum ab his etsi ægrè suscepta, gaudenter ut hæres et dominus excipitur. Denuo autem et regni parte nonnulla sagaciter pacificata, cum favore procerum ac nobilibus regni ad Natale Domini intrante anno incarnationis ipsius Mxlvij. regni insignitus solio Anglicæ monarchiæ obtinens coronam digno diademate redimitur.

Quo facto, quia multis et innumeri præoccupatus ne-gotiis, regnum in brevi unire ac pacificare nullatenus quiverat, plura diutius necessario omisit, quæ maturiùs exequenda proposuerat. Per plurimum enim temporis ad municipiorum expugnationem atque ad rebellium subjugandam cervicositatem sollicitus animum occupavit et vires. Unde factum est, ut quemadmodum à Deo electo et promoti regi cedentibus pro voto prosperis, nec compatriotarum hostilis astutia, nec malignorum versuta machinamenta, nec alienigenarum incursus minaciter propositus obsessent, sed ipso ubique in auxilio cœlesti confiso, hinc regni gloria magnificè roboraretur. Et merito; erat enim moralitate præcipuus, liberalitate munificus, mansuetudine spectabilis, ingenio præpollens, animo constans, armis strenuus, in inchoandis magnanimus, in acquirendis efficacissimus, in regendis pacificus, in legum statutis reformandis ac servandis studiosus, divinitatis cultor assiduus, totus ecclesiarum utili-tati deditus, et quod magis mirari necesse est, cum tot gentibus imperaret, adeo ei fomes virtutum discretio domina-batur, ut aliàs invictus, rationis facili ultroneus suggestionem

oportune vinceretur. Quocirca et potenter imperii sui fines adauxit, et contra spem omnium suo tempore strenue pacificatum gubernavit, hæredibusque suis feliciter possidendum reliquit. Sed hæc hactenus.

Nunc verò quia minus necessariè propositi textus exordium protendisse ex accidenti videtur, jam arctius stilo inchoati opusculi materiam sulcando rimante, libet loci nostri prima rudimenta ex amussim, ut promissimus, explanare. Igitur præclarissimo rege Willielmo pluribus, ut meminimus, intento, inter alia et voti prætaxati efficaciam etsi animo non amisit, diutius tamen temporis illius præoccupationibus intermisit. Verùm conscia interiùs instante conscientia, exterius quoque non facile supradicto monacho Willielmo Fabro horum mentionem studiosiùs inculcante seposito, tandem eidem monacho ut optaverat rex quia ad manum habebatur operis fabricam committens, præcepit quatinus in antefacto congressionis loco, accitis secum suæ ecclesiæ aliquibus fratribus, oportuno festinaret fundari monasterium. Quod is alacriter excipiens, Majus-monasterium ocus adiit, hincque quatuor monachos, scilicet, Theobaldum cognomine Vetulum, Willielmum Coche, Rotbertum de Bolonia, Rotbertum Blancard, viros personalitate ac religione præcipuos, secum in Angliam adduxit. Qui memoratum belli locum considerantes, cum ad tam insignem fabricam minus idoneum, ut videbatur, arbitrarentur, in humiliori non procul loco versus ejusdem collis occidentalem plagam aptum habitandi locum eligentes, ibidem, ne nil operis agere viderentur, mansiunculas quasdam fabricaverunt. Qui locus hucusque Herste cognominatus, quandam habet spinam in hujus rei monumentum.

Igitur, cum inter hæc regis animus sollicitus de fabricæ provectu quæreretur, ab iisdem fratribus ei suggestum est, quod locus, ille ubi ecclesiam fieri decreverat, uti in colle situs arenti gleba siccus et aquarum foret indigus, atque ob hoc oportere tanto operi aptiorem locum in proximo, si placitum haberetur delegari. Quod cum rex percepisset, indignatus refugit, ocusque jussit in eodem loco quo hoste prostrato sibi cesserat triumphus, basilicæ fundamenta jacere. Cumque obniti non præsumentes aquarum penuria causarentur, verbum ad hæc memoriale magnificus rex protulisse fertur, 'Ego,' inquit, 'si Deo annuente vita comes fuerit, eidem loco ita prospiciam, ut magis ei vini abundet copia quàm aquarum in alia præstanti abbatiæ.' Denuo quoque illis de loci conquerentibus inopportunitate, eo quod scilicet per vicinia latiùs uti per silvestre solum nusquam ad ædificium apti lapides reperirentur, rex de thesauro suo ad omnia sufficientiam proponens sumptuum, delegavit etiam naves de proprio, quibus à Cadomensis vico lapidum copia ad opus propositum transveheretur. Cumque statutum regis exequentes aliquantam de Normannia lapidum portionem advexissent, interim, ut fertur, matronæ cuidam religiosæ revelatum est, quatinus in designato sibi per visum loco fodientes, ibidem ad opus præmeditatum lapidum invenirent abundantiam. Non longe itaque à præsignato ecclesiæ ambitu, ut jussum fuerat, quærentes, tantam ac talem lapidum repererunt copiam, ut manifestè pateret inibi divinitus ad prædestinatum opus lapidum ab ævo reconditum thesaurum. Jactis ergo tandem fundamentis præstantissimi, ut tunc temporis habebatur, operis, secundum regis statum altare majus in eodem loco quo regis Haraldi signum quod Standard vocant corruisse visum est, providè statuunt. Et licet peritissimi non vili commercio asciti operi præessent artifices, tamen exactoribus plus propriis quam Jesu Christi deditis, negligentius cæpti fabrica ut specie tenus ad hoc magis quam studio intendentem proficiebat. Interim quoque et infra designatum monasterii ambitum sibimet idem fratres insumptuosas quidem quo degerent domunculas ædificant. Sicque interdiu scævo exemplo in exorsis, die diem recrastinante, et regiæ opes quæ ad fabricæ accelerationem pro libitu cedebant pro libitu et dispensantur, multaque ex ejusdem regis devota liberalitate illuc collata indiscretè distrahuntur.

Præterea, sicut meminimus, sese tum rebus habentibus, regi suggestum est quatinus ex his unum qui asciti fuerant fratribus cui cæteri intenderent abbatem inibi præficeret. Electus igitur ad hoc prænominatus Rotbertus Blancard perneciter ecclesiam suam, Majus videlicet Monasterium, devotione ductus adiit, atque cum omnium congratulatione regrediens, cum jam oceani prope persulcasset æquora, Angliam intraturus, divino quo ignoratur commotis fluctibus judicio, sævis absorptus gurgitibus, regimen præpositum è mundo sublatus, ad alium divina dispositione prædestinatum, transmisit. Quo comperto et tandem regiis auribus exposito, communicato itidem consilio misit prædictus Willielmus Faber qui totius loci curam administrabat, et à Majori-Monasterio alterum fratrem ad ejusdem abbatiæ regimen suscipiendum ascivit GAUSBERTUM nomine, virum religionis, summæ mansuetudinis ac multiplici virtutum insignitum dote. Quem ad designatum festinantem locum quatuor ex consodalibus secuti sunt fratres, Johannes scilicet, Hamelinus, Ainardus, Leffelmus, qui simul cum eo prosperè Angliam appulsi ad destinatum hilares locum pervenerunt.

Ecclesia itaque de Bello tenet circa se unam leugam. Ipsa tenet Boccham,^a et habet ibi dimidiam hidam. De ista dimidia hida est una virgata foris extra leugam, et pertinet ad Croherste, quam Walterus filius Lamberti excambiavit pro quadam silva quæ erat infra leugam, et hac ratione tenet illam. In Bece quam tenet Osbernus de comite Augi tres virgatas. In Wasingate^b dicit liber regis quod ecclesia habet unam virgatam, sed non habet nisi dimidiam. In Wilmintæ dicit liber regis quod ecclesia habet sex virgatas, sed non habet nisi quinque. In Nirefeld^c habet sex virgatas. In Peneherste habet dimidiam hidam. In Hov habet dimidiam hidam. In Philesam habet unam virgatam. In Cattesfelde habet tres virgatas. In Bulintune habet duas hidas una virgata minus. In Croherste habet unam virgatam. In Wiltinges habet unam virgatam. In Holintune habet unam virgatam.

Omnes istæ terræ sunt infra leugam sicut dictum est: et de his terris composita est ipsa leuga quam ecclesia de Bello possidet, quam etiam rex Willielmus liberam et quietam ab omni consuetudine terrenæ servitutis, et ab omni subjectione episcoporum, et maxime episcoporum Cices-trensiū seu aliarum quarumlibet personarum dominatione et oppressionem vel exactione, sicut supradictum est, fecit, et carta sua confirmavit.

Acra habet in longitudine quadraginta perticas et quatuor in latitudine. Quod si habuerit viginti in longitudine, habebit octo in latitudine, et sic per reliqua.

NUM. III.

ANNO ab incarnatione Domini mxcvj. dux Normannorum nobilissimus Willelmus cum manu valida pugnatorum in Angliam transnavigavit, ut regnum Angliæ sibi à suo consanguineo rege Edwardo dimissum, de manu Haraldi, qui illud tyrannica fraude invaserat, abstraheret, sibi que illud jure hæreditario possidendum obtineret. Hoc audito, Haraldus cum exercitu contra illum advenit, duce strenuissimo Willielmo audacter itidem ei cum exercitu, ad locum qui nunc Bellum vocatur, occurrente. Dux igitur devotus in procinctu bellico jam armatus, convocatis baronibus et militibus suis, universos exortatione sua et spe promissionum fiducialiter monet pugnæ insistere, atque ad eorum corda roboranda coram eis cum favore omnium votum Deo fecit, ut si divina pietas illi victoriam de suis adversariis concederet, eundem Deo locum sicut sibi conquirere posset, liberum et quietum omnino offerret, ibique cœnobium quo Dei servi congregarentur, pro omnium illorumque nominatim qui in eodem bello occumberent salute construeret, qui locus refugii et auxilii omnibus esset quatinus jugi bonorum operum instantia commissa illic effusi cruoris redimerentur. His animosiores effecti pugnam constanter ineunt, Deoque auctore tandem pridie idus Octobris hoste prostrato exercituque fugato triumpho potiuntur. Tyrannide itaque hostili undique prostrata, in brevi etiam tota pene Anglia pacificata eodem anno dux armipotens regio diademate insignitus apud Lundoniam mirificè ut nobilem decebat coram regni primoribus, in regem totius Angliæ elevatur, atque à viro venerabili Aldredo, Eboracensi archiepiscopo, sacra unctione linitus coronatur, electo ad archipræsulatum Cantuariæ, Stigando regi contraire conanti.

Rex itaque collatæ sibi gratiæ non ingratus memor fuit Dei, et in bono proposito delectatus est, opereque votum gestiens prælibatum efficere, in prædicto certaminis loco tantæ victoriæ condignum præcepit fabricari monasterium. Et quia illud in honorem sanctæ Trinitatis et beatæ Mariæ necnon et beati Martini confessoris Christi sanxerat consecrandum, ejusdem sancti Martini quosdam accivit de Majori-monasterio monachos qui operi præessent, religionisque monachiae fundamenta jacerent, ut simul cum ecclesiæ fabrica religionis ibidem norma proficeret, eis que ad opus accelerandum pecuniarum expensas pro nichilo ducens thesauraria sua pandi faciebat quotiens voluissent. Sed filii alieni non tam Jesu Christi quàm quæ sua sunt quærentes negligentius operi insistebant. Ecclesiæ igitur structura in dies proficiente, cum eam devotus rex magnis opibus et regiis dignitatibus mirificè ditare disponderet, eo quod ibidem tonantis gratiâ victoriam et regnum sibi suisque hæredibus obtinuisset, ob victoriæ ejusdem memoriam perpetuandam ipsum locum Bellum appellari voluit, statuitque conventum ad minus lx. monachorum ibidem congregari, proponens eandem ecclesiam cum dedicari faceret, in tantum ditare, ut conventus ejusdem omni tempore numero septies viginti monachorum existeret. Sed homo proponit Deus autem disponit, nam id perficere proh dolor morte, quæ regi æquè imperat ut mendico, præventus nequivit. Tamen suæ dilectionis memoriam suis monachis reliquit, constituens in primo monachis ejusdem ecclesiæ ad cotidianos usus panem regiæ mensæ aptum, qui Simenel vulgò vocatur, habere pondere lx. solidorum, et in quadragesima de quartario majorem ut elemosinæ pars sibi cederet. Huic ergo ecclesiæ sancti Martini de Bello hanc inprimis regali auctoritate dignitatem concessit et dedit, ut habeat curiam suam per omnia et regiam libertatem et consuetudinem in omnibus possessionibus suis tractandi de suis rebus et negotiis et justitiam per se tenendam, et ut sit libera et quietaperpetuum ab omni subjectione et exactione episcoporum et ab omni calumpnia Majoris-monasterii et quarumlibet personarum dominatione, sicut ecclesia Christi Cantuariæ. Et si quis latro, vel homicida, vel aliquo crimine reus, timore mortis fugiens, ad hanc ecclesiam confugerit, in nullo lædatur, sed liber omnino dimittatur. Abbati quoque per totum regnum Angliæ latronem vel furem aut alio crimine damnatum à supplicio liberare liceat si fortè supervenerit. Thesaurus etiam inventus in terris ejusdem ecclesiæ totus illius sit, similiter et mordre si acciderit, et omnes homines illius ubique à theloneo liberi sint et omni consuetudine terrenæ servitutis, sicut cartæ ipsius testantur.

Dedit autem eidem ecclesiæ in possessionem æternam Leugam circumjacentem liberam et quietam in perpetuum ab omni geldo, et scoto, et hidagiis, et denegeldis, et opere pontium et castellorum, et parcorum, et clausuris, et exercitiis, et omnibus placitis, et auxiliis, et querelis, et siris, et hundredis, et lestagiis, cum saca et socna, et toll, et theam, et infangenetheof, et warpeni, et hamsocne, et forstal, et blodwite, et cildwite, et latrocinio, et omni consuetudine terrenæ servitutis, et ab omni exactione et subjectione episcoporum Cicestræ, et quarumlibet personarum dominatione, ita ut nullius præter abbatis et monachorum ejus ditioni subjaceat, nec in ipsa vel in aliqua ejusdem ecclesiæ possessione quisquam placitari aut venari, vel quodlibet negotium exercere sine permissione præsumat, super forisfacturam regiam; nec etiam si casu quicquam captum fuerit efferatur, sed ecclesiæ sit.

Interea nonnullis illuc religionis desiderio confluentibus, quam pluribus etiam liberos suos in Dei instruendos servicio offerentibus, ecclesiæ utilitati per singula intendens rex, ex his quos à Majori-monasterio acciverat, quendam monachum equidem strenuum et religioni maximè deditum, Gausbertum nomine, prædictæ ecclesiæ abbatem præfecit, ea tamen conditione ut nullatenus ipse vel successorum ejus aliquis Majori-monasterio subjaceret, sed ut religionem ibidem adhuc novellam sua prudentia ad perfectum perduceret, atque post ipsum omni tempore quem sibi concors congregatio fratrum regulariter elegerit de eadem congregatione, ecclesiæ Belli cum regis voluntate abbas succederet.

DEDIT etiam idem inclitus rex Willielmus eidem ecclesiæ de Bello, in Cantia regale manerium quod vocatur Wi, cum omnibus appendiciis suis septem swulingarum, id est, hidarum, ex sua dominica corona, cum omnibus libertatibus et regalibus consuetudinibus, ita liberum et quietum sicut ipse liberiùs et quietiùs tenuit, vel ut rex dare potuit, scilicet, ab omni geldo et scoto et reliquis quæ suprascripta sunt, et ab omni consuetudine terrenæ servitutis. Quod cum ecclesiæ eidem conferret, verbum memoriale et merito recolendum ipse ter prædicandus princeps dixisse memoratur. Siquidem quibusdam tantæ largitatis causa mirantibus, 'Ego,' ait, 'istud corpore meo aufero et animæ meæ confero. Qua de re,' inquit, 'si corpus illud liberè et quietè tenere prævaluit, multo dignius est ut anima quæ melior pars hominis est hoc si fieri potest liberiùs atque quietiùs possideat.'

Hujus itaque manerii ab antiquitate hæc præ cæteris dignitas semper extitit, ut cum suo hundredo viginti duobus hundredis et dimidio ad socnam illius pertinentibus præesset, de quibus omnibus quotiens ad comitatus vel ad alias consuetudinales collectiones convenire debent, vicecomes de Chent præposito de Wi, vel ministro ejus loco et termino designato litteris suis sigillatis mandare debet, et ipse deinde consuetudinaliter summonere. Quibus collectis, de omnibus placitis et forisfacturis prædictorum hundredorum præpositus de Wi vel minister ejus vadimonia accipiet et duos denarios similiter. Hundredum verò de Wi liberum est et quietum propter istam summonitionem ab omni consuetudine, et sicut olim regi, ita nunc ecclesiæ sancti Martini de Bello proprium permanet.

quia tunc episcopo Bajocensi, Odoni, fratri scilicet suo, rex Cantiae comitatum totum dederat liberum et concesserat, iccirco ecclesiae suae de Bello duos quos ipse habebat in dominio suo denarios dedit, tertio ab episcopo cui comitatus cesserat retento.

Succedente verò tempore postquam praedictus episcopus propriis infortuniis subactus comitatum praedictum amisit, idem tertius denarius in redditibus regiis computatus remansit.

In his verò quam maximè quanti pendebat rex utilitates ecclesiae de Bello propalabatur, dum quotiens edicta regalia vicecomitibus sive iusticiariis vel ministris eorum Cantiae constitutis de ejusdem ecclesiae negotiis destinarentur, hoc praecipuè regii continebant apices, ut omnes de manerio de Wi libertates regiasque consuetudines illibatas observarent, ut ecclesia et monachi sui de Bello, sicut ipse rex melius potuit ea omnia in pace manentes absque inquietudine possiderent.

Bristwoldintuna autem decem hidarum ex corona sua idem piissimus rex suae ecclesiae in Bearrocsira situm pro anima sua obtulit, et carta sua cum praedictis libertatibus et regalibus consuetudinibus confirmavit.

Craumareis quoque quinque hidarum quod est in Oxenfeldsira eadem regali auctoritate qua suprascripta eidem ecclesiae suae de Bello concessit et dedit.

Sub lege quoque eadem dedit eidem ecclesiae memoratus rex in Devenesira ecclesiam quandam domini sui de villa de Culuntuna, cum praebendis quinque ad eandem pertinentibus.

De Exonia.

VERUM quoniam in ejusdem provinciae eximia civitate Exoniensi magni nominis et famae ab antiquitate pro miraculorum ibidem frequentia, sancti Olavi regis et martyris exstabat capella illam quoque rex merito praekonandus uti cum devotione munificus suae ecclesiae liberam possidendam delegavit cum terra quadam Sirefordia et Cheneberia, et aliis terris vel decimis ad eandem pertinentibus.

Ad quae omnia recipienda illuc ab ecclesiae Belli conventu quidam frater Gunterus, vir strenuus primò directus est. Qui ibidem paululum remoratus cum curae sibi injectae utiliter operam daret, revocatus et pro summæ religionis industria Torneiae abbas effectus est. Ad praedictarum verò curam ecclesiarum alius quidam monachus cum efficacia magnanimus, Cono nomine, adjuncto etiam sibi quodam fratre nomine Roberto destinatus, mox quemadmodum intimum decebat ecclesiae filium ad augendum et extollendum sibi locum commissum utiliter in posterum prospiciens, animum convertit. Pecunias siquidem reddituum vel oblationum seu etiam cum reliquiarum quo idem insignitur locus circumlatione, praedicationum, vel aliunde pro posse adunatus, terrarum vel ecclesiarum sive decimarum acquisitione cis citraque urbem Exoniensem ecclesiae loco scilicet sibi commissio perpetuabat, indeque tonantis gratia favorem quoque compatriotarum quam maximum obtinebat. Cumque et infra urbem quoque nonnullas mansiones vel terras emptione seu devotorum largitione jam possideret, deliberavit tandem vir sagax ingenio, eo quod eadem sancti Olavi ecclesia modica foret, monasterium in honorem sancti Nicolai confessoris Christi, ad fratrum habitationem accommodum, penes eandem fabricare. Quo cum superstitis regis Willielmi Conquestoris licentia et auctoritate animum spe in Deo quam maximè magnanimum inopia non angustante mirificè inchoato, pro posse diatim proficiebat. Paulatim ergo opere ad effectum tendente, et eodem jam aliquantum loco habitabili existente, accitis aliquot ab ecclesia Belli fratribus, coepit ibidem regulariter divinum celebrari officium, ad eorundem fratrum stipendia, cum omnibus ad ecclesiam sancti Olavi pertinentibus; ecclesia quoque praedicta de Coluntuna ubi prius habitaverant monachi cum quinque terris praebendarum scilicet Uppetona, Colebroche, Hinelande, Waevre, Esse et omnibus ad eam pertinentibus, ab abbate et conventu ecclesiae sancti Martini de Bello eidem ecclesiae sancti Nicolai delegatis, ea tamen conditione ut pro subjectionis recognitione ecclesiae sancti Martini de Bello, portio census definita, sexaginta solidi scilicet persolverentur.

Haec igitur ab ordine digredientes succinctè dixisse sufficiat. Caeterum ut omissis se calamus applicet. Magnanimus ecclesiae suae prospiciens rex mercatum in villa Belli dominico die liberum omnino et quietum ac ecclesiae et monachis absque ullius exactione jure perpetuo ut proprium ad disponendum constituit, et regia auctoritate confirmavit.

De Libertatibus.

ECCLESIAM itaque suam de Bello excellentissimus princeps et merito nominandus rex, Willielmus, et supra texuimus, cum leuga et omnibus maneriis suis vel possessionibus ad eam pertinentibus, ab omni consuetudine terrenae servitutis liberam et quietam inperpetuum esse constituit et regia auctoritate confirmavit, scilicet ab omni geldo, et scoto, et hidagio, et denegeldo, et siris, et hundredis, et omnibus placitis et querelis, et omnibus auxiliis et lestagiis, et sartis, et clausuris, et omnibus operibus castellorum et parcorum et pontium et exercituum; cum saca, et socna, et tholl, et theam, et infangenetheof, et warpeni, et hamsocne, et forstal, et blodwite, et cildwite, et latrocinio, si in terris ecclesiae illius acciderit. Quod si murdre inventum fuerit in aliquo loco super terram illius ecclesiae sancti Martini scilicet de Bello, in leuga, in maneriis vel in membris eorum, nullus se intromittere debet nisi abbas et monachi ejus. Et si thesaurus in praefatis terris ecclesiae illius repertus fuerit, ut ecclesiae, abbatis atque monachorum sit totus, concessit. Warennam etiam in ipsa leuga vel in maneriis ipsius ecclesiae ubique constituit. Praecepit verò idem nobilis princeps quatinus ecclesia illa cum omnibus terris et possessionibus suis libera sit et segura ab omni dominatione principum et baronum et episcoporum seu aliarum quarumlibet personarum exactione, et ut homines illius omnes liberi sint et quieti ab omni theloneo, et omnia mercata sua per totum regnum suum ubique absque theloneo faciant, et ne quis eis super hoc molestus sit super forisfacturam regiam. Insuper etiam et hoc addidit, ut si quis baronum vel hominum suorum illi ecclesiae aliquas terras vel possessiones aut de suo aliquid aliquando dederit, eandem per omnia libertatem vel regalem dignitatem, sicut supra diximus, in iisdem sua quoque habeat ecclesia, ut servi Dei undique quieti et liberi Deo in pace omnimodis intendant.

Eo etiam tempore quidam baronum regis, vir magnificus, Bernardus, cognomento de Novo-mercato, cujusdam praedictae ecclesiae Belli monachi, nomine Rogerii, apud eum aliquamdiu fortè commanentis, inportuna suggestione, eidem ecclesiae sancti Martini, apud Waliae provinciam, cum quadam possessione quae Vetus-villa dicitur, ecclesiam eidem contiguam sancti Johannis Evangelistae extra munitionem castris sui de Brechennio sitam, liberam cum omnibus ad eam pertinentibus donavit. Quam praedictus frater Rogerius, ut novus valebat colonus, cum summo studio et labore à fundamentis restaurans, associato sibi quodam alio suae ecclesiae monacho magnae sagacitatis viro, Waltero nuncupato, ibidem ad habitandum aedificia construebat, prece vel munere nonnullas interim à vicinis terrarum vel decimarum possessiones eidem loco acquirens, ac pro posse utpote in commisso fidelis, sibi creditum talentum possessionum multipliciter accumulatum matri suae ecclesiae impiger reportare satagens. Procedente verò tempore, fratribus ad loci commoda omnino intendentibus, ejusdem Bernardi uxor, Agnes nomine, fortè invaliditudine tacta, eidem loco ex viri sui assensu de propria hæreditate quandam villulam extra Waliam in Anglia sitam, quae Berinton vocatur, liberam omnino et quietam in possessionem æternam contulit. Sicque paulatim ex ipsius quoque Bernardi largitione, in terris molendinis ecclesiis sive decimis, ejusdem ecclesiae possessionibus auctis, et eodem loco cum suis omnibus, cum regiae auctoritatis et praefati Bernardi confirmatione, in jus ecclesiae Belli delegato, ab abbate et conventu ejusdem ecclesiae sancti Martini, praedicto Waltero priore jam constituto, decretum est ibidem, ex ejusdem ecclesiae monachis, Dei servos ad divinum regulariter peragendum officium adunatos degere, atque pro recognitione subjectionis, per annum census partem, viginti scilicet solidos ecclesiae de Bello persolvere.

Has igitur ecclesias cum terris et decimis et possessionibus atque hominibus, illis pertinentibus, idem rex, ut praedictum est, liberas et quietas ab omni exactione et consuetudine, ecclesiae de Bello concessit et dedit, praecipitque etiam ut clerici qui eas investiti tunc tenebant Ecclesiae Belli statutum annuatim census, illis vero obeuntibus de eisdem ecclesiis Abbas et monachi de Bello secundum quod eis utilius foret disponerent.

[Ex ipso autographo penes Comit. Winchelseyensem, ann. 1640. Hodie Cart. antiq. Mus. Brit. Harl. 83, A. 12. Vide etiam Cart. 2 Hen. V. m. 24.]

IN nomine sanctae et individuae Trinitatis, ego Wilhelmus Dei gratia rex Anglorum notum facio omnibus tam posteris quam praesentibus, archiepiscopis, episcopis, abbatibus, comitibus, baronibus, et omnibus fidelibus, Francis et Anglis, quod cum in Angliam venissem et in finibus Hastingsiae cum exercitu applicuissem contra hostes meos qui mihi regnum Angliae injustè conabantur auferre, in procinctu belli, jam armatus, coram baronibus et militibus meis, cum favore omnium, ad eorum corda roboranda votum feci, ecclesiam quandam ad honorem Dei construere pro communi salute, si per Dei gratiam obtinere possem victoriam. Quam cum essemus adepti, votum Deo solvens, in honorem sanctae Trinitatis et beati Martini confessoris Christi ecclesiam construxi pro salute animae meae et antecessoris mei regis Eadwardi, et uxoris meae Mathildis reginae, et successorum meorum in regno, et pro salute omnium quorum labore et auxilio regnum obtinui, et illorum maximè qui in ipso bello occubuerunt. Et quia in hoc loco ubi sic constructa est ecclesia Deus mihi victoriam praestitit in bello, ob victoriae memoriam, ipsum locum Bellum appellari volui.

Huic igitur ecclesiae sancti Martini de Bello imprimis dignitatem, regali auctoritate concedo, ut habeat curiam suam per omnia, et regiam libertatem, et consuetudinem tractandi de suis rebus vel negotiis, et justiciam per se tenendam. Sitque libera et quieta in perpetuum ab omni subjectione episcoporum, et quarumlibet personarum dominatione, sicut ecclesia Christi Cantuariæ. Et si quis latro, vel homicida vel aliquo crimine reus, timore mortis fugiens, ad hanc ecclesiam pervenerit, in nullo lædatur sed liber omnino dimittatur. Abbati verò ipsius ecclesiae liceat ubique latronem vel furem de suspendio liberare, si fortè supervenerit. Concedo etiam eidem ecclesiae leugam circumquaque adjacentem liberam et quietam ab omni geldo et scoto, et hidagiis, et denegeldis, et opere pontium, et castellorum, et parcorum, et clausuris, et exercitibus, et omnibus auxiliis, et placitis, et querelis, et sciris, et hundredis, cum saca, et soca, et tol, et theam, et infangenetheof, et warpeni, et lestagiis, et hamsocne, et forestall, et blodwite, et cildwite, et latrocinio; et liberam ab omni consuetudine terrenae servitutis, et ab omni exactione episcoporum.

Huic iterum ecclesiae sancti Martini de Bello do regale manerium quod vocatur Wi, cum omnibus appendiciis suis, ex mea dominica corona, cum omnibus libertatibus et regalibus consuetudinibus, ita liberum et quietum, sicut liberius et quietius tenui, vel ut rex dare potui, scilicet ab omni geldo, et scoto, et hidagiis, et denegeldis, et opere pontium et castellorum, et clausuris parcorum, et exercitibus, et omnibus auxiliis, et placitis, et querelis, et sciris, et hundredis, cum saca, et soca, et tol, et theam, et infangenetheof, et warpeni, et lestagiis, et hamsocne, et forstall, et blodewite, et cildwite, et latrocinio si acciderit. Similiter do duos denarios de omnibus forisfacturis et placitis omnium hundredorum quae pertinent ad summonitionem de Wi. In Dengemaris verò, quod est unum membrum de Wi, concedo eidem ecclesiae omnes maritimas consuetudines quas illic habui, cum omni wrec. Et si piscis qui craspeis vocatur, illic advenerit, abbatibus et monachorum sit totus: si vero intra terminos de Blachewase, et Horsemede, et Bradelle usque Withiburne appulerit, duas partes ejusdem piscis et linguam habeat ecclesia, sicut ego semper habui.

Do etiam eidem ecclesiæ hæc maneria, Alsistona, Limesfeld, Hov, Craumareis, Bristwoldintona cum omnibus appendiciis suis, libera et quieta, cum supradictis libertatibus, et regalibus consuetudinibus. Si infra leugam vel in maneriis ecclesiæ mordre evenerit, vel thesaurus inventus fuerit, abbatibus et monachorum sit utrumque; warrennam propriam in ipsa leuga habeat ecclesia et in omnibus suis maneriis. Do etiam eidem ecclesiæ sancti Martini ecclesiam de Radingis, et ecclesiam de Culintuna, et ecclesiam sancti Olavi de Exonia, cum terris, et decimis, et omnibus ad eas pertinentibus. Et si aliquis ex baronibus meis vel hominibus aliquid de suo eidem ecclesiæ in elemosinam dederit, easdem libertates quas concessi rebus quas ego eidem ecclesiæ dedi, eis concedo, et præsentī scripto ut supradicta regali auctoritate confirmo.

[Pat. 2 Edw. IV. p. 3, m. 15, per Inspex.]

WILLIELMUS Dei gratia rex Anglorum, Lanfranco archiepiscopo Cantuariensi, Stigando episcopo Ciscestre, omnibusque successoribus suis regnum Angliæ optinentibus, et cunctis fidelibus, salutem. Notum vobis facio, quod locum victoriæ meæ, sicut Deo juvante mihi conquisi, et rex liberum possedi, ita illa liberum, et ab omni exactione omnium hominum quietum obtuli Deo; ibidemque ecclesiam in honorem sancti Martini, quam de Bello appellari volui, eo quod mihi Deus, in eodem loco, tantam victoriam attribuit, ut de adversariis meis mihi injustè resistentibus triumpharem, regnumque mihi debitum et successoribus meis jure hæreditario perpetualiter possidendum acquirerem. Votum itaque, quod Deo, et sancto Martino vovi, implere festinans, idem monasterium monachicæ religionis dedicans, ex ordine et religione Majoris-monasterii fundavi, et inde primum abbatem Gausbertum, ad hoc tantum ut religionis ibi normam fundaret, constitui, ita tamen ut libera, et quieta, in perpetuum ab omni subjectione, et dominatione, et querela Majoris-monasterii, et aliarum personarum exactione permaneat, sicut ecclesia Christi Cantuariensis, et sicut mea dominica capella, et signum Anglicæ coronæ per quam ego regno, et successores mei reges regnum Angliæ debent obtinere.

Statuimus itaque, tam ecclesiasticæ, quam et regiæ prospectu potestatis, ut decedente abbate de Bello, omnis possessio monasterii, ubicunque fuerit, libra et integra, cum omni jure et consuetudine sua remaneat in manu et dispositione prioris, et monachorum capituli de Bello. Hoc autem ideo statuimus statutumque perpetuò servandum confirmamus, quia abbas de Bello proprios redditus non habet, sed communes cum fratribus. Qui igitur, Deo annuente canonica fratrum electione, abbas substitutus fuerit, ibidem absque venalitate omni benedicatur sicut primum abbatem Gausbertum in eodem monasterio de Bello Stigandus episcopus Ciscestre benedixit. Abbas itaque de Bello non cum suis sæcularibus consanguineis, seu quibuslibet aliis, elemosinas monasterii malè utendo, disperdat: sed pauperibus, et peregrinis, et hospitibus suscipiendis, sed fraternam curam gerat; terras censuales non ad feudum donet, nec milites, nisi in sacra veste Christi faciat, nec de possessionibus ecclesiæ quisquam teneat aliquid feudaliter absolutum, sed ad census annuum et servitium abbati et monachis debitum. In abbatis de Bello et monachorum domo et possessione, nullus intus vel extra, per hæreditatem officium teneat; sed in arbitrio abbatis et monachorum consistat de transmutandis præpositis, seu quibuslibet aliis officiariis.

in Anglia regnaturis, causa Dei commendo servandam ut eis Deus conservet æternam. Teste Petro episcopo Cestrie, Hermano episcopo Sarisberie, Willielmo comite Warrenæ, Bernardo de Novo-mercato, et Gausberto nunc ejusdem loci abbate, cum monachis suis, qui ad hanc cartam faciendam præsentēs fuerunt, apud Wintoniam.

WILLIELMUS rex Anglorum Lanfranco archiepiscopo Cantuar. et omnibus baronibus suis, Francis et Anglis, per Angliam, salutem. Sciatis me concessisse et regali auctoritate confirmasse ecclesiæ de Bello quam fundavi ex voto ob victoriam quam mihi Deus ibidem contulit cum omnibus aliis rebus quas illi concessi, ut habeat omni dominica ibidem mercatum plènarium, ita liberum et quietum ut abbas et monachi nulli inde respondeant nisi Deo. Et illi qui ibi convenerint ad mercatum nulli similiter respondeant nisi Abbati et Monachis ejusdem ecclesiæ sancti Martini. Volo igitur et firmiter præcipio quod nullus inde eis molestus sit nec eos qui ad illud mercatum venire voluerint, disturbet, super forisfacturam meam. Testibus L. archiep. NUM. XXI.

IN principio cujuslibet itineris justiciariorum domini regis itinerantium in singulis comitatibus ubi sessio itineris est, qui libertates clamare voluerint, oportet de necessitate quod ipsi primo die sessionis eorum compareant in iudicio coram ipsis ad demonstrandum in una cedula omnes libertates illas quas clamare voluerint: et nisi fecerint primo die, per justiciarios itineris statuto, noverint se esse exclusos quoad clamandum libertates illas, et omnes libertates quas clamare potuerunt esse in manu domini regis quousque predictis libertatibus fecerint gravem redemptionem. Et si contingat ipsos venire primo die itineris ad demonstrandum ea quæ pertinent ad iter prædictum tunc justiciarii portabunt breve de placito quo waranto clamant tales libertates; sicut patet inferius per processum itineris domini Henrici de Stauntone in comitatu Cantie existentis.

weyf in manerio de Wy, Kingeswode, et Dengemareis, Wacchindenne, Anglinge, et Havecherst, quæ sunt membra prædicti manerii de Wi, wreccum maris in Dengemareis, Graspeis si illic applicuerit, et hundredum de Wi, pillorium et tumberellum, unum mercatum apud Wi singulis septimanis per diem Jovis, unam feriam ibidem singulis annis per duos dies duraturam, unam feriam apud Chalflok singulis annis per duos dies duraturam, unum mercatum apud Havecherst singulis septimanis per diem Martis, unam feriam ibidem singulis annis per tres dies duraturam cum omnibus quæ ad hujusmodi ferias et mercata pertinent. Et quod in quocunque itinere justiciariorum, ubi terræ et tenementa ipsius abbatis existunt, unus ex eisdem justiciariis, qui ex discretione capitalis justiciarii commodius vacare possit, accedere debet infra libertatem suam ad omnia placita ipsum et homines suos tangentia in hujusmodi itineribus una cum senescallo ipsius abbatis placitandi et terminandi tam de illis quæ ad coronam regalem pertinent quam de aliis et habere coronatorem suum proprium in hundredo suo de Wi prædicto, et quod ipse et homines sui sint quieti de quibuslibet comitatibus, schiris, et hundredis, et ab omni consuetudine terrenæ servitutis, cum soka et saka, tol et them, geldo, scoto, et murdro, et omnibus auxiliis et operationibus castellorum parcorum et pontium, hidagio, denegeld, et omnibus placitis et querelis, lastagio, stallagio, assartis, clausuris, exercitibus, forstallis, blodwite, childwite, hamsokne, et latrocinio si acciderit, et ab omni servitute et omnibus quæcunque humana mens excogitare potest cum omnibus dignitatibus et regalibus consuetudinibus, &c.

Et abbas per attornatum suum venit. Et quoad hoc quod clamat habere curiam suam per omnia, et regiam libertatem, et consuetudinem tractandi de suis rebus vel negotiis, et justitiam per se tenendam, et etiam returnum brevium domini regis, et warennam in omnibus terris suis in comitatu isto et catalla dampnatorum et fugitivorum qui de ipso tenuerint, evasiones latronum, waif in manerio de Wi, Kyngesnode, Dengmareis, Wacchinden, Anglinge, Havecherst, quæ sunt membra prædicti manerii de Wy, et unum mercatum apud Wy singulis septimanis per diem Jovis, et unam feriam ibidem singulis annis per duos dies duraturam, et in quocunque itinere justiciariorum ubi terræ et tenementa ipsius abbatis existunt, unus ex eisdem justiciariis qui ex discretione capitalis justiciarii commodius vacare possit accedere debet infra libertatem suam ad omnia placita ipsum et homines suos tangentia in hujusmodi itineribus, una cum senescallo ipsius abbatis, placitand. et terminand. tam de illis quæ ad coronam regiam pertinent quam de aliis, &c. Dicit quod ipse clamat feriam apud Wy per tres dies duraturam, videlicet in vigilia et die et in crastino sancti Gregorii. Et dicit quod omnes illæ libertates alias in ultimo itinere Johannis de Berewik et sociorum suorum justiciariorum itinerantium in comitatu isto cuidam prædecessorum ipsius abbatis allocate fuerunt. Et de hoc ponet se super recordum rotulorum prædicti Johannis de itinere prædicto. Et de waranto clamat, &c. Postea quæsitis rotulis de eodem itinere Johannis de Berewik comperit quod illæ libertates fuerunt allocate abbati de Bello juxta tenorem cartarum regum, &c. Et similiter per inquisitiones inde captas, &c. Ideo prædictus abbas quoad libertates illas sine die, salvo jure regis, &c.

Et quoad hoc, quod si aliquis habuerit aliquam querelam versus aliquem ex hominibus ipsius abbatis, et inde placitare voluerit, ille qui rectum requirit abbatis curiam requirat, dicit quod dominus rex nunc inspecta carta domini Henrici quondam regis Angliæ progenitoris sui continente quod idem Henricus rex concessit Deo et ecclesiæ sancti Martini de Bello, ut regiam dignitatem hanc habeant, ut si aliquis habeat aliquam querelam adversus aliquem ex hominibus ipsius abbatis et inde placitare voluerit, ille qui rectum requirit abbatis curiam requirat. Et abbas vel aliquis monachorum qui præsens fuerit plenariam justitiam regia dignitate perficiat, &c. Et quo ad infongenethef, et outfongenethef, dicit quod idem dominus rex nunc, inspecta quadam carta domini Willielmi quondam regis Angliæ Conquestoris, &c. continente quod idem Willielmus rex per cartam suam concessit ipsi ecclesiæ manerium quod dicitur Wi cum membris suis, saka et soka, thol et them, infongenethef et outfongenethef, &c. Et ea ratione clamat habere furcas, &c.

Et quo ad thesaurum inventum, wreccum maris, in Dengemareis, et Graspais si illic applicuerit, forstal, blodwite, childwite, homsokne, et latrocinio si acciderit, dicit quod dominus rex nunc, inspecta quadam alia carta domini Willielmi quondam regis Angliæ Conquestoris, &c. continente quod idem Willielmus rex per cartam suam dedit præfatæ ecclesie regale manerium quod vocatur Wi, cum omnibus appendiciis suis, cum omnibus libertatibus, &c. et cum homsokne, forstal, blodwite, chilwite, et latrocinio si acciderit.

In Dengemareis vero quod est unum membrum de Wy concessit eidem ecclesie omnes maritimas consuetudines quas illic habuit cum omni wreck. Et si piscis qui graspeis vocatur illic advenerit, abbatis et monachorum sit totus. Et si in maneriis ecclesie murdræ evenerint, vel thesaurus inventus fuerit, abbatis et monachorum sit utrumque, &c.

Et quo ad hoc quod ipse et homines sui sint quieti de quibuslibet comitatibus, schiris, et hundredis, &c. dicit quod idem Rex nunc, inspecta carta domini Henrici quondam regis Angliæ progenitoris ipsius regis nunc, continente quod idem Henricus rex præcepit quod nec abbas et monachi vel homines sui ad quoslibet comitatus vel schires vel hundredas venire cogantur, sed habeant per omnia maneria sua curiam suam cum regia libertate et consuetudine, &c.

Et quo ad hoc quod ipse et homines sui sint quieti ab omni consuetudine terrenæ servitutis cum soka et saka, et thol et them, geldo, scoto, et mурdro, et omnibus auxiliis, operationibus castellorum et parcorum et pontium, hidage, denegeld, et omnibus placitis, querelis, lastagiis, stallagio, assartis, clausuris et exercitibus. Dicit quod dominus rex nunc, inspecta quadam alia carta prædicti regis Conquestoris, continente quod prædicta ecclesia cum omnibus maneriis suis et membris ad ea pertinentibus ab omni libera sit et quieta consuetudine terrenæ servitutis cum soka et saka, thol et theam, infongenethef, et geldo, scotto et mурdro, et omnibus auxiliis et operibus castellorum et parcorum et pontium, et hidag. et danegeld, et omnibus placitis et querelis, schiris, et hundredis, lastag. et stallag. et assartis et clausuris, et de exercitibus, &c.

Et quo ad acquietantiam ab omni servitute et omnibus quæcunque humana mens excogitare potest, cum omnibus dignitatibus et regalibus consuetudinibus, &c. Dicit quod idem rex nunc, inspecta quadam alia carta prædicti regis Conquestoris continente quod ecclesia prædicta libera sit et quieta imperpetuum ab omni servitute et ab omnibus quæcunque humana mens excogitare potest cum omnibus dignitatibus et consuetudinibus regalibus quas ei regali auctoritate concessit, sicut illa quæ sibi coronam tribuit, et per quam viget decus sui regiminis, &c. Omnes concessionem, donationes, et confirmationes prædictas ratas habens et gratas, eas pro se et hæredibus suis quantum in ipso est concessit et confirmavit sicut cartæ prædictæ rationabiliter testantur.

Item dominus rex mandavit justiciariis hic per aliud Breve, &c. quod cum per cartas regum, &c. concessum est prædictis abbati et conventui quod ipsi et homines sui quieti sint de schiris et hundredis, nec venire cogantur ad comitat. schiras et hundreda, &c. et quod justiciarii hic contra tenorem cartarum illarum, &c. prædictos abbatem et conventum et homines suos non molestant in aliquo seu gravent, &c. Ideo prædictus Abbas quo ad hæc sine die, salvo, &c.

Et quoad hoc quod clamat habere unum mercatum singulis septimanis apud Havecherst per diem Martis, et unam feriam ibidem singulis annis per tres dies duraturam, cum omnibus quæ ad hujusmodi feriam et mercatum pertinent. Dicit quod dominus rex nunc per aliam cartam suam concessit et confirmavit prædictis abbati et conventui de Bello pro ipso rege et hæredibus suis, quod ipsi abbas et conventus et successores sui imperpetuum habeant unum mercatum singulis septimanis per diem Martis apud manerium suum de Havekherst in com. isto, et unam feriam ibidem singulis annis per tres dies duraturam viz. in vigilia, in die, et in crastino sancti Laurentii, nisi mercatum illud et feria illa sint ad nocumentum vicinorum mercatorum et vicinarum feriarum. Et profert cartam ipsius regis nunc quæ hoc testatur, cujus data est apud Ebor. tertio die Maii, anno regni regis Edwardi nunc quinto. Et eo warranto clam. &c.

Et quo ad hoc quod clamat habere hundredum de Wi et unam feriam apud Chalfloke singulis annis per duos dies duraturam. Et dicit quod tempore donationis prædictæ prædictum hundredum et prædicta feria de Chalfloke fuerunt de appendiciis manerii prædicti. Et quo ad hoc quod clamat habere coronatorem suum proprium in hundredo suo de Wy prædicto, dicit quod prædecessores sui quondam abbates, &c. virtute cartæ prædicti W. quondam regis Angliæ Conquæstoris, et concessionum et confirmationum aliorum regum supradictorum, habuerunt coronatorem suum proprium quousque jam triginta annis elapsis tempore domini regis Edwardi patris regis nunc quod per negligentiam cujusdam prædecessoris sui coronatores de corpore comitatus intromiserunt se de officio coronatoris, &c. Per quod idem abbas nunc obtenta Carta confirmationis domini regis nunc, continente quod licet ipse seu prædecessores sui non fuerint usi aliqua seu aliquibus libertatum prædictarum, idem abbas et successores sui libertatibus illis plene gaudeant et utantur. Idem abbas fecit coronatorem suum proprium sicut prædecessores sui facere solebant, &c. Et super hoc dominus rex mandavit justiciariis suis hic Breve suum in hæc verba:

quem prædecessorem prædicti abbatis coronatorem proprium infra dictam libertatem suam de Wy virtute cartarum prædictarum habuisse, qui officium coronatoris infra eandem libertatem exercuit et non extra, tunc prædictum abbatem coronatorem suum proprium infra eandem libertatem ad ea quæ ad officium coronatoris in eadem libertate pertinent facienda absque impedimento habere permittatis, et eidem abbati libertatem illam allocari faciatis, juxta tenorem confirmationis et concessionis cartarum nostrarum prædictarum, non obstante quod coronatores nostri et progenitorum nostrorum prædictorum forinseci libertatem illam, postquam prædecessores prædicti abbatis coronatorem suum ibidem ut præmittitur habuerunt, sunt ingressi et officia sua exercuerunt in eadem. Teste meipso apud Novum Castrum super Tynam, vicesimo sexto die Maii anno regni nostri septimo.

Hundred. de Wy venit per xii. Thom. de Shorn fuit coronator in isto hundredo post ultimum iter, &c. Et adhuc est.

Et super hoc venit Attornatus archiepiscopi Cantuar. et dicit quod manerium de la Broc est de feodo et libertate ecclesiæ Christi Cantuariæ de dominicis terris prioris ejusdem ecclesiæ infra prædictum hundr. de Wy; in quo quidem manerio idem archiepiscopus habet returna omnium Brevium regis per manus vicecomitis Kantia qui pro tempore fuerit eidem archiepiscopo seu ministris suis libertatis suæ liberand. et omnia attachiamenta et imprisonmenta infra libertatem suam dicti manerii de Broke qualitercunque emergentia et omnia alia regalia et eorum judicialia, et quod prædictus archiepiscopus et prior seu ministri sui aut prædecessorum suorum nunquam sede archiepiscopatus plena existente fuerunt intendentes alicui abbati de Bello seu ministris suis aut coronatori dicti abbatis nec alicui alii nisi tantum immediate domino regi et ministris regis; quæ quidem libertate prædictus archiepiscopus et prædecessores sui a tempore quo non extat memoria hactenus usi sunt. Et dicit quod iter prædicti Rogeri de Leytone tentum fuit prædicta Sede vacante, per quod in præjudicium libertatis prædicti archiepiscopi et ecclesiæ suæ prædictæ nichil de jure fieri potuit pro prædicto abbate in præmissis, &c. Et dicit quod si prædictus abbas coronatorem proprium haberet in prædicto manerio de la Broc, hoc esset in præjudicium et læsionem libertatis ipsius archiepiscopi et ecclesiæ suæ prædictæ, scil. habendi jurisdictionem de præceptis et attachiamentis de hiis quæ ad officium coronatoris pertinent super ipsum archiepiscopum, homines et tenentes suos infra libertatem suam prædicti manerii de la Brok. Et dicit quod dominus rex mandavit justiciariis suis hic per breve suum, quod omnia negotia ipsum tangentia super libertatibus ecclesiæ suæ prædictæ atterminentur ad proximum parliamentum, &c. Et petit quod nihil fiat pro parte prædicti abbatis quo ad coronatorem proprium habendum, &c. in præjudicium ipsius archiepiscopi et læsionem libertatis suæ prædictæ, &c. Et prædictus abbas quæsitus per justiciarium si prædictum manerium de le Brok est infra præcinctum prædicti hundr. de Wy, et si clamat habere coronatorem proprium ad faciend. officium coronatoris in eodem manerio, dicit quod sic. Dicit enim quod prædictus rex Conquestor, &c. dedit ecclesiæ ipsius abbatis sancti Martini prædictæ præfatum manerium de Wy, ad quod prædictum hundredum pertinet, sicut prædictum est, cum omnibus regalibus et libertatibus supradictis; quæ quidem regalia et libertates per cartas regum prædictorum et domini regis nunc confirmata sunt, ac etiam ut prædicatur innovata; et ea ratione clamat coronatorem proprium ad faciendum officium coronatoris per totum hundr. prædictum tam in feodis alienis quam propriis. Ex quo per rotulos prædicti Rogeri de Leytone recordatum est quod prædictus Thomas de Shorn fuit coronator in prædicto hundr. de Wy, et paratus est verificare per patriam quod idem Thomas fuit coronator abbatis prædecessoris sui loci prædicti, et fecit officium coronatoris in eodem hundredo et non extra, petit quod inquiratur prout dominus rex per prædictum breve mandavit, &c. pro ipso abbate, &c.

REX omnibus ad quos, &c. salutem. Inspeximus cartam domini Edwardi quondam regis Angliæ progenitoris nostri factam in hæc verba: 'Edwardus Dei gratia rex Angliæ, dominus Hiberniæ, et dux Aquitaniæ, archiepiscopis, episcopis, abbatibus, prioribus, comitibus, baronibus, justiciariis, vicecomitibus, præpositis, ministris, et omnibus ballivis et fidelibus suis, salutem.'

Inspeximus cartam celebris memoriæ Henrici quondam regis Angliæ avi nostri in hæc verba:

'Henricus Dei gratia rex Angliæ, dominus Hiberniæ, et dux Aquitaniæ, archiepiscopis, episcopis, abbatibus, prioribus, comitibus, baronibus, justiciariis, vicecomitibus, præpositis, ministris, et omnibus ballivis et fidelibus suis salutem.'

Inspeximus cartam nostram quam dudum fieri fecimus dilectis nobis in Christo abbati et conventui de Bello in hæc verba:

'Henricus Dei gratia rex Angliæ, dominus Hiberniæ, dux Normanniæ et Aquitaniæ, et comes Andegaviæ, archiepiscopis, episcopis, abbatibus, prioribus, comitibus, baronibus, justiciariis, forestariis, vicecomitibus, præpositis, ministris, et omnibus ballivis et fidelibus suis, salutem. Sciatis nos intuitu Dei et pro anima gloriosi regis Willielmi Conquestoris Angliæ predecessoris nostri, et pro salute animæ nostræ, et animarum antecessorum et hæredum nostrorum, concessisse, et hac præsentī carta nostra confirmasse pro nobis et hæredibus nostris Deo et ecclesiæ sancti Martini de Bello, et abbati et conventui ejusdem ecclesiæ quam predictus rex ex voto fundavit, et ut suam dominicam capellam liberam esse voluit, ob victoriam ibidem sibi a Deo concessam, omnes terras, redditus, et possessiones, necnon et ecclesias et cellas cum suis pertinentiis a predecessoribus nostris, vel ab aliis fidelibus sibi collatas. Concessimus etiam et hac carta nostra confirmavimus eisdem abbati et conventui quod omnes homines sui liberi sint et quieti ab omni theolonio, et mercata sua per totum regnum nostrum ubique absque theolonio faciant, sicut carta domini Henrici regis avi nostri, quam iidem abbas et conventus inde tenent, testatur. Et quod ipsi et eorum successores imperpetuum habeant amerciamēta omnium hominum suorum coram quibuscumque justiciariis, vicecomitibus, aut aliis ballivis nostris amerciati fuerint. Et quod habeant catalla fugitivorum et suspensorum, et quorumcumque dampnatorum qui de ipsis tenuerint; et etiam catalla forinsecorum qui infra libertatem ipsorum judicati fuerint, quæ quidem catalla infra libertatem ipsorum cum ipsis malefactoribus inventa fuerint. Et quod habeant pecuniam de hominibus suis quæ ad murdrum pertinet. Et quod cedentibus, vel decedentibus abbatibus ejusdem loci, ipsi monachi teneant custodiam abbatie suæ et omnium terrarum et tenementorum ad ipsam pertinentium, et liberam administrationem de omnibus rebus et possessionibus ad eandem abbatiam pertinentibus. Et quod abbatem sibi præficiant de se ipsis, secundum formam electionum de prælati quæ est in regno nostro, sine impedimento et contradictione nostri et hæredum nostrorum, et ballivorum nostrorum, petita tamen a nobis et hæredibus nostris licentia eligendi, et optenta, et facta electione assensu nostro requisito et optento. Omnes etiam donationes, libertates, quietantias, et consuetudines per cartas predecessorum nostrorum regum Angliæ et aliorum fidelium eis concessas, cum omnibus predictis præsentī carta nostra predictis abbati et conventui et cellis suis regali auctoritate concedimus et confirmamus, sicut predictæ cartæ plenius testantur. Quare volumus et firmiter præcipimus pro nobis et hæredibus nostris quod predicti abbas et conventus et eorum successores imperpetuum habeant et teneant omnes predictas donationes et concessiones, libertates, quietantias, et consuetudines, bene et in pace, libere, quiete, et integre, cum predicta custodia et administratione et electione, et cum omnibus aliis predictis, sicut predictum est. Et prohibemus super forisfacturam nostram, ne aliquis justiciarius, vicecomes, constabularius, forestarius, viridarius, aut aliqui alii ballivi nostri, vel eorum ministri in aliquo se intromittant contra hanc concessionem nostram, de terris, redditibus, et possessionibus vel hominibus predictorum abbatis et conventus, quia ipsos et homines suos, terras, res, redditus, et omnes possessiones suas in specialem protectionem et defensionem nostram suscepimus. Hiis testibus, Petro de Sabaudia, Johanne Maunsel præposito, Benerto Magro, Willielmo de Kilkenny archidiacono Coventrensi, Philippo Lovel, Bertino de Crioll, Johanne de Grey, Johanne de Lexinton, Roberto Waterand, Henrico de Wengham, Stephano Banzan, Nicholao de Sancto Mauro, Willielmo Gernon, et aliis. Dat. per manum nostram apud Westmonasterium decimo die Julii, anno regni nostri tricesimo septimo.

'Is erat tenor sub priore sigillo nostro, quo tunc utebamur, quod quia postmodum mutatum est, cartam prædictam impressione sigilli nostri, quo nunc utimur, duximus consignandam. Nos autem predictas donationes, concessiones, libertates, et quietantias ratas habentes et gratas, et eisdem abbati et conventui gratiam facere volentes specialem, concedimus eis quod licet ipsi aliquibus libertatibus et quietantiis contentis in cartis suis quibuscunque, eis a predecessoribus nostris regibus Angliæ et nobis concessis, minus plene hucusque usi fuerint, eisdem libertatibus et quietantiis decenter utantur sine contradictione vel impedimento nostri, et hæredum nostrorum, vicecomitum seu ballivorum nostrorum quorumcumque. Concessimus etiam eisdem abbati et conventui quod habeant et percipiant omnia amerciamēta sua et hominum suorum, et fines et redemptiones eorundem hominum suorum ad nos vel hæredes nostros rationes cujuscunque delicti pertinentium. Salvis nobis et hæredibus nostris finibus quos eundem abbatem et successores suos abbates loci predicti nobiscum facere contingat. Et quod iidem abbas et conventus teneant returnum omnium brevium nostrorum tam de summonitione scaccarii nostri, quam de aliis, libertatem suam predictam contingentibus, et quod respondeant ad idem scaccarium de omnibus delictis, summonitionibus, et demandis eandem libertatem tangentibus. Ita quod nullus vicecomes, seu alius ballivus vel minister noster ingrediatur terras aut tenementa eorundem abbatis et conventus, ad aliquas districtiones, summonitiones, aut alia faciēda quæ ad officium eorum pertineant, nisi per defectum predicti abbatis vel ballivorum suorum. Ita tamen quod idem abbas de finibus quos nobiscum fecerit nobis respondeat ad scaccarium nostrum. Et si aliquo casu contingente hujusmodi fines, amerciamēta, et redemptiones hominum suorum predictorum per ballivos nostros vel hæredum nostrorum levare contigerit, volumus et concedimus pro nobis et hæredibus nostris, quod hujusmodi amerciamēta, fines et redemptiones per ballivos nostros vel hæredum nostrorum collecta seu recepta, sicut predictum est, eisdem abbati et conventui et successoribus suis per visum thesaurarii nostri, qui pro tempore fuerit, sine diminutione aliqua restituantur. Priory of Brecon, or Brecknock,

A Cell to Battle Abbey.

ERNARD de Novo Mercato, or Newmarch, a Norman baron,^a by the advice of Roger his confessor, a monk of Battle, built, without the walls of Brecknock Castle, in the time of Henry I. a priory for six Benedictine monks; which he liberally endowed, dedicated it to St. John the Evangelist, and made it subordinate to Battle abbey. The following were the lands and possessions appropriated to this priory at its first foundation: the churches, lands, and tithes of Bodenham and Brunshope in Herefordshire, Pattingham in Staffordshire, and Har-dington in Somersetshire; the manor of Berrington in Herefordshire, expressly said to have been bestowed by Agnes the wife of Bernard; Llanywern, Talgarth, Llangorse, and a portion of tithes in Llansaintfread in Brecknockshire; the lordship of Caernoys (Caerbannau), which in the charter of Battle abbey is called the old town, and one carucate of land adjoining a mill upon the Usk, and two thirds of another upon the river Hondde; the chapel within the walls of Brecknock castle; lands called Costinio, supposed to be Llangasty tâl y llyn near Brecknock mere; lands near Llyfni; and the tithes of Hay; beside other lands and domains given by the "homines," the followers or homagers of Bernard. Picard gave three carucates of land, with the tithe of all his corn and animals in Wales; Richard, called Cenomannicus, and Harold, gave a carucate each; Walter de Cropus his tithe in Lansefred, with the church of Clibery; Wlgerius certain tithes in Wales; Walter de Line-

^a Jones, in his History of Brecknockshire, vol. i. p. 91, states the reduction of that county by Bernard de Newmarch to have taken place, according to some accounts, in 1092, according to others, earlier. Tanner merely says he was one of those Norman lords, who, being called in to help Jestin against Prince Rhesus, obtained the country for themselves. He was a friend and follower of K. William the Conqueror, though not, as the Welsh accounts would make him, his uterine brother. He died in the reign of Henry the First, and was buried, according to Leland, Itin. vol. iv. p. 52, in the cloister of the cathedral church of Gloucester; where, upon the wall of the chapter-house, was this inscription, "Hic jacet Bernardus de Novo Mercatu:" though Jones says, the inhabitants of Brecknock used to show his monument in the priory church. Hist. Breckn. ut supra, p. 97. Dugdale has given an extract from a Cottonian manuscript relating to the succession of the lords of Brecknock, from Bernard de Newmarch to Humphrey de Bohun in the thirteenth century. See the App. of Instr. Num. I.

halle, Roger de Bachevilla, William Fitz Girold, and Robert de Eurois a burgess each; and Richard Fitz Ralph gave the land of Firmin and of Ralph Cornutus.^a

The principal management of the new foundation was given to one WALTER, an intimate friend of Roger, and a brother monk of Battle abbey, who, upon its completion, was made prior, and charged with the annual payment of twenty shillings, as a token of obedience to the parent Monastery.

Roger earl of Hereford and lord of Brecknock, son of Milo Fitzwalter, succeeded to his father's possessions in 1143 or 1144. He augmented the privileges and revenues of the monks of Brecknock by no fewer than five charters. Of these the four first will be found in the Appendix of Instruments.

By the first charter he granted to the prior and convent the privilege of holding courts. He also granted them the land of St. Paulinus upon the mere (now called Llan-gorse pool), with the liberty of fishing there three days in the week, and every day during the seasons of Lent and Advent. He gave them the tithes of all his colts, calves, lambs, cheese, wool, and flax, and of all things titheable within the forests throughout the whole lordship of Brecknock, and the tithes of whatever might be provided for consumption within his demesne, whether he should be resident or absent: the tithe of his larder at Haye; the tithe of cattle arising from the free gift of the Welshmen; the tithe of plunder taken in war from his enemies; and commonage throughout the territory of Brecknock. Lastly, he confirmed and enlarged the charter of his grandfather, Bernard de Newmarch.^b

By the second, he confirmed the full, free, and peaceable jurisdiction of the monks over all the lands and possessions of their tenants. He also granted them the tithes of all bread and drink which should be expended in his castle of Brecknock, and in all other his demesnes throughout the lordship; or, in lieu thereof (to guard against the peculation or neglect of servants), the tithes of all his corn at the doors of his grange at the castle of Brecknock, at Talgarth, and Haye; likewise of all pulse, which, after first tithing, should be discharged from the claims of other churches to which they had been before granted;^c and should any lands or manors out of the lordship of Brecknock, by any event, come into his hands, he granted them the like privileges thereon. He also gave the monks by this charter the tithes of all tolls arising from the carriage of goods from his lordships in England to his territories in Wales; confirmed to them the churches of Talgarth, Mara (or Llan-gorse) Llanigon, Llangelen (perhaps Llanellieu), and Cathedin, in Wales, as well as the English churches mentioned in the charter of Bernard de Newmarch. He gave them the tithes of the profits of all his pleas, tolls, gifts, and returns issuing from Brecknock, and of all goods and chattels which he had gained in Wales: and renewed and confirmed to them the rights of fishing and free pasturage, as mentioned in the former charter.^d

By the third charter he again confirmed to the monks their right of holding courts; and granted them a certain ruined city, or rather the site of a city, called Carneys, with its dependencies, extending from Aberescir as far as the brook of Cilieni, and Llangwern as far as Maeslydan. He also gave them all the mills within the parish of Brecknock, with the entire tolls thereof, and all the customs, liberties, and appurtenances belonging thereto; prohibiting the erection of any other mill within the parish, excepting by the monks alone. He also granted them certain lands called Trewalkin and Penllanavel; concluding with a recital and renewal of his former grants.^e
